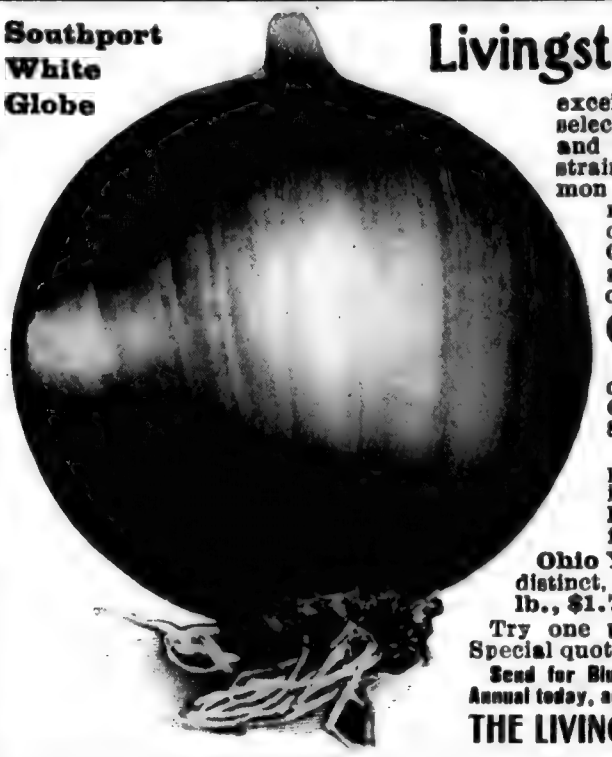
This brings up a point which I had never heard of before. I do not know how much hydrocyanic gas the mushrooms would stand without injury, but one thing I am positive of is, that no harm could come from eating the mushrooms after the house had been fumigated. I doubt much whether the gas would have any effect on the mushrooms unless too strong for plants, and I feel sure that even if it was strong enough to injure them the papers would protect them, especially if the newspapers were carefully laid over them.



Perhaps some reader can give some information relative to mushrooms being affected by the gas. H. G.

PROPAGATING RHUBARB.

How is rhubarb generally propagated—by seeds or divisions? I want to raise plants to sell. O. F. S.

Rhubarb is generally propagated by division of the clumps, which are quite prolific. By lifting the clumps, dividing them and resetting the field with the old crowns, large numbers of young ones can be obtained for sale or for enlarging the field. H. G.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

With an unusual number of funerals, receptions, weddings and graduations, and several dark, rainy days, last week gave the florists a good call to meet the supply, especially on carnations. In consequence, on January 29 good carnations were at a premium. This dearth was made the more conspicuous because of the call for this particular flower on account of McKinley day. In recognition of this occasion a call was made for 500 Beacons for the dinner of the Economic and Conservative clubs, Secretary of the Interior Richard A. Ballinger being the principal speaker.

Bulbous stock has furnished an acceptable acquisition to the regular stock and daffodils, narcissi, tulips and hyacinths have helped out to a considerable extent in filling funeral orders. In connection with funeral pieces the recurring favor of callas is very noticeable, and whereas, for a couple of years past no callas have been used for this purpose, they are now in general, constant and increasing demand.

Various Notes.

In the annual report which George H. Webb, commissioner of industrial statistics of Rhode Island, submitted to the general assembly last week, considerable space is devoted to the consideration of horticultural establishments in this state. He reports that there are 137 horticultural establishments that are not located on farms, but which return more than $300 a year to their proprietors. The number of square feet of land under glass is given as 1,233,320. The value of the products of these establishments for 1908 amounted to $423,176. The average number of wage earners employed is given as 232, not considering a proprietor an employee in "one man establishments." Wages paid amounted to $97,216, or twenty-three per cent of the total amount of sales. The average amount of sales per establishment is shown to be $3,088.

The Newport Horticultural Society, at its regular meeting January 25, with President James Robertson in the chair, adopted a new policy for making the meetings more interesting and instructive. A committee of five members was appointed, each of whom is to present a paper upon a different phase of a general subject. If this proves practicable and effective, similar committees will be appointed for each meeting. At the meeting February 8 the subject will be "Exhibitions," and the assignments have been as follows: "Exhibitions, Their Utility and Mission," President James Robertson; "Preparing for the Exhibition," by John P. Hammond; "Staging and Arranging the Exhibits," by Bruce Butterton; "Judging," by Richard Gardner; "How to Secure Attendance of the Public at the Exhibition," by John Forbes. The society has under discussion plans for the annual ladies' night.

Eugene A. Appleton, of William Appleton & Sons, was married Wednesday, January 26, to Miss Margaret Hehir. Mr. and Mrs. Appleton are taking a trip to Boston, Albany, New York, Washington and Baltimore, and will be at home after March 1 at 272 Knight street, Providence.

Walter Nichols has 8,000 plants of Enchantress in his houses at Hampden Meadows that are at the height of the crop.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
Officers for 1909-10: Pres., F. H. Stannard, Ottawa, Kan.; Vice-Pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-fifth annual meeting, Denver, June, 1910.

THERE promises to be an exceptionally good demand for dormant roses this spring.

THE nursery of Arthur Bryant & Son, Princeton, Ill., is now in its sixty-fifth year.

THOSE Indiana fellows insist that anyone who wants cherry can be nicely accommodated.

THE European nurserymen are figuring that their American trade for 1910 will make a new record.

PLUMS are possibly the only class of nursery stock that won't clean up at good prices this spring.

HAVE prices on the general line of nursery stock advanced in proportion to the increase in the cost of production?

AT the annual meeting of the Georgia State Horticultural Society, held at Sparta January 25 to 28, P. J. Berckmans was again reëlected president.

THE privet specialists are looking forward to a heavy spring business, partly because a large quantity of privet hedge has been winter-killed this season.

F. W. WATSON, Topeka, Kan., estimates that anywhere from twenty to forty million apple seedlings are required in this country each year, but they are grown by less than a dozen firms.

THE Virginia Wholesale Nurseries have been incorporated at Blacksburg, Va., with the following officers: President, J. H. Broce; secretary and treasurer, M. F. Slusser. W. O. Frith is one of the incorporators. Capital: Maximum, $50,000; minimum, $3,000.

To hear the law-makers tell it, they and their enactments alone stand between this country and the demnition bow-wows. But from the nurseryman's standpoint this is no longer the land of the free—we haven't anything on anybody when it comes to that. We've too many laws.

SHRUBS FOR FRONT OF VERANDA

Can you inform me as to what shrubs could be used in front of a veranda, giving a sloping effect, the back row to be about three and a half to four feet high and two varieties to be used in single rows? They do not necessarily have to be blooming shrubs, but something that will give a neat, attractive appearance throughout the summer. The house is a frame dwelling, facing the west and white in color. It is located in the city. R. H. M.

You do not state whether you wish evergreen or deciduous shrubs. If the former, I would suggest using Retinospora plumosa and R. plumosa aurea. You could get one variety somewhat taller than the other. Personally, I would prefer using one variety only, in which case the green one would be my choice. If you desire a deciduous shrub, there is nothing better than Berberis Thunbergii, thoroughly hardy and beautiful both in winter and summer. I would not plant anything with the berberis. C.

HYDRANGEA OTAKSA.

Can you tell me the best way to grow Hydrangea Otaksa plants with from ten to twenty flowers, from cuttings?
C. M.

To secure plants carrying the number of heads desired, root the cuttings as soon as possible. These can either be grown along in pots all summer or planted outdoors in May, where they can be well cultivated and watered during dry weather. If kept in pots, they should be plunged in a bed of ashes. The plants should occupy 6-inch to 7-inch pots before fall, while the outdoor ones should be lifted with a nice ball early in October and placed in somewhat similar sized pots. These plants should carry all the way from three or four to six or eight heads each the following season, but will not give the size of plants you desire until the following year.

After flowering, plant them outdoors again. Do any needful pruning before so doing, to make them shapely. In fall these can be put in 10-inch to 12-inch pots, or small tubs, and will the following season carry the desired number of heads. If you are anxious to get plant carrying ten to twenty heads next yea you can do so by following a plan ofte adopted, viz.: Place the plants in smal tubs, two or three plants in each tub Each of these plants should give four o five heads if well grown.

Remember that you must propagate early to secure these strong plants, at all times treat them liberally with water and, when in pots, feed in addition with liquid manure. C. W.

PACIFIC COAST.

ROMANS IN FORTY-TWO DAYS.

We note that C. W., under the head of "Romans for Easter," in the Review of January 6, states that December 27 is late for putting Roman hyacinths in the soil. That statement, no doubt, is meant to apply especially to the northern and Atlantic states. We find that in this Los Angeles climate, with hot water heat and a temperature of 60 degrees at night, if we pot and cover the bulbs November 9 and remove them to the greenhouse by December 1, twenty-five per cent will be in bloom by December 18 and the balance for Christmas delivery.

This means forty-two days from potting to flower. However, if not pressed for time, forty days under cover will give fuller and more numerous blooms.

This is taken from records kept by us during the last four years. We grow tulips, Roman and Dutch hyacinths and Easter lilies for the wholesale trade—about 12,000 bulbs this year.

Hill Crest Nursery.

OVERFORCED PLANTS.

There has been a great deal of dissatisfaction among the retail store men against the plant growers in and around San Francisco, on account of the overforced condition of ferns and palms sent to them. This was probably more noticeable last Christmas than at any other time, and, from appearances, there is good reason for the complaint.

The desire to grow stock quickly seems to be carried to an excessive degree, and that no steps are taken to properly harden it afterward is to be deplored, as a florist's store or show window is not an ideal situation for tender ferns under any consideration, and when they have been overforced they become dead stock in a few days. On the other hand, when they are sold while yet presentable they invariably encounter conditions too different from those under which they were forced, and a most dissatisfied customer is the result, whom the poor retailer has to make an effort to pacify, to say nothing of pleasing.

The desire to grow the largest possible branches in the least possible time is to blame for this condition, and the fact that it seems never to be taken into consideration whether the storekeeper will be able to retain his customer or not is a pertinent one and should be met in a reasonable way by the grower. G.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Business for the last fortnight has shown some improvement. The demand for the better grade of stock is becoming more general and in time second grade stock will have to be sacrificed. A few days of sunshine show an improvement in all stock. Carnations are becoming more plentiful, but not an oversupply, red in particular being in demand on account of the high school graduates. Roses are scarce, in fact almost unobtainable. Paper Whites and Romans are plentiful, but are principally used as funeral flowers. Freesia has also made its appearance and is a welcome visitor. Valley is becoming more plentiful and of fine quality, with a daily clean-up. Cattleyas and Odontoglossum grande are to be had in limited numbers, while greens of all kinds are scarce. California smilax is used considerably in all decorations of note. Pussy willows are displayed in the windows with stunning effects.

The annual automobile show at the Armory was an occasion of demand and considerable entertaining. The hall was effectively decorated, urns of flowering plants being arranged throughout.

The excessively cold and damp season has made a big gap in the wood pile and in some cases the usual supply has been exhausted. Oil will be experimented with another season, in the endeavor to find a cheaper fuel.

Various Notes.

J. J. Karins, representing Henry A. Dreer, of Philadelphia, dropped in on the trade unheralded and expresses satisfaction with the volume of business, under adverse climatical conditions.

Calendar men are in the field by the score, and are almost considered a nuisance.

The sympathy of the trade is extended James Forbes, on the recent death of his sister, Miss M. Forbes.

Alex Klckner, of Wauwatosa, Wis., was a week-end caller and reports business in bulbous stock satisfactory.

W. E. Asplin, representing the King Construction Co., of North Tonawanda, N. Y., says that prospects for greenhouse building were never better, as evidenced by advance orders.

The Metzger-Fleischner wedding at the Portland hotel was the banner decoration of the season and was a credit to J. Boyce, of Martin & Forbes. The parlors and dining-room were effectively arranged throughout with smilax, mums, roses and lilies. Orchids were used extensively in the bouquets. E. R. C.

little outside stock that we have to depend almost entirely on hothouse flowers. Usually at this season of the year we have quantities of narcissi, daffodils, wild flowers and fruit blossoms, but the continued frosty spell has kept everything backward. Even violets, which under ordinary conditions fill in a big gap at this time, have been at a premium and the Italian growers have made the bunches so small that retailers have had hard work to handle them at any profit.

Carnations are slightly advanced in price from last week and roses have held their own. Of the former, $4 to $5 per hundred is the ruling rate to the stores, with a limited stock to pick from. Valley, Roman hyacinths and freesias have been in extra demand, owing to the scarceness of stock, and several of the yellow cupped species of narcissi, which under ordinary conditions cannot be disposed of at any price, have suddenly become quite marketable. Early daffodils show a slight drop, but are still costing the retailers from $2.50 to $3 per hundred. Wild maidenhair, although not yet of first quality, is being used in large quantities in the place of the tame variety, which plainly shows the effects of being overworked during the holiday season.

Business continues to be fair.

Various Notes.

Sixty-five members of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society sat down to their first annual banquet in the banquet room of the Palace hotel on Saturday evening, January 22. V. Matraia, president of the society, acted as toastmaster. Past-President H. Plath gave a brief history of the society since its inception eight years ago, and reported that it is now in a flourishing condition. As a member of the Society of American Florists, he said he would endeavor to have that body hold its annual convention here in 1915, at the time of San Francisco's proposed exposition. Other speakers were: D. MacRorie, on "Orchids"; John R. Atkinson, on "Plant Life"; Chas. Shellgrain, on "The Retail Florist," and E. W. McLellan, on "American Beauties."

The Department of Public Parks of Oakland has just completed a propagating house at a cost of $2,000, erected under the supervision of Malcolm Lamond, city gardener.

E. W. McLellan & Co., of Burlingame, Cal., are cutting heavily of Brides, Maids and Liberties at this time. Their stock is

YOU cannot afford, if you grow Carnations and are looking for larger profits on your present capital, not to investigate Dorothy Gordon CAREFULLY before you complete your season's arrangements—for Dorothy Gordon has the other commercial Carnations excelled at every point, and it's simply a matter of justice to yourself to give it at least a fair trial this year.

We have asked our friends to visit our plant and see it growing, and a great many have done so. Have YOU? If not, we urge you to come now, for you will certainly be convinced, as others have been, after seeing it in our houses.

Carnation Dorothy Gordon

Possesses all the points that you, a progressive grower, desire in the flowers you supply your trade. Large size (3 inches or more in diameter) fine, uniform color (a shade darker than Pink Enchantress), long, stiff stems, strong constitution and excellent keeping qualities, profusion of bloom—all these are big, important qualities in favor of our new Carnation—and best of all is the fact that its buds command a price 50 per cent higher than those of the ordinary commercial sorts.

If you want any Dorothy Gordon this year, though, you'll need to get in your reservation at once, as our stock of rooted cuttings is being taken rapidly. Orders will be filled in strict rotation at these popular prices: $10 per 100; $75 per 1000.

Give us a chance to show what Dorothy Gordon will do. Come to Wyncote if you can; if not, write for further particulars—we'll gladly answer questions.

ADMIRATION

This carnation we offer to the trade as being one of the finest Carnations of any color that we know of up to date. Being a beautiful shade of pink, somewhat lighter than Winona, having that beautiful satin finish, always showing up well either in natural or artificial light. Plants benched in August are now coming into full crop, carrying from 10 to 20 buds. We have been cutting since September 10th. As a money maker you will find no equal.

The size of the flower is 3 to 3½ inches, excellent form, well built up in the center, with the petals so arranged as to make it stand the general requirements of a good fancy commercial variety. A grand keeper and shipper.

The habit is ideal, upright with no surplus grass and every shoot going into flower. Its freedom and earliness make it nearly the ideal carnation. The calyx is very tough and seldom bursts. Can be handled with great success either from the field or grown inside all summer. No one has to be an expert to handle this variety. It scored 86 points at the American Carnation Society meeting at Indianapolis, January 27 to 28, 1909.

Price, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.
250 at 1000 rate.

Send for catalogue of all other new and standard varieties of carnations. We are always pleased to have visitors come and inspect our stock and varieties.

The Market.

All in all, there was a change for the better to report for last week. Stock in all lines came in more steadily and freely than the week previous, and with the supply came a steady demand which kept things moving nicely and gave the market a good tone. The latter part of the week found a brisk demand for roses, Beauties and carnations. Romans, Paper Whites, tulips and the like also came in in larger quantities and valley and violets moved well. Saturday, January 29, roses and Beauties were indeed a scarce article, good money failing to produce them, and even the large neighboring markets could give no relief. Locally, McKinley day was really not much to speak of. The receipts of carnations on that day were heavy, and nearly all the retailers bought a few extra ones, and the same can be said of the shipping orders; consequently all the stock was cleaned out before night. Although pink of the Lawson shade was the original McKinley day color, red was the color called for locally.

Various Notes.

Currie Bros. say that their long suit last week was funeral work, there being several large funerals out of town.

The Edlefsen-Leidiger Co. reports a little something doing all the time. They complained of the rose shortage last Saturday, which caused them endless trouble.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. is now cutting a nice daily lot of Easter lilies and lily of the valley.

While there are small lots of blooming plants coming in these days, the C. C. Pollworth Co. says that the weather conditions greatly regulate their sales, the cold weather practically causing this branch of their business to cease completely.

The Wisconsin Floral Co., located in the Caswell building, reports lively sales of carnations, both single and in quantity, for McKinley day, and says that business for the whole week was quite satisfactory.

After laboring for some time under the impression that the American Carnation Society would hold its next convention in Milwaukee, the local boys were greatly surprised and disappointed to know that the 1911 convention will be held in Boston. Our delegation to the Pittsburg convention returned Sunday, January 30.

Christ Lund, Wausau, Wis., visited us last week. E. O.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Trade conditions have not changed much since last report. Roses are still scarce, but the shortage is not felt much, as there are plenty of other flowers. Carnations, lilies, narcissi and tulips are coming in abundance, giving more variety than at any time this winter.

Among the city retailers business was quiet, convention week giving them time to look around.

Various Notes.

The finance committee for the convention met January 31 and found they had not spent nearly all their money. It was suggested that a fund be started with the balance, the interest of which would pay for an annual prize for the future conventions.

Congratulations are being handed to James Crall. It is a boy.

The last of the convention visitors have departed.

John Reimels, Woodhaven, N. Y., who was taken suddenly ill last Wednesday and sent to the hospital, was able to leave for home Saturday noon in pretty fair shape.

Our convention visitors have said so many nice things and some of our committeemen are so puffed up that I hate to think what would happen if anyone should stick a pin in them.

Wm. Falconer and daughter left Wednesday, February 2, for a month in Florida. They will stop in Washington, Richmond and several other places long enough to say "How do?" to some old friends.

About 100 people took advantage of the trip to Bakerstown Friday, January 28, to visit the greenhouses of the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. Mr. Burki met the party with sleds at the cars. After seeing what was to be seen and having a lunch, the party returned to the hotel.

Hoo-Hoo.

MONTPELIER, VT.—The stock in Fred Benway's greenhouse, on Kent street, was destroyed by the intense cold on Sunday morning, January 16.

FLORIST PETUNIAS

Every florist having a design trade has felt the difficulty of getting suitable flowers for the work during hot weather, when roses and carnations are barely presentable. After years of selection we have found three varieties of Double Petunias, No. 1, Pure White; No. 2, Clear Shining Pink; No. 3, Pure Lavender, which have made us more money for the labor expended than anything we have ever handled. The flowers are large, 4¼ to 6 inches in diameter, and as a keeper during hot weather beats anything we have ever tried, while the enormous quantity of blooms they produce makes the cost practically nothing. We find indoor culture suits them best. Price, 2-inch pot plants, $1.50 per doz.; one dozen of each of the three varieties for $4.00.

MANCHESTER, MASS.

Charles H. Totty was the speaker at the meeting of the North Shore Horticultural Society, January 21. The members turned out in large numbers to hear so famous a specialist in chrysanthemum culture. The lecture was listened to with close attention and many points were discussed thoroughly in the debate which followed.

Although the single and semi-double chrysanthemums have gained enormously in popular favor among residents of Boston and the North Shore, there is no wane in the popularity of the big blooms, and Mr. Totty's remarks on this point were closely followed.

The society, which is now incorporated and has a substantial balance in the treasury, made preparations to hold its annual banquet in the Town hall, February 3. An attractive menu, entertainment and dance were arranged for and the tickets sold readily, this being one of the best social gatherings of the year on the North Shore. Every year an effort is made to surpass the previous year's banquet, and as the seating accommodation is limited to 200 persons, the tickets are eagerly snapped up.

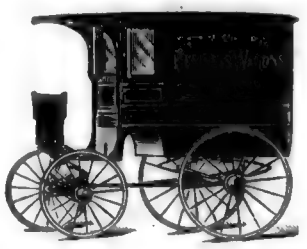
WHITE WORMS IN BENCH.

Kindly inform us what we can do to get rid of the small white worms that are appearing in the sand in our propagating bench. They work on the ends of the cuttings, and in the case of geraniums the cuttings gradually get black spots that when scraped appear to be rotten places. The sand is new, being used for the first time with this batch, and when put in it was remarkable how clean it was. Would applications of lime water do the work? F. P. F. C.

Provided you have no cuttings in the bench, you could kill the worms either by sterilizing with steam or pouring boiling water over the bed. If you can take out any cuttings which you may have in the sand, this would prove effective. If you do not want to go to the trouble of removing the cuttings, procure a can of carbon bisulphide and bore holes twelve inches apart each way, pouring in each half a teaspoonful and immediately covering the hole. If you go over the whole bench in this way, you can destroy all worms and larvæ. Before applying it, soak the sand well with water. The carbon being of an explosive nature, do not use any naked light near it. Its use will not injure any of the cuttings in the least. For plants in benches it can also be used in a similar manner with perfect safety. I am afraid the use of lime water, while it would destroy ordinary earthworms, would not clean out the variety which is troubling you. C. W.

ANTS IN GROUND BENCH.

I have a ground bench with brick sides. There are literally thousands of ants that live among the bricks, where it is impossible to get at them. They have spread all over the house and are doing much damage. We have used air-slaked lime and other remedies, but we cannot get rid of the ants. Can you tell us how we can exterminate them? R. M. M.



Secure some potassium cyanide and break it up fine. Handle with care, as it is a deadly poison. Mix this in powdered sugar and lay about the haunts of the ants. They will eat this greedily and thousands will be destroyed. Do not damp the mixture and be sure to keep birds and animals out of the house where it is being laid. You can lay baits of various kinds to attract the ants and then pour boiling water over them. We find the poison, however, the most effective. If a little carbon bisulphide is poured among the bricks here and there, the objectionable smell and fumes will drive away the ants. W. C.

NITRATE OF SODA FOR LILIES.

On page 25 of the Review for January 6 you recommend the use of nitrate of soda for Easter lilies that are a little behind. Will you please tell me how to use it? M. O.

A teaspoonful of nitrate of soda to a three-gallon can of water is sufficiently strong. Use it once in five or six days, but only on plants which have the pots well filled with active roots. It will do more harm than good to any which are poorly rooted. C.

HADLEY, MASS.

The Montgomery Co., the new corporation which has been referred to at different times in the Review, has been pushing the work of construction energetically all winter, in spite of the unfavorable weather, in order to be ready for the business of rose growing in the spring. The company purchased fifty acres of land in the eastern part of town, along which extends the state highway and the Amherst line of the Connecticut Valley street railway company. The first section of the greenhouse range will be erected by the King Construction Co. and will cover about an acre of ground. The company will grow roses for the wholesale markets of the larger cities, but will also supply whatever local demand there may be in the Connecticut valley.

Alexander Montgomery, president of the company, is a pioneer in the industry. He has made a life study of rose culture in all its forms, and is widely known as a skillful cultivator and an authority in all that pertains to the successful management of rose growing. He has built up the well-known Waban Rose Conservatories at Natick from a small beginning, until today they are among the largest and best equipped in the country. In everything that has to do with the science of rose culture he is a recognized leader. Robert J. Montgomery, secretary and treasurer of the company, was trained in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology for the profession of chemistry and has had extended experience. In business he has had valuable training through his association with a large manufacturing concern. A. W. Montgomery, general manager, is a graduate of the Massachusetts Agricultural College and has devoted much time to study of rose growing and observation of methods in various parts of the country. He has experimented considerably in the production of new and improved varieties by methods of forcing.

Greenhouse Heating.

PIPING IN WYOMING.

I am satisfied that I could build a greenhouse by following instructions I find in back numbers of the Review. I followed your instructions in the one I built, 16x100, and it is a success. Now I want to build one for bedding plants and carnations. It will be 23x100, with a three-quarter span to the south. It will be built against a sloping hill on the north side, and will be nicely protected. Will one flow pipe feed eleven 2-inch returns? Should I put the returns under the beds or on the side? Will eleven returns be enough? The flow will come from a different opening in the boiler than the one that feeds my vegetable house. Should I put the flow pipe underground or overhead? I use hot water heat. May I not have the highest point in the system at the boiler, using an overhead flow, the downhill system and one expansion tank for both houses? The boiler is between the houses. The required temperature is 53 to 55 degrees. The outside temperature sometimes falls to 25 degrees below zero.

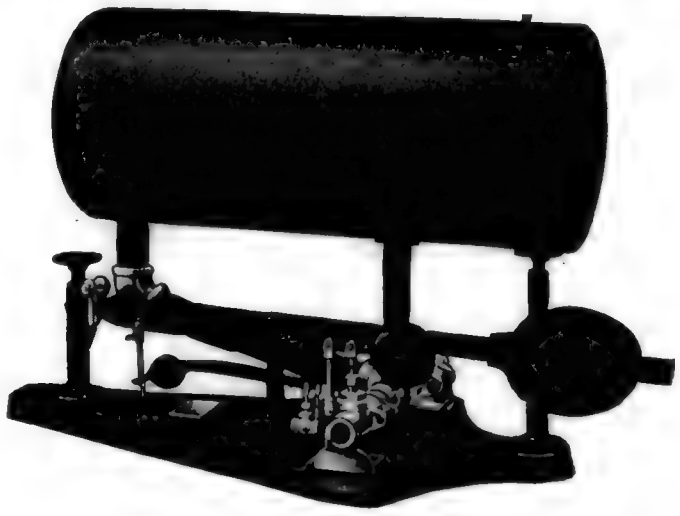
What length should the rafters be on each side for a three-quarter span, and what would be the right pitch?

E. W. O.

While it would be possible to supply eleven 2-inch returns by means of one 3-inch flow pipe, it will be better to put in three 2½-inch flows, one of which can be upon each wall near the plate, and the other either under the purlin or two feet below the ridge. Under the severe conditions mentioned, it will be safer to use twelve 2-inch return pipes, instead of eleven, as suggested. If the sashbars on the south side are fifteen feet and those on the north side of the house are ten feet, it will give about the right pitch.

The best results can be obtained when the downhill system of piping is used, and one expansion tank will answer for both houses, provided it is connected at the highest point and the piping is such as to permit the air to escape from the system through the pipe which leads to the expansion tank.

WRONG SYSTEM OF RETURNS.



I am taking charge of a range of new houses in southwestern Pennsylvania, and we expect to add to the range in the spring. As the heating system, which was installed by a local plumber, is unsatisfactory, I should like to get your opinion. There are two houses, 23x100, running east and west, with a hot water boiler in a deep pit. A 4-inch pipe rises to the highest point, over the boiler, and from there extends to the far end, where it branches to two 3-inch returns, one under each side bench, running back to the boiler. There are six cast-iron wall radiators, 2½x11 feet, rising at intervals from this 3-inch return on each side. The return, being a continuous flow, gets hot, but it requires from three to four hours to heat up the radiators. The boiler is a 5-section Ideal, and the firebox is 3x3¼ feet. J. W. O.

The description given of the piping is not sufficiently definite to show just what the trouble is or to indicate the heating surface of the radiators. While it would not ordinarily be considered an ideal way to heat the houses, there is no reason why the water should not circulate in the radiators, provided the connecting pipes are properly put in and they are high enough above the boiler to provide for a free circulation. I infer that the radiators are but little above the level of the 3-inch return pipes, and if these returns have direct connection with the boiler it is not strange that the circulation in the radiators is slow. The correct way to arrange the piping would be to connect each of the radiators with the 3-inch main, using a 2-inch pipe if they furnish more than 150 square feet of radiating surface. There should be no direct connection of these main returns with the boiler, but there should be another return pipe on each side of the house to connect the radiators with the boiler, thus forcing the water to return through the radiators. The connections with the radiators and the return pipes should be of the same size as those which take the water to the radiators. Although the desired temperature is not given, it is probable that for an average of 60 degrees it will not be necessary to have more than 1,000 square feet of radiation in the house, or perhaps not more than 700 feet in the radiators in addition to what is provided by the flow and return pipes.

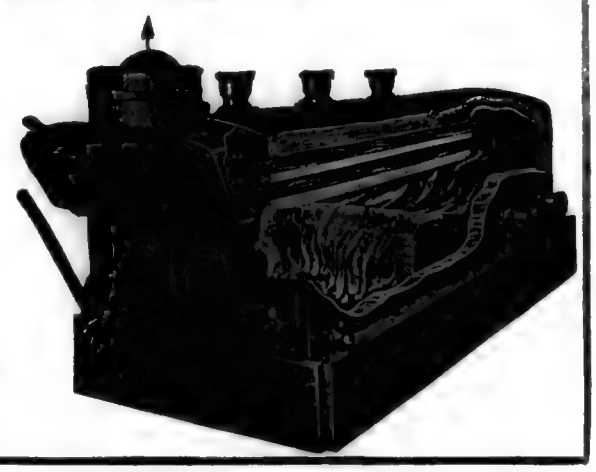
CAPACITY OF BOILER.

I have a return tubular boiler, twelve feet long and three feet four inches high. It contains thirty-eight 3-inch tubes. I have eight houses, with the following piping: Seventy-five feet of 5-inch pipe, 600 feet of 2-inch, 2,600 feet of 1¼-inch and 2,500 feet of 1-inch. I should like to add another house, with 2,000 feet of 1¼-inch pipe.

Would my present boiler carry that amount of extra piping? My chimney is thirty-four feet high and twenty-two inches in diameter, inside measurement. I intend to add ten feet to its height. There is a fine draft and I have no trouble in carrying fifteen pounds of steam. I am located in Pennsylvania. E. W.

While it would be like groping in the dark to give a definite answer to this question without knowing something about the size of the houses and the temperature desired, it is probable that if there is no trouble in heating the present houses with the amount of piping mentioned, the boiler will have sufficient capacity to supply an additional 2,000 feet of 1¼-inch pipe. This is based on the assumption that the boiler has a rating of approximately forty horse-power and that it will supply about 4,000 square feet of radiation, so that there would be quite a satisfactory margin of performance above what will be required for the amount of radiation proposed.

A TRACTION ENGINE BOILER.



I am building a greenhouse, 20x100 feet and nine feet to the ridge, with walls of solid cement, three feet high. The west gable end is glass. The boiler house is at the northeast corner. Can I use a sixteen horse-power boiler, formerly used as a threshing machine boiler, to heat the house with hot water? If so, how large an opening will it need for the flow pipe and how many openings for the return pipes? How many flow pipes and how many returns will be needed in the house? I should like to use 2-inch pipe. I want a temperature of 60 degrees. The outside temperature in this part of Kansas is sometimes 15 degrees below zero. How deep a boiler pit will be needed? J. S.

While a traction engine boiler does not make a first-class hot water heater, it can be used for the purpose and will give satisfactory results for a house of the size mentioned if a 3-inch outlet and inlet can be provided. Instead of using 3-inch mains, however, it will be better to put in two 2½-inch flow pipes upon the plates and use eleven or twelve 2-inch returns. In case it is preferred to use 2-inch pipe for the flows, four will be required. If possible, the boiler should

HUDSON, MASS.

The Middlesex Coöperative Garden Co. has been incorporated, to operate in this vicinity. The capital stock is $25,000, in 250 shares of $100 each.

The officers are: Benjamin Derby, postmaster at Concord Junction, president; Albert W. Haynes, a prominent Maynard business man, vice-president; Howard A. Wilson, a Maynard and Boston lawyer, treasurer; H. Harding Hale, of this town, clerk. These officers, with Frank P. Marston, form the board of directors.

An advisory board consists of Charles W. Prescott, a well known Concord agriculturist; Representative Albert Batley, of Maynard, florist, and John R. Comley, a prominent Bedford gardener.

Prof. Alvah W. Morse, Rolla S. Lamson and others are also interested. The company has been organized to develop land in this section for market gardening, it being the intention to utilize land for the production of crops to which it is peculiarly adapted. An option on ninety-six acres of land a short distance from this town has been secured, and it is proposed to use thirty-eight acres for asparagus, for which the soil is especially suited. The remainder of the tract will be planted according to what can best be grown upon it.

ISLIP, L. I.—The greenhouse on the estate of Schuyler L. Parsons, in St. Mark's lane, was recently destroyed by fire, with a loss of about $1,000.

EAST LYNN, MASS.—Kimball Bros. are conducting a flower store at 49 Springvale avenue, near Pine Grove cemetery and about two miles from the center of the city. They are also contemplating the erection of a greenhouse. The location is considered a particularly good one for cemetery trade, as about sixty per cent of the visitors to the cemetery pass by the store.

FALL RIVER, MASS.

The G. L. Freeman Co. has been incorporated here, with the object of importing, developing and selling orchids. George L. Freeman, formerly of Wellfleet, and who recently came to this city, is president, and William E. Braley is treasurer. The capital stock is $30,000.

Mr. Freeman is a leading authority on orchids. Certainly he has had extensive experience in procuring and bringing into this country varied specimens of this plant. He has made a study of orchids for years, following up an interest as an amateur by creating for himself a distinct business in seeking out, bringing to this country these plants and developing them for sale. The bulbs from which were grown many of the rarest and most valuable orchids now to be found in this country were brought in and introduced to public notice by him. His field for search has been South America. He has spent months at a time on his trips, penetrating to the wildest and least known sections of the lower part of the American continent. His experiences and adventures make highly interesting narratives.

The Freeman company has not been located here with any idea of depending upon the Fall River market for orchids. The bulbs will be collected by Mr. Freeman and his agents and the plants sent out to all parts of the country. In securing new and rare specimens Mr. Freeman often depends upon Indians native to the country into which he penetrates. These people are among his most valued assistants.

When the machine is filled to within six inches of the top, a few strokes of the pump will compress enough air in the tank to produce a continuous mist-like spray for 15 minutes.
All parts are made to gauge and may be had for repairs.
Ask your dealer about our Extension Hose, Extension Rods, and the Mastin Whitewash Nozzle for Bordeaux mixture.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Business for January has been satisfactory; in some instances it has been much better than last year. Funeral work has been the best asset, while numerous social gatherings did their part. January has been an exceedingly cloudy month, there being not more than four or five days of sunshine, which caused a shortage in the rose and carnation supply. Bulbous stock is becoming more plentiful and is moving fairly well. Yellow jonquils have had heavy demand this year. Lilacs, orchids and valley are enough to go around.

Various Notes.

A wind storm last week took the roof off the potting shed of the Pahud Floral Co. It also blew down E. A. Nelson's smokestack.

A. F. J. Baur and John Bertermann have returned from the carnation convention.

While rabbit hunting recently, Chas. Knopf, of Richmond, froze both feet. He suffered considerable pain and experienced quite a little difficulty in walking for some time.

Indianapolis is to have a floral auto parade in connection with the auto show in March.

Ed Bertermann is spending a week at French Lick.

E. A. Nelson is a pigeon fancier and has gone into the business on an extensive scale. He expects to have 1,000 pairs of young pigeons by next spring.

Albert Pettit says the cloudy weather has played havoc with his sweet peas. The buds would dry up and fall off before they would have time to develop.

Ed Rankin has purchased John Rieman's wagon.

There is some talk of a commission house for Indianapolis. H. L. W.

The Market.

January, 1910, appears to have been a good month with nearly everyone. The one trouble we all experienced was getting stock, roses especially. There has been much call for funeral work, and when you have to pay 5 cents and 6 cents for roses and cut them short for trimming a pillow or other design, it puts a big dent in the profit on that piece. It has been impossible to get good Beauties in our city for some time. The stems are usually weak and the flowers crippled; in fact, one of our leading retail men had to resort to stiffening the stems with wire.

The steadily increasing quantity of bulbous flowers is somewhat relieving the cut flower situation. Carnations are again more plentiful and the quality good. Smilax is quite scarce here lately.

Various Notes.

Chas. Plumb is cutting some fine Killarney and Richmond, as is evidenced by the stock seen at the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange.

A Northern touring car has been added to Robert Watson's line of equipages. Mr. Watson is also talking auto delivery, and no doubt will soon be building a private garage.

Robert Klagge is building up a reputation as a valley grower. His valley is first-class, long stem, nice foliage and well grown.

Breitmeyers are showing some pretty table decorations in their window from time to time, which attract many who would otherwise pass by without stopping. H. S.

Lake Geneva, Wis.—At the meeting of the Foremen's and Gardeners' Association of Lake Geneva, January 15, a handsome silver cup, beautifully engraved, was presented to James Livingston, head gardener for Mr. Potter. The cup was offered by Arthur T. Boddington for the best twelve varieties of sweet peas. It must be won three times in order to become the property of the winner.

Insure Yourself Maximum Crops of Excellent Quality by Feeding and Nourishing your Plants with

Evergreen Brand Fertilizer

Specially manufactured for growing Flowers, Ferns, Palms, Etc.

Its recommendation is based upon careful, extended and disinterested experiments, showing that this material is a nourishing, easily-available food for crops.

It consists of about half animal matter and half minerals, treated and refined; thus it is free from all deleterious substances and will not burn or injure the most delicate plant root, unless an extraordinary amount is applied at one time.

It is immediately available, and its effect upon most crops may be noticed within six days after its application.

It prevents the onslaughts of plant diseases or insect pests.

It will greatly benefit all greenhouse crops, notwithstanding the richness of the prepared soil, since it furnishes all the plant food elements in available forms and sufficient quantities to meet the needs of the plants.

It should receive careful attention, because its right use permits not only an economical utilization by the plant, but a control of its growth; it may be used in such a way as to change the natural tendency and thus improve it for specific uses; thus, in addition to the increase in yield which it produces, it enhances its market value.

Its uniform action seems to be to stimulate the capacity of the plant for absorbing water and developing foliage and stem growth, and to bring out numbers of new shoots, hence with roses and other flowering plants the best results are secured when this fertilizer is applied during the early growing period, as the energies of the plant are immediately concentrated upon developing its growth.

Can be used at any time during the growing season, dry or in solution.

Put up in 12-pound cans. Price, $2.00 each.

For sale by Leading Jobbers.

The Market.

Business last week was good, although the weather has been typically wintry. Considerable activity in all lines of cut flowers was felt and all available material was used up daily.

Roses in all grades have been scarce and, from the present outlook, there will not be an oversupply in the next few weeks, as most of the growers here are off crop.

Carnations, except a little scarcity in white, have been about enough to meet demand and commanded better prices, the best selling at $4 per hundred. Callas and Harrisii move readily at $1.25 to $1.50 per dozen. Lily of the valley were in brisk demand and top grade stock sold at $4 per hundred. Violets are steady and not overabundant; singles have the call and prices ranged from 50 cents to 75 cents. Narcissi, Roman hyacinths, daffodils, etc., have been taken more freely, owing to the shortage of other flowers, with $3 per hundred as the ruling price. All miscellaneous stock is getting a chance to move off more rapidly than usual. Asparagus, smilax and all other greens seem to have had a big demand.

Various Notes.

Several of the boys came back from Pittsburg and they speak in the highest terms of what they saw at the convention and of the treatment they received at the hands of the Pittsburg florists.

Will Sunderbruch has started to overhaul and remodel his newly purchased place at Lockland, O., formerly owned by Mr. Partridge. A force of men will get the place in shape for operation within a month.

What a Successful Grower Thinks of Hitchings Houses

Mr. George Schuneman, Baldwin, L. I. says: "Without an unusually light house, perfectly heated and ventilated, it would be impossible to get such results, as you can take absolutely no chances on sweet peas—a variation of a few degrees in heat would ruin the stock. I have never seen a house to compare with these (Hitchings) houses."

That is going pretty strong for Hitchings houses and Hitchings heating, but Mr. Schuneman ought to know—he has had other kinds of houses.

The Market.

Carnations and roses are quite scarce; in fact, all stock is scarce, though the demand is not great. Carnation day probably caused a general holding back until that day, and a resulting shortage all over. Violets and Golden Spur are about the most plentiful blooms on the market.

Various Notes.

The growers of Easter plants are making a fine showing of Easter lilies, and the prospects are for some fine, healthy plants, well developed.

The department stores sold carnations on January 29 for 18 cents per dozen.

Rumor has it that ere long the management of the Lakewood Cemetery Association will be open to a good man, as Mr. Smith intends to resign. M. E. M.

LINCOLN, NEB.

A meeting was held here January 19 to organize the florists of Nebraska into a society for the general welfare of the craft. A few of the florists are members of the Nebraska State Horticultural Society, but it seemed that they would not attend its meetings or take as much interest in it as they might. This led to the organization of the Nebraska State Florists' Society, as an auxiliary to the Horticultural Society.

The following officers were elected, to serve one year: President, Irvin Fry, Lincoln; vice-president, Louis Henderson, Omaha; secretary, Edward Williams, Grand Island; treasurer, Mr. Atkinson, David City. Directors, C. H. Green, Fremont; B. Simanton, Falls City, and Mr. Dole, Beatrice.

The by-laws and other preliminaries were perfected. The annual meeting will be held at Lincoln during the meeting of the Horticultural Society. We believe that florists generally throughout the state will take hold and push, so that in the near future we will be heard from.

Edward Williams.

Stoopville, Pa.—Mrs. Rachel C. Allen, who formerly conducted a flower store here, has gone out of the business.

Morgantown, W. Va.—W. R. P. Stewart had a fine crop of carnations at the end of January and advertised in the local paper to sell boutonnieres for McKinley day at 5 cents each. It brought quite a run of business. His regular price for carnations the year around is 75 cents per dozen. He attended the carnation convention at Pittsburg January 27.

Get the Benefit of Big Prices in the early market

The secret of success in market gardening is earliness. The Sunlight Double Glass Sash makes it easy to have the earliest and best plants. They will be ready as soon as the field is ready to receive them. The resulting crops will get the top-notch prices.

Sunlight Double Glass Sash lets in all the light all the time. Mats and boards for covering are no longer needed saving expense and labor.

Throughout the entire day the plants get benefit of the stimulating sunlight and earlier, better crops result.

The two layers of glass do the work. A 5/8-inch cushion of dry air between acts as a transparent blanket over the plants and protects them even in zero weather.

OUR SASH OFFER

Sash That Last differ from other sash in the way the joints are made—in the way the center brace braces—in the manner of pinning the joints—in the quality of the cypress used—in the care taken in assembling the parts.

They do not rot out at joints, will not twist and break glass. Sash we made twenty years ago are still in use, and we make them a good bit better now. It pays to buy only the best sash. There is nothing about your place that gets more hard handling and banging about.

If you want a Double Light Sash, there is none better than ours. We have been making them for years.

It is our Annual Offer; we make it about this time every year, to give everybody a chance to test up our Sash That Last.

The offer holds good for the month of February. It applies to our special brand of "Sash That Last."

Send us one dollar and we will ship one of these unglazed sash to you. Examine it carefully, and give it all sorts of bang-about tests. If it isn't the best sash you ever saw, and doesn't come right up to the "scratch," ship it back and we will pay the freight, and refund your dollar.

Send us five dollars and we will ship five Sash to you, and allow you actual freight charges, up to 40 cents per 100 lbs.

To give you an idea how far this maximum rate would carry the sash, here are the freight rates for 100 lbs. to the following points:

Portland, Me....38c Harrisburg, Pa...35c
Portsmouth, N.H.38c Baltimore, Md....35c
Bennington, Vt..38c Atlantic City, N.J.37c
Buffalo, N. Y....39c Pittsburg, Pa.....45c
Williamsport, Pa.35c Washington, D.C.45c

An unglazed sash weighs 20 lbs. To adjust the freight charges, send us the bill and we will cheerfully remit you the amount of the allowance.

To say it over again: One Sash, One Dollar—you pay freight. Five Sash, Five Dollars—and we make freight allowance.

If sash are not entirely satisfactory, send them back, at our expense, and back will come your money. The offer holds good for the month of February only.

Order at once; February will roll by before you know it.

A Test For Strength

The above photograph shows the Garland Gutter and Truss Construction as used in houses up to 28 feet in width. It also shows a weight of 1060 pounds carried from one strut bar. An equal weight can be carried on the opposite strut bar, or a weight equivalent to over a ton.

We warrant our Trusses to carry 1 ton each

This is the construction which all our large growers are adopting. The Garland Truss makes a stronger, lighter and neater house. A house which will positively not rise during high wind storms, and costs no more than the old style of pipe purlin supports.

Made by the same concern which manufactures the Gutter with a reputation. Write for further particulars to ∴ ∴

VALUE—THE BUSINESS BRINGER

Advertising is excellent. The house which doesn't advertise nowadays is headed for "Extinction Street." We have used many forms of publicity and found that all have merit of some sort, but the best advertising of all can be summed up in two words,

"GIVING VALUE"

Give a man 100 cents' worth for every dollar, and DO IT ALL THE TIME, and he will be satisfied, and moreover he won't be quiet about it. He will tell his friends and acquaintances, and that is great advertising which doesn't cost a cent.

"VALUE" advertising is strongly in evidence in all our Extensive Lines. Our Beautiful Katalog tells all about it. Yours for the asking. It saves money for U.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

THE CREDIT SYSTEM.

We are wondering what our brother florists are doing nowadays with their credit business? Of course we all have the telephone, and our patrons, good, bad and indifferent, order flowers over the 'phone and either promise to pay soon or don't mention that necessary part of the transaction. Our collector gets all kinds of excuses, but not so much money as we would prefer. Wealthy or able patrons say the money is just as good as in our hand, but our help and creditors do not think so. Occasionally a plant dies and they claim it was diseased and refuse to pay.

Does any one use the "credit slip," or how do you manage them?

I would like to hear from those who have solved the problem. We feel that to refuse credit makes enemies among good people, yet our credit system is rotten.

The REVIEW will be glad to print the letters of any who will describe their methods of handling credits.—ED.

FILLING FERN DISHES.

Work Worth Doing Well.

Of all the work that comes to a flower store, there is nothing of greater importance than the filling of fern dishes. While there may be a few downtown stores in big cities that do not do this work, in ninety-nine out of every hundred places where plants are sold to the public a steady daily business is done in filling ferneries; millions of small ferns, from 2½-inch or 3-inch pots, are required each year.

It might surprise some florists to hear the comments made on their methods of filling fern dishes; the housewife knows a well-filled dish when she sees it, and if the neighbor has secured better service than she herself it is easy to tell which florist's business has been helped and which hurt. And yet in some stores—yes, even in some of the large places—the fern dishes often are filled by a wagon driver or errand boy. In some instances the proprietor of the store is also a large grower. If so, would he leave the repotting of plants in his greenhouse to the barn man or other inexperienced help? Certainly not. Of course, it is admitted that there are drivers or errand boys who display much interest in their work and, with a little training, become quite handy around the greenhouse.

Filling ferneries is, in one sense, transplanting plants, putting more than one plant into a pot. If this is not properly done, how can the little ferns be expected to thrive, especially when all other conditions are unfavorable? Many fern dishes are much too shallow. Usually, also, they stand on a table, away from all daylight. The air in the room often is dry and much too warm to be suitable for ferns. Frequently the soil remains unwatered for a week, and then it is kept soaked for another week, in the hope of reviving the "dear little ferns."

A Wrong Assumption.

There still are florists who reason thus: "The shorter the life of plants or flowers, the greater the quantity of stock that we can sell." All the statements just made may be wasted on such reasoners. Nevertheless, the florist who so thinks is laboring under a wrong impression. The buyer of our wares will patronize the florist whose stock seems to keep best, just as the purchaser of a typewriter or sewing machine selects the one which gives the longest service.

Now, then, with the foregoing facts before us, what is the correct way to fill fern dishes? You say that everyone fills them differently. True enough; still, they all try for the same result.

The Drainage.

The question of drainage first arises. To obtain the best results, some sort of drainage should be provided. In the fern dish which will itself hold water, the lining should have a hole in the bottom, over which a piece of broken pot should be placed before filling, to keep the soil from washing through. This provides the best drainage.

When the dish is one of those open-work affairs, it will be better if the lining contains no holes. In this case a layer of chips of broken pots on the bottom of the lining will supply pretty fair drainage. Many dishes are so shallow that there is hardly room for the ferns, not to speak of the chips of pots, and in such cases you may have to dispense with the drainage entirely. If the lining is unusually deep, place a good layer of broken pots in the bottom and then enough soil to come within about two and one-half inches of the top. Then go ahead with the ferns.

Arangement of the Ferns.

The number of ferns to be put into a dish is often governed by the taste—or sometimes lack of taste—of the customer. If this matter is left to you, then place the ferns just close enough together so that the soil is pretty well hid. Be sure you do not crowd the ferns.

In filling the ordinary fern dish, I usually first select the ferns for the outside edge. Place them close to the edge of the lining, tilting them slightly toward the outside. If you are using a variety of ferns, alternate them around the edge. Such kinds as Aspidium tsussimense, Cryrtomium falcatum and some kinds of pteris, if not too large, are best suited for use as the edge plants of fern dishes for table use, as they spread pretty well.

A Well-filled Green Mat-ware Fern Dish.

After the outside plants are in position, it is well to put the center plant in place; that is, if you intend to use a cocos, pandanus, small phœnix or some similar plant in the center. Next fill the remaining space with ferns.

Condition of the Soil.

If your soil is in the right condition, it will be just damp enough so it will pack nicely and still not cling together or be lumpy. Fill in well with soil between the ferns, and then pack it together with your fingers. This is important; pack the soil in well around every fern.

A dish filled by an experienced man will have the soil even across the top and a little below the edge of the lining after the work is finished. You may have seen dishes in which the soil was heaped around each fern, or perhaps there was a little mountain in the center, with a cocos at the peak. A dish so filled cannot be properly watered.

Various Tastes to Satisfy.

As to the arrangement of the ferns or the varieties used, this depends usually upon the wishes of your customers. Some want nothing but asparagus, while others will not have it at all. Some people like a low, even effect, while others want just the opposite. I have also run across customers who did not believe in permitting a particle of soil to show; in order to avoid this, the ferns had to be fairly packed, allowing them little chance to grow. Personally, I prefer an assortment of ferns and a loose, airy effect, even if a little of the soil does show.

There is no end to the number of pretty effects that may be obtained in a dish of fairly good size. Often three small cocos can be used in the center, instead of only one.

Depth of the Dishes.

The best depth for a fern dish is from three to three and one-half inches, giving you an inner lining about two and one-half to two and three-fourths inches deep, which will just nicely take the small ferns without disturbing the roots. Some of the dishes on the market are much too deep to look well. Unless ferns of a pretty fair size are planted in them, they will look squatty. Then, again, there are the dishes which are so shallow that it is no wonder the ferns die in them over night. If the manufacturers would confer with an experienced florist, there would not be so many nearly useless fern dishes on the market.

It will pay most retail florists to keep in stock a nice assortment of fern dishes, in qualities and styles to suit the class of trade in each community. A few of these dishes should always be kept nicely filled. They will sell readily.

Stock to Use.

It is not necessary to confine yourself to ferns. Small plants of pandanus or Phœnix Roebelenii, small kentias, dracænas, crotons, etc., can be used to good advantage in the large dishes. Baskets in the natural wood, such as birch bark, or baskets in neutral colors, or small window sill boxes, can be filled. In fact, there are many ways of using these small plants.

Some of the varieties which I have found best for use in fern dishes are: Asparagus plumosus, Aspidium tsussimense, Cyrtomium falcatum, Davallia stricta, Pteris Cretica albo-lineata, Pteris Mayii, Pteris serrulala cristata and Pteris Victoriæ.

Trifling as the business of filling fern dishes may seem, still a well-filled fern dish on some one's table is a good advertisement for the florist, one that may attract more attention than a costly calendar. Anyway, it is the little things in life that count. Hugo Schroeter.

[A little advertising will enable any retail florist to increase his business in the sale and refilling of fern dishes. Try a neatly printed circular for inclosure in your letters, bills, packages, etc. The Review will supply duplicates of either of the cuts used to illustrate this article at $2 each.—Ed.]

ADVERTISING PAYS.

W. G. Schucht is located at Chilton, Wis., and it is not in the small towns that newspaper advertising has its greatest value; in the larger cities the newspaper reaches people who seldom would see the florist's window or hear of the florist; but even in Chilton advertising pays, for Mr. Schucht writes:

"Enclosed is a copy of an advertisement I used in a local newspaper as a forerunner for St. Valentine's day and which has brought me business I otherwise would not have enjoyed. I am running a large display advertisement this week, which will end with a special window display for St. Valentine's day. Although I am located in a community where flowers have not been bought on these special days, I can see where advertising at the right time brings great results. It was shown to me this year on McKinley day, when I had a fine run on carnations through a special window display and special advertising. I am enjoying the Review every week, and find some very helpful hints in it."

Mr. Schucht's enclosure, from his local paper, was a clipping as follows:

FEBRUARY 14th.

Just a gentle reminder
In behalf of Valentine's Day,
So think the matter over careful
And with me you will agree
That there is nothing sweeter
At this season of the year
Than a nice Bouquet of Flowers
Your Valentine's heart to cheer.
Flowers are real valentines
(Nature's product come to stay)
And you will always find them proper
To present on Valentine's Day.

W. G. Schucht, the Florist.

MAIL ENCLOSURES.

Many retail florists find it worth while to send out in each letter a neatly printed circular advertising some feature of their business. Others put circulars on the plant department in cut flower orders, and cut flower circulars in the plant orders. Of course they must be attractively gotten up. Here is one used in its mail by an Iowa concern:

CALIFORNIA-FLOWERS—
IOWA—

Last week we told you we had flowers. We told you we could furnish the lovely part of California to you at small cost.

Some of you took the cue—and some seem to have forgotten it.

Now see here, you married men. Just a reminder to you.

Don't you remember how you used to take Her a bouquet of pretty flowers every once in a while when you was a cortin' Her.

Don't you remember how she used to put them to her lips (to smell 'em) and say

"How lovely!—and how good of you to bring them. I just adore roses!"

You kept making her say sweet things to you because you did such thoughtful things for her. But say—

How long since you carried a bouquet to Her since you married Her?

Once? Twice?—"Nope, not once"—unless you had a party.

Yes, we've got flowers for parties, too—but if I were you I'd break the ice by taking a bun home to Her a few times. Try it.

OUTDOOR SPRENGERI.

Would the growing of Asparagus Sprengeri in the field be profitable commercially in this New England climate? If so, what size of plants should be set out and what time should they be planted out? What kind of land would be best suited to their growth? Any other information you can give on this subject will be thankfully received. F. E. S.

Asparagus Sprengeri is grown outdoors satisfactorily in Florida, but in New England I think it would be a doubtful experiment, from the fact that the growing season would probably prove to be too short.

The best method of growing this plant for sprays is to plant out the stock on the side benches of a greenhouse, using five to six inches of rich soil on the benches and planting out strong young plants from 4-inch pots. After the plants are well established, a mulching of well-rotted manure will be a help to them. In such a bench the plants may be grown for two seasons, if well fed, but would then need replanting. Election of officers.

An opportunity will be provided for the inspection of the state's greenhouses and an explanation of the work in progress there. It is the hope of those in charge that the association will vote to make Champaign-Urbana the permanent meeting place. There are comparatively few florists in the district, so that an elaborate entertainment is impossible, but the society is well able to take care of itself in this respect and it is thought that the meetings held at the State University will be of much value to the work for floriculture. A large attendance is hoped for this season.

The officers of the State Florists' Association are: President, C. E. Gullett, Lincoln; secretary, J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville; treasurer, F. L. Washburn, Bloomington, and the following vice-presidents, George B. Franks, Champaign; A. C. Brown, Springfield; E. W. Guy, Belleville; Charles M. Dickinson, Chicago; O. B. Heinl, Jacksonville; A. R. Knowles, Bloomington; Charles Loveridge, Peoria.

PROPAGATING POINSETTIAS.

Will you kindly tell me what is the best method for taking cuttings from poinsettias? In the REVIEW for December 23, in an article entitled "Pentecost's Poinsettias," you spoke about propagating them July 15. Is July the only month in which to propagate this plant? Any information you can give me will be appreciated, as I have never handled the plant. G. K. W.

Poinsettias can be propagated from April to September. The general plan is to use the soft young growths, which root readily where they are given a little bottom heat. The favorite months for propagation are June and July. For single-stem plants for benches the cuttings can be taken in April and May, but June, July and even the first half of August answer well where dwarf plants for pans are wanted. Poinsettias are of easy propagation. Even an ordinary coldframe answers well for this purpose in summer. You will find cultural notes on poinsettias, under "Seasonable Suggestions," from time to time during the season. C.

PLANTS FOR CHRISTMAS.

Could Amaryllis formosissima, or Jacobæan lily, be had for Christmas if planted in the fall or late summer? Please give me a list of the best plants for next winter, to bloom for Christmas, and also let me know if seed of cyclamen sowed January 10 will make blooming plants for next Christmas. Could the early varieties of gladioli, planted in August, be had in bloom for Christmas? J. G.

Amaryllis formosissima is not a desirable bulb to try to flower for Christmas. The early varieties of gladioli of the Colvillei and nanus type will not flower for Christmas. These will not stand hard forcing, and are at their best from March to May.

Some of the best Christmas plants are Azalea Indica, poinsettias, Chinese primroses, cyclamen, Roman hyacinths, lily of the valley, zonal geraniums, Lorraine begonias, and among berried plants Solanum capsicastrum and Christmas peppers. Bright colored flowers are always in the best demand.

Cyclamen sown January 10 will be rather late for Christmas. They will be better in February. Another year start your seed in September, and you will then get strong plants in 6-inch pots for Christmas sales the following year. C. W.

CANNAS FROM SEED.

Will you please inform me whether cannas from seed will bloom the first season or not? If not, at what age will they flower? C. W.

Cannas from seed will bloom the first season, provided the seed is started sufficiently early. Sow the seeds now in a brisk, moist heat. C. W.

CHRYSANTHEMUM GOLDEN GLOW

I confess I felt dubious about the profitableness of the Golden Glow mum, on account of its extra earliness, since it comes into bloom when asters are plentiful on the market, but I was agreeably disappointed. The first cuts brought even better prices than the later crops last season.

We hardly understand its value yet. It will probably produce a white sport—perhaps several of them—within the next two years. In fact, there is one already, and it is not impossible that we may get a pink sport from the white. Then we shall have all the desirable colors and the mum season will be extended a month or more. It is a better finished flower than Monrovia, and the latter variety will soon be dropped in a general way.

Whether the extending of the blooming season will prove a benefit, we do not yet know. To the retailer who does his own making up there is no doubt of the benefit, but time will tell. The man who broke the record for earliness with the Golden Glow deserves a medal in his honor. E. Fryer.

PREPARING TO PROPAGATE.

With the advent of February the chrysanthemum grower, particularly the man who is growing for exhibition, begins to turn his thoughts to propagating for the coming season. The expert has doubtless had his plants in a cool, airy house, where the cuttings can make a hard, firm growth, and they are now in good shape, but many of the commercial growers simply throw their stock under the benches and leave them there until it is time to begin propagating once more. Such a method is folly, pure and simple. The cuttings are weak and the plants, because they have been growing in insufficient light, have lost most of their vitality.

There is an idea abroad that the chrysanthemum, after flowering, should have a resting season. While it does not need heat or nearly as much water as during the rest of the year, still the chrysanthemum is never dormant and there is no use of looking for good cuttings after three or four months of absolute neglect. If your stock plants are under the benches, throw out some of your violets and carnations and make room on top for the mums, where they can have a reasonable show to produce good cuttings. Anyone who has ever tried it knows that a plant that is lifted and replanted into good, sweet loam, with a fair proportion of leaf-soil and rotted manure, responds immediately. It is good policy, therefore, even though the plants are still in the benches where they were grown, to lift them, turn over the soil and replant them.

The commercial grower does not want to propagate his stock so soon for average cut flower growing, but he will find it an advantage to root the plants and set them out on a bench in a cool house, where they will, after being pinched several times, give an abundance of splendid cuttings along in May, when the stock plants are getting exhausted and not of much account. It is always a good plan, with any novelties that may be purchased, to plant them out on a bench in this manner, because they will then make a free, kind growth and can be increased quite considerably without impairing the constitution of the variety.

Chas. H. Totty.

EARLY POT PLANTS.

I have a side bench on which I would like to grow early mums, two flowers to the plant. There are only twenty-four inches of head-room in the rear of the bench and forty-two inches in the front. When shall I take the cuttings, so as to have the plants not too high by flowering time for the above bench? I have stock plants of Glory of Pacific, Polly Rose, Ivory and Pink Ivory. Are the varieties mentioned suitable for pot plants? If so, when is the right time to take the cuttings? C. B.

The varieties mentioned by C. B., if propagated in April or early May, should not grow any too tall to flower in twenty-four inches of space. So far as my own experience goes, with either Polly Rose or Pacific, I have not been able to flower them with over 2-foot stems, no matter at what time I propagated them. Nice little plants, put out in June and topped once, so as to carry two flowers, should finish well in that space, unless the bench is heavily shaded, which, of course, makes the stems pull out considerably.

The kinds mentioned are all well adapted for pot plants, and cuttings can be taken any time when good stock is available. It is simply a question of keeping the plants pinched back, and at the middle of June there are pot plants just as dwarf as anyone could wish. Plants to flower in 7-inch pots, carrying from six to twelve flowers to a plant, should be rooted not later than the end of April. For smaller stock, in 6-inch pots, carrying several flowers to a plant, they should be rooted in May or early June and would still be in ample time to produce good stock. Chas. H. Totty.

FISHER'S CARNATIONS.

At Peter Fisher's place, at Ellis, Mass., no matter at what time of the year the visitor may call, he always receives a cordial welcome and finds something of interest to examine. So many high-grade carnations have originated here that Ellis has secured international fame horticulturally, and that the list of good things is not yet exhausted is self-evident after a look over the seedling house. One seedling, of which Mr. Fisher has a nice batch, is a superb cerise, a big flower, with a long, strong stem and an ideal calyx—one which, if it holds good, will be heard from. There are also one or two fine scarlets which promise to beat even Beacon, a variety originating here. A beautiful white variegated variety in the way of the old Mrs. Bradt appears to be free and has handsome flowers. There are other varieties of great promise under trial. If any doubtful traits develop in any of them, however, they will never be introduced, Mr. Fisher declining to put anything on the market unless absolutely sure it is all right.

Among the standard varieties, Winona seemed to lead as a heavy cropper to date. Melody looked well, but will not be grown again. Winsor also carried a heavy crop. Rose-pink Enchantress, White Enchantress and Enchantress are all grown still and there is nothing yet in sight to beat them when well grown. White Perfection does well here and Beacon is the only scarlet grown. No. 50, one of C. W. Ward's varieties, carried a nice crop. Viola Sinclair also occupies considerable space, but was off crop at the time of our visit.

Mr. Fisher believes in early planting. The houses planted first certainly showed a big lead over the later ones, and another year every effort will be made to get planting done considerably earlier.

CARNATION RUST.

Enclosed you will find some leaves of carnations that are affected with what I think is smut. Will you please tell me what to do with it? I have only a little of it, but it seems to be general—a plant here and another there. Outside of that, the plants are in a good, healthy condition. H. C. G.

The disease you complain of is the common carnation rust. Some years ago this disease was feared by all the carnation growers, and it did great injury until we learned how to control it. Nowadays, although there are perhaps few places which are entirely free from it, it does little harm, comparatively, and it has no terrors for the expert grower.

Pick off the diseased leaves and burn them. Dust the plants with Grape Dust, or with sulphur and lime mixed in equal proportions. Then syringe as little as possible for a while. By keeping the spores dry you will keep them inactive, and therein lies the secret. A. F. J. B.

RUST ON ENCHANTRESS.

We are troubled to quite an extent with rust on our carnations, especially Enchantress. We have been taking sulphur and lime in equal quantities and dusting the plants with that, but it seems to do no good. Is there a preparation that will effectually kill this fungus? If there is, how is it used? Kindly give us any information you may have to offer. W. O. S.

Dusting with lime and sulphur should help to check the carnation rust, providing you do not undo the work by careless watering, etc. Pick off the worst affected leaves and keep the plants dry overhead, and they will soon outgrow it. Water carefully, but not too sparingly at the roots, and ventilate freely. We know of no other remedies. A. F. J. B.

CUTWORMS IN BENCHES.

I find that my benches are alive with cutworms, and I also have traced out where they came from. Last summer I bought a number of loads of rotted cow manure, and I find they came from that. I have lettuce in the benches where they are the worst, and they are also in the soil I wish to use for potting. If you can let me know at once how I may get rid of them, it will be greatly appreciated. G. L. E.

Perhaps the best means of destroying cutworms of all kinds is by poisoned baits, supplemented with hand-picking whenever it is possible to find them. A bait which is strongly recommended for this purpose is prepared as follows: One part arsenic, one part sugar or molasses and six parts bran. Mix with water until you have a mash. Spread this around where they can get it. A. F. J. B.

POTTING ROOTED CUTTINGS.

Will you be kind enough to advise as to the kind of potting soil, the temperature, watering, fertilizing and amount of exposure to the sun that are necessary for the proper growing of carnations? S. F. C.

If you had any soil left last summer when you filled your carnation beds, it will be the best potting material you can find. If you were wise you laid some hotbed sash over some of it last fall, before hard freezing set in. If you have none under cover, you can get it inside in a frozen condition. Let it thaw out and, if necessary, let it dry out somewhat, before you use it. It should be just moist enough so you can press it into a ball, but not too moist to crumble readily when broken up. Add no fertilizer at this time, but you might add a couple of shovelfuls of sharp sand to each barrow of soil.

After potting into small pots, water enough to make the water penetrate to the bottom of the pots. After that, water when the soil shows signs of getting dry. Root action is started best in a moderately moist soil. Let no sun-rays strike them for a few days; the number of days will depend on how well rooted and how well matured the cuttings were at the time of potting. As long as they are inclined to wilt, they must be shaded, but decrease the shading as rapidly as possible. You will find 50 degrees about an ideal temperature for growing young carnation plants, with a rise of 6 degrees at noon and 15 degrees on bright, sunny days. A. F. J. B.

Carnation Niagara.

SPIDER AND STIGMONOSE.

I am sending you a plant of the Beacon carnation which is affected with some disease or insects which I do not understand. Shortly after housing my carnations last summer, I noticed one plant on which the tips of the leaves were dry and yellow. I examined it closely and could find no insects. I thought then that it was caused by those little green caterpillars which hatch out sometimes in the young shoots, and which cause the tips, when they grow out, to turn yellow, but later I noticed it had spread to other plants. Then I found red spiders, which disappeared after spraying them a few times, but now I find it spread more and do not see any reason for it. L. A. G.

The specimen forwarded was badly affected with stigmonose, which no doubt was brought on by the attack of red spider. Do not propagate from any plants showing this disease and you will in course of time rid your stock of it. When propagating is done carelessly, this disease is quite destructive, as every cutting taken from an affected plant will be a diseased plant the next season.

There is also some fairy ring, which was perhaps brought on through the excessive syringing made necessary by the presence of the red spider. For this you should spray with Bordeaux mixture about once each week until you get it killed out. Paint a steam pipe with sulphur and lime and water, and ventilate freely. A. F. J. B.

CARNATION NIAGARA.

Reproduced herewith is a photograph of Carnation Niagara. This is the white seedling exhibited at Pittsburg before the American Carnation Society by E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind. The variety resembles White Lawson in its general characteristics.

H., registers carnation Bon Ami, Queen x Lady Bountiful; pure white; size, three to three and one-half inches; strong, open growth; stem very stiff, twenty-four to thirty inches long; early and continuous bloomer and seldom splits. Also Granite State, Queen x Lady Bountiful; pure white; size, three to three and one-half inches; strong, upright growth, with no surplus grass; stem, thirty to thirty-six inches; seldom bursts; free bloomer.

STOCK FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

Could geraniums be brought into bloom by Memorial day grown outdoors in hotbeds or coldframes? What size plants should be bought, when should they be put outdoors, and what sort of treatment should they have? Can you name some in pink, white and scarlet that are stocky plants, growing to a medium height, and free flowering? I want them for a cemetery where tall growing geraniums will not do well on account of the heavy wind which usually sweeps over it. The soil is sandy, though I always make a large hole and fill it with first-class soil before the plants are set out. It is hot and they do not get an overabundance of water. I live in Portland, Me. B. M. R.

Purchase rooted cuttings or plants from 2-inch pots now and grow them in the greenhouse. If you depend on coldframes or hotbeds, it will not be safe to place the geraniums in the frames in your latitude before the middle of April. Use a foot of stable manure and leaves, well mixed and firmly tramped. Over this scatter a layer of three to four inches of fine cinders. Partially plunge the pots in this and they will grow splendidly. On the coldest nights they will need mats or board shutters for protection. As fine geraniums are grown in frames as in heated structures, but a little more care is needed in watering. In dark, damp weather use water sparingly.

Some good double bedding varieties are: S. A. Nutt, crimson scarlet; Alphonse Ricard, vermilion scarlet; Jean Viaud, rose pink, white throat; La Favorite, pure white; Mme. Landry, salmon apricot; Beaute Poitevine, light salmon. A few excellent singles are: Snowdrop, pure white; Jacquerie, crimson scarlet; Paul Crampel, brilliant scarlet; Dryden, soft crimson, white center; Granville, rose pink.
C. W.

GERANIUMS AND COLEUS.

Please tell me what causes my geranium leaves to turn brown at the ends and also what makes my coleus leaves fall off. The temperature of my house is 70 degrees in the daytime and about 60 degrees at night. The same trouble exists among all my varieties of geraniums and coleus.
A. Y.

Your house is much too warm for geraniums. Give them a temperature of 45 to 50 degrees at night and they will do much better. An insufficient water supply, lack of ventilation, unsuitable soil, or escaping coal gas in the house might each cause the trouble referred to. Avoid the use of all chemical fertilizers in the soil. In using animal manure, do not let it form over one-fourth of the compost and never use it unless old and well decayed. At the first potting no manure should be used.

The coleus should grow luxuriantly in the temperatures you name, if the soil, watering and other conditions are congenial. Coleus wants more water than geraniums and can scarcely be overwatered. Geraniums, on the other hand, must not be kept constantly damp at the root. C. W.

GERANIUM FOR NAME.

We are mailing you under separate cover a sample of geranium, which we wish you would tell us the correct name of. W. E. T.

We regret the flower and foliage were so withered as to be unrecognizable. Send another specimen and wrap some damp moss or cotton wool around the base of the stalk to help in keeping it fresh.
C. W.

RUST ON BEGONIA REX.

Will you kindly state what solution, if any, will cure rust on Rex begonias, or how to treat the plants to stop the progress of the disease? R. F. C.

We do not know of any spraying solution which will check the so-called rust on Begonia Rex. The browning of the leaves may be due to one of several causes, such as too strong sunlight, too low a temperature or dry root conditions. Rex begonias like a house where they are not exposed to direct sunlight. Such sun as we have in winter will not burn them, but our torrid summer sun will. They enjoy being sprayed overhead and it is an old fallacy that water on the foliage is harmful.

Grow your plants in a house which is shaded from strong sunlight. Keep them well watered and liberally fed with liquid stimulants, in a temperature anywhere from 50 to 60 degrees at night, and you should have no further trouble with the foliage browning. W. C.

SLEEPING IN A GREENHOUSE.

Can you please tell me what effect, if any, sleeping in a greenhouse would have on a human being? For instance, suppose a man is working part of the day and sleeping on a couch in the greenhouse at night, so as to look after the firing two or three times in the night, and the couch is alongside of 800 or 900 narcissi in bloom. Would the fragrance of the blossoms affect the sleeper in any way?
C. K.

There need be no more fear of injurious effects from working or sleeping in a greenhouse than in a factory or other building where the temperature and atmospheric conditions are similar, and so far as there being any danger from sleeping in a room with several hundred plants, it would be a benefit rather than likely to do harm, as during the day the plants will take up the carbon dioxide which has been given off by the man, thus purifying the air. Certain plants, like Primula obconica, appear to develop a poisonous principle which has an irritating effect upon the skin of some persons, but except for this I would not look for any injury from plants or from working or sleeping near them.

RAISED VS. SOLID BENCHES.

The authors of some of the recent articles appearing in the trade papers seem to be of the impression that a solid bench is unquestionably superior to the old-fashioned raised, board bench. Directions have been given for constructing the solid benches with cinders, etc. Soil, climate, the crops to be grown and the cost of construction must all be taken into consideration in debating this question.

Our own experience and conclusions may be of some use to the beginner. About fifteen years ago we constructed solid benches in some of our houses, by making 12-inch side boards filled with cinders, and on the top of this we placed our soil, thus raising the bench about eighteen inches above the walk.

In about nine houses we first filled in twelve inches of soil or cinders, and placed on top of this common drain tile, close together, using 3-inch, 4-inch and 5-inch tile. On top of this we put the side boards. In a number of the houses we retained the old board benches.

The result with just the common cinders for drainage was unsatisfactory with both roses and carnations. After two years' use they were discarded and tile were put over the cinders. After this change we noticed a marked improvement in the plants.

Though we were not satisfied that the tile construction was as good as the raised wood bench, we reasoned that as each house was wholly constructed with one kind of benches, the difference in crops might be accounted for by conditions other than the benches. Therefore we removed from several all-tile-bench houses one entire bench and substituted a pecky cypress raised bench. This was done in both carnation and rose houses.

This winter White Killarney fills a house containing one tile bench and one raised wood bench. Bridesmaid is planted similarly. At the present time the crops on the wooden benches are decidedly the best. Each year the raised wooden bench makes the better showing until well into the spring. After that the tile bench has the advantage of the wood bench, and is more easily cared for.

If any person will take a bench of Killarney and, for six weeks during the winter, use a heating pipe under one side of the bench and not the other side, he will discover a decided improvement in the side that has received the heat, as compared with the other side. We are convinced, beyond question, that the grower who wants winter flowers should use the raised bench with heating pipes underneath, which he can use at any time.

Carnations present a different question, and we are still trying both makes of benches. We will not discard the tile benches, but will not build more at present.

I can understand that in a higher altitude, where the air is more rare and the evaporation is more rapid, or in a drier climate, experience might be different from ours. Even the soil might have certain ingredients that would make a difference. W. J. VESEY, JR.

VIBURNUM UTILE.

One of the new hardy plants from western China, which has this season been distributed in the trade by James Veitch & Sons, the well-known British firm, is Viburnum Utile, shown in the accompanying illustration. This is an evergreen species with ovate coriaceous leaves, dark glaborious green above and tomentose beneath. The flowers are white and freely produced in terminal corymbs. The time of flowering is early in April. Those who have seen the plant flowering in the Coombe Wood nursery of Veitch & Sons consider that the neat and bushy habit renders it a most desirable addition to the list of hardy flowering shrubs, and the Gardeners' Chronicle in a recent issue commented that "the glossy leaves, pure white flowers, floriferousness and neat appearance of this shrub will undoubtedly gain for it many admirers," when it becomes known. It has not hitherto been illustrated in America.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Heliotropes.

It is always safe to propagate heliotrope plants liberally, for who is there with any garden who does not want at least one or two of them? There should now be a good batch of cuttings on the stock plants. These in three weeks, in a warm cutting bench, will be fit to pot off to 2½-inch pots. Given a later shift to 3-inch pots and pinched a couple of times, they will make fine, bushy stock for May sales. Propagation of heliotropes is timely right up to the middle of April. Nice little plants can be had rooted even that date.

Azaleas.

The azaleas for Easter should now be placed in a slightly warmer house. As a rule, six weeks in an average night temperature of 58 to 60 degrees will suffice to bring any of the naturally late varieties into bloom, but there are some sorts, such as Deutsche Perle, Mme. Petrick, Apollo and a few others, which will require but little forcing. It is always better to hurry them now, rather than later in the season, as a few days in a cold house before being sold makes them better fitted to withstand vicissitudes of temperature. Spray the plants over twice a day during the bright weather. Discontinue this as soon as the flowers begin to open. Pinch out any young growths the plants may make before flowering and never allow any of the bulbs to become dry.

Spiraeas.

Plants of Spiræa Japonica, grandiflora, Washington and astilboides should now be in a warm house and starting nicely. As they grow rapidly, see that they get a fresh stand every few days. The pots fill with roots quite fast, and as a consequence copious waterings are needed. As has been previously stated, it is safer not to use any tobacco smoke where spiræas are growing, their foliage being quite susceptible to injury.

Dutch Bulbous Stock.

It is a month too early to start narcissi, tulips and hyacinths for Easter. Let them remain where they are until early in March. Look over the flats and pans, and water any showing the least signs of dryness at the root. A batch of Gladiolus The Bride and Spanish iris should be housed once a week, to allow of a steady succession of spikes for cuttings, La Reine tulips, Golden Spur narcissi and other market favorites should be brought in every week.

Ten Weeks' Stocks.

From the middle to the end of February is a suitable time to sow a good batch of ten weeks' stocks for flowering at Memorial day. The choicer the strain, the less liability there will be of an overwhelming preponderance of singles. White, lavender, blue and scarlet are the most desirable colors to grow. Sow the seed in a warm house, but remove to cooler quarters soon after germination. Stocks, if grown warm, will be lanky and valueless. At all stages of growth they want cool treatment and an abundance of fresh air.

Lilium Candidum.

The Madonna lily is less of a factor now at Easter than some years ago. This is largely due to the growers purchasing the old and worthless type, which makes big bulbs and has narrow foliage, weak stems and poor flowers. The broad-leaved variety is so superior to the other type that no one who has once grown it will ever want to see the other again. If you can see the buds peeping in the ends of the shoots of your candidums by February 20, you can have them in flower by giving them an average night temperature of 60 degrees. This is rather warm treatment for this lily, but as Easter comes unusually early, it is necessary to subject it to harder forcing than usual. Feed the plants liberally, as they are stronger rooting subjects than the longiflorums. Do not allow any aphis to get a foothold on the plants. A spraying with a nicotine solution once a week will keep these pests in the background.

Genistas.

Genistas do not take kindly to forcing. The cooler they are grown the better. Presuming that the plants wanted for Easter have been stored in a cold cellar or pit and kept just clear of freezing, they should be moved into a cool greenhouse about February 15. They will not require a higher night temperature than 45 degrees. The warmer they are grown, the more speedily will the flowers shake off and fade. They can hardly be overwatered, and it is important that there be no opportunity for them to dry out, as one thorough drying means that the plants might just as well be thrown on the rubbish heap.

Ficus Elastica.

If there are any old plants of Ficus elastica carrying an abundance of cuttings, it is a good time now to root a number of them. A month ago would have been even better, but with a good bottom heat possible for some weeks yet, there will be no trouble in rooting them. A good plan is to put each cutting in a 2-inch or 2½-inch pot, filled with sphagnum and sand. Tie up the leaves, so that they will go closer in the propagating bed. Plunge to the brim in sand. Soak well and keep watered right along. Of course there should be no sun allowed to strike them, and the brisker the bottom heat the quicker they will root. In summer the ringing method of propagation is to be preferred, but at this season we find the other plan better and we lose very few cuttings. Choose the warmest part of the propagating bench and do not be afraid to keep it well soaked with water.

Adiantums.

It is a good plan, when the fronds have been pretty well cleaned off any of the adiantum plants, to cut off the balance and keep the pots tolerably dry for two or three weeks. A rest always makes them start away more vigorously and any repotting required can be done during the resting period. A favorite practice is to divide the plants when they have become unwieldy. We have never found that these divisions make nearly so good plants as such as are grown from seedlings. It is a mistake to suppose that peat in any form is required for adiantums. They grow far better in good fibrous loam to which has been added some leaf-mold, spent hotbed manure and sand, and when the pots are well filled with roots a watering with cow or sheep manure once in eight or ten days will greatly benefit them. These remarks refer principally to A. cuneatum, A. gracillimum, A. hybridum and that useful variety, A. Croweanum.

Show Pelargoniums.

With the lengthening days and increased solar heat, show pelargoniums are making rapid headway and will require quite frequent spacing. Unless wanted in flower late, pinching should now be discontinued. Potting should be attended to. It is not a good plan to permit the plants to become potbound before shifting them. It is surprising how speedily they will get into that condition, unless carefully watched. For a final potting, a compost containing two-thirds turfy loam, one-third old cow manure and a 4-inch pot of fine bone to each two bushels of soil, answers well. Drain efficiently and ram the soil in the pots firmly. Grow cool and airy. Spray once a week with a nicotine solution, and you should have some splendid plants for May sales. Do not do any propagating now; the proper time is in August.

TEXAS HANDICAPS FLORISTS.

Restricts Supplies of Its Citizens.

The Commissioner of Agriculture of the State of Texas, that great commonwealth in which all-wise solons once passed a law decreeing that railroad trains must under no circumstances be more than a half hour late, has undertaken the enforcing of a legislative enactment which will put the florists of the state to great inconvenience. The law, in brief, is interpreted to provide that shipments of greenhouse plants originating outside the State can not be admitted to the State unless the shipper has first filed with the Texas authorities a certificate of inspection and paid a license fee of $5.

The florists in the State of Texas never have been able to grow all the stock they need, and doubtless never will be able to make supply fit the varying demand, any more than the florists of other States are able to do, and the effect of the law as interpreted will be to handicap the citizens of the State, rather than to help or protect them.

The act in question is the Orchard and Nursery Inspection Law, passed March 11, 1909, but it is only recently that attempt has been made to enforce its provisions as against florists. Now those who ship greenhouse plants from outside of Texas to florists in that State receive letters from the Commissioner of Agriculture similar to the following:

Information has come to this office that you have made a shipment of floral plants, or nursery stock, to Texas, without shipping tag showing a printed copy of the Texas permit authorizing you to transact business in this state.

I am enclosing you a copy of the Texas Orchard and Nursery Inspection Law, which you will please read carefully.

I beg to advise you that any further shipments received in this state will be held up subject to inspection. All express agents have been notified to that effect, and any such inspection will cost a local inspection fee in addition to the fee required for taking out permit in this state.

Please read the law carefully and you will ascertain exactly what is necessary for you to do to comply with our law.

Awaiting your prompt and early reply before taking further steps with reference to your previous shipments, I beg to remain most truly yours,

ED. R. KO[illegible].

The paragraphs of the law which bear on the florists of the country, but more especially on those of the State of Texas, are as follows:

Section 3. No individual, partnership or corporation outside the state shall be permitted to ship nursery stock into this state without first filing with the Commissioner of Agriculture a certified copy of his or their certificate of inspection issued by the proper authorities in the state in which the proposed shipment originates. This certificate must show that the stock to be shipped has been examined by the proper officers of inspection in that State or province, and that the stock is apparently free from all dangerous insect pests or contagious disease; and that when fumigation is required by the Commissioner of Agriculture, that the stock shall be properly fumigated. Immediately upon receipt of the filing with the Commissioner of Agriculture of this certificate, he shall, in addition, make such further investigation as to the moral standing and integrity of the applicant as will satisfy him that the applicant is entitled to receive a certificate. A fee of $5 shall be required from the applicant, upon receipt of which the Commissioner of Agriculture may issue a certificate permitting the applicant to ship into the State. Each box, bale or package of nursery stock from outside the State shall bear a tag on which is printed a copy of the certificate of this State, and also a copy of the certificate of the State in which it originates.

Another section is held to class greenhouse plants as nursery stock. It is as follows:

Section 8. The term, "nursery stock," within the meaning of this act, shall include all fruit trees and vines; shade trees and forest trees, whether such shade or forest trees be especially grown for sale in a nursery, or taken from the forests and offered for sale; all scions, seedlings or propagation stock; all classes of berry plants, roses, evergreens, shrubbery or ornamentals, also such greenhouse plants, cut flowers taken from plants, bushes, shrubs or other trees growing in this State, which may be a medium for disseminating injurious insect pests and contagious diseases.

The commissioner thinks the law is plain as defining greenhouse plants as nursery stock, but he has not yet read the law as declaring that cut flowers are nursery stock, although the words "cut flowers" immediately follow the words "greenhouse plants" in Section 8. The meaning of the law is somewhat obscured by its phraseology, but it seems questionable if the courts would uphold the commissioner's interpretation. Even the commissioner does not consider the possibility of cut flower shipments harboring injurious insects as warranting requiring their certification, even if the words do appear in the law, and it is open to question if greenhouse plants ever were known to carry insects sufficiently injurious or diseases sufficiently contagious to bring them within the meaning of a statute designed to protect a State against San Jose scale. As a matter of fact, some of the leading States of the Union, floriculturally speaking, do not inspect greenhouses or consider any of the insect pests or diseases of greenhouse plants as of sufficient importance to require legislation against their spread.

But a test of the Texas law, or its interpretation, if ever made, will have to be instituted by the florists of Texas rather than by outsiders. Few florists ship enough greenhouse plants to Texas to make it worth while for them to take out a Texas license, even at the small cost of $5—all that the most of them will do is to require cash in advance on all shipments to Texas and let the customer in Texas fight it out with the local authorities.

New York and New Jersey Plant Growers' Association Dinner, Hotel Astor, New York, February 2, 1910.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The week opens with zero weather, the coldest of the season. Values fell gradually last week, but the market cleaned up daily. No special events relieved the monotony of the week, but for the last two days before Lent begins several dinners, receptions and society weddings were listed.

Beauties have increased heavily in supply, and 50 cents would buy the best of them February 5. This is likely to be the top for some time. The quality is superb. Richmond is scarce, and the finest of them bring good figures. Of Killarney there is always an abundance. More My Maryland could be disposed of. The novelties in roses always find in New York a ready market. The orchid arrivals still are abundant and the sources of supply increasing. Its growing popularity is evident in the number of wholesalers handling them. Cypripediums have never sold at such low prices as now. Gardenias also have dropped from their pedestal, and only the best maintain the January rates. Lilies and valley are lower than a week ago, and tulips are hard to dispose of at the cost of the bulbs. Daffodils, freesias and hyacinths are excellent in quality and sufficient for all demands. Violets sell at from 50 cents down, and this is the likely quotation until Easter.

The novelties in carnations hold at 5 cents to 6 cents, but for the old varieties 2 cents to 4 cents is the extreme quotation, and of the surplus, thousands are cleared at 2 cents. The shipments are heavy and promise to continue. In quality they have never been excelled.

Plant Growers' Dinner.

The New York and New Jersey Plant Growers' Association celebrated Wednesday evening, February 2. It was the second annual dinner, and was served in the artistically decorated, handsome banquet room of the Hotel Astor. The members and guests made merry, to the number of seventy-five, and all the members of the society contributed to the plant, orchid and valley table decorations. Birds made melody. A splendid orchestra supplied popular music, and the menu was as complete as the most expert gastronomist could have desired.

President Julius Roehrs, Jr., welcomed the members and guests in well chosen periods, and put upon the shoulders of Fred L. Atkins the responsibility of toastmaster, which position he filled admirably. A silent toast was given to the memory of Messrs. Hallock, Scott and Dreyer, who had passed away since the meeting of a year ago. Interesting addresses covering every department of the plant industry were made by W. H. Siebrecht, Jr., Anton Schultheis, H. C. Steinhoff, Louis Dupuy, W. H. Siebrecht, Sr., Louis Schmutz, John Donaldson and A. L. Miller. President Pierson, of the S. A. F., covered twenty-five years of horticultural history in an able address, and said the florists' business is yet in its infancy. W. J. Stewart spoke eloquently for Boston, and assured all of welcome at the great convention and flower show of the coming year in that horticultural city. John G. Esler dilated upon the Hail Association's record in the last decade, and warned the growers not insured of the possibility of the safety belt being contracted. Mr. Schultheis spoke practically for an American Covent Garden in New York. W. J. Elliott spoke for modern methods of plant selling. J. G. Whilldin, of Philadelphia, and Mr. Drury, of Hews & Co., spoke for the interests they represent. A. J. Guttman spoke feelingly of his enthusiasm caught from the harmonious spirit of the occasion. J. H. Pepper spoke for the press, emphasizing the mutual necessity of coöperation, and the ladies, though last, were not forgotten by the genial toastmaster.

The society is flourishing. Nearly every grower in this section is a member of it. It demonstrates forcibly the benefits of harmony and coöperation.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club's ladies' night is Monday, February 14. This is also carnation night. W. H. Taplin will lecture on "Carnations," and prizes are offered for the best exhibits. Flowers may be sent in care of Walter F. Sheridan, 39 West Twenty-eighth street. An interesting entertainment will be provided for the ladies, and the need of a home of its own for the club will be further emphasized.

The Elberon Horticultural Society's banquet Monday evening, February 7, was held at the Deal Country Club, Deal, N. J. Several from New York attended it. This was the second annual banquet of this flourishing society.

Friday evening, February 11, the annual smoker and reception of the Horticultural Society at Orange, N. J., takes place, and that will end the festivities until March 17, when the Florists' Club will enjoy its annual dinner at the Fifth Avenue banquet hall and entertain many of the visiting rosarians.

Wednesday, February 9, at 4 p. m., the monthly meeting of the Horticultural Society of New York was held at the Museum of Natural History. President Wood lectured on "The Ideals of Horticulture."

The Purity freesias, from William Mathews, of Great Neck, L. I., are handled solely by Philip Kessler, of the Coogan building.

M. C. Ebel, of the Aphine Mfg. Co., will personally superintend the public exhibit and test of the insecticide Saturday, February 12, at the establishment of the H. F. Michell Co., Philadelphia.

The selling of several of the buildings on Twenty-eighth street of late, wherein are housed a number of the oldest and most prominent florists in the wholesale business, has stirred up interest in other localities that must ultimately bear fruit and may carry further west of their pres-batch of ten weeks' stocks for flowering at Memorial day. The choicer the strain, the less liability there will be of an overwhelming preponderance of singles. White, lavender, blue and scarlet are the most desirable colors to grow. Sow the seed in a warm house, but remove to cooler quarters soon after germination. Stocks, if grown warm, will be lanky and valueless. At all stages of growth they want cool treatment and an abundance of fresh air.

Lilium Candidum.

The Madonna lily is less of a factor now at Easter than some years ago. This is largely due to the growers purchasing the old and worthless type, which makes big bulbs and has narrow foliage, weak stems and poor flowers. The broad-leaved variety is so superior to the other type that no one who has once grown it will ever want to see the other again. If you can see the buds peeping in the ends of the shoots of your candidums by February 20, you can have them in flower by giving them an average night temperature of 60 degrees. This is rather warm treatment for this lily, but as Easter comes unusually early, it is necessary to subject it to harder forcing than usual. Feed the plants liberally, as they are stronger rooting subjects than the longiflorums. Do not allow any aphis to get a foothold on the plants. A spraying with a nicotine solution once a week will keep these pests in the background.

Genistas.

Genistas do not take kindly to forcing. The cooler they are grown the better. Presuming that the plants wanted for Easter have been stored in a cold cellar or pit and kept just clear of freezing, they should be moved into a cool greenhouse about February 15. They will not require a higher night temperature than 45 degrees. The warmer they are grown, the more speedily will the flowers shake off and fade. They can hardly be overwatered, and it is important that there be no opportunity for them to dry out, as one thorough drying means that the plants might just as well be thrown on the rubbish heap.

Ficus Elastica.

If there are any old plants of Ficus elastica carrying an abundance of cuttings, it is a good time now to root a number of them. A month ago would have been even better, but with a good bottom heat possible for some weeks yet, there will be no trouble in rooting them. A good plan is to put each cutting in a 2-inch or 2½-inch pot, filled with sphagnum and sand. Tie up the leaves, so that they will go closer in the propagating box. Plunge to the brim in sand. Soak well and keep watered right along. Of course there should be no standing allowed to strike them, and the brisker the bottom heat the quicker they will root. In summer the ringing method of propagation is to be preferred, but at this season we find the other plan better and we use very few cuttings. Choose the warmest part of the propagating bench and do not be afraid to keep it well soaked with water.

Adiantums.

It is a good plan, when the fronds have been pretty well cleaned off any of the adiantum plants, to cut off the balance and keep the pots tolerably dry for two or three weeks. A rest always makes them start away more vigorously and any repotting required can be done during the resting period. A favorite practice is to divide the plants when they have become unwieldy. We have never found that these divisions make nearly so good plants as such as are grown from seedlings. It is a mistake to suppose that peat in any form is required for adiantums. They grow far better in good fibrous loam to which has been added some leaf-mold, spent hotbed manure and sand, and when the pots are well filled with roots a watering with cow or sheep manure once in eight or ten days will greatly benefit them. These remarks refer principally to A. cuneatum, A. gracillimum, A. hybridum and that useful variety, A. Croweanum.

Show Pelargoniums.

With the lengthening days and increased solar heat, show pelargoniums are making rapid headway and will require quite frequent spacing. Unless wanted in flower late, pinching should now be discontinued. Potting should be attended to. It is not a good plan to permit the plants to become potbound before shifting them. It is surprising how speedily they will get into that condition, unless carefully watched. For a final potting, a compost containing two-thirds turfy loam, one-third old cow manure and a 4-inch pot of fine bone to each two bushels of soil, answers well. Drain efficiently and ram the soil in the pots firmly. Grow cool and airy. Spray once a week with a nicotine solution, and you should have some splendid plants for May sales. Do not do any propagating now; the proper time is in August.

TEXAS HANDICAPS FLORISTS.

Restricts Supplies of Its Citizens.

The Commissioner of Agriculture of the State of Texas, that great commonwealth in which all-wise solons once passed a law decreeing that railroad trains must under no circumstances be more than a half hour late, has undertaken the enforcing of a legislative enactment which will put the florists of the state to great inconvenience. The law, in brief, is interpreted to provide that shipments of greenhouse plants originating outside the State can not be admitted to the State unless the shipper has first filed with the Texas authorities a certificate of inspection and paid a license fee of $5.

The florists in the State of Texas never have been able to grow all the stock they need, and doubtless never will be able to make supply fit the varying demand, any more than the florists of other States are able to do, and the effect of the law as interpreted will be to handicap the citizens of the State, rather than to help or protect them.

The act in question is the Orchard and Nursery Inspection Law, passed March 11, 1909, but it is only recently that attempt has been made to enforce its provisions as against florists. Now those who ship greenhouse plants from outside of Texas to florists in that State receive letters from the Commissioner of Agriculture similar to the following:

> Information has come to this office that you have made a shipment of floral plants, or nursery stock to Texas, without shipping tag showing a printed copy of the Texas permit authorizing you to transact business in this state.
> I am enclosing you a copy of the Texas Orchard and Nursery Inspection Law, which you will please read carefully.
> I beg to advise you that any further shipments received in this state will be held subject to inspection. All express agents have been notified to that effect, and any such action will cost a local inspection fee in addition to the fee required for taking out permit in state.
> Please read the law carefully and advise us ascertain exactly what is necessary to be done to comply with our law.
> Awaiting your prompt and early reply before taking further steps with reference to your previous shipments, I beg to remain most truly yours.

ent center the activities that have dominated and developed for a quarter of a century in this important department of the florists' business.

Mr. Hunter, for many years with J. H. Small & Sons, New York, and formerly in the wholesale business with Mr. Hammond, was run over February 4 by an automobile. A rib was broken and he was badly shaken, but is progressing nicely towards recovery.

George Saltford has been serving his country on jury for the last three weeks. Interesting cases, involving all manner of crimes, make a return to the wholesale flower business seem like a rest.

Flowers are being suggested in many of the florists' retail windows for St. Valentine's day. Heart-shaped boxes are the principal kind to be used. The custom of sending flowers on that day is growing rapidly.

John A. Foley, of Lecakes & Co., has added another wagon to his express enterprise.

Myer Othile, of A. J. Guttman's staff, celebrated his thirty-first birthday Saturday, February 5. He is now one of the veterans.

G. E. Bradshaw has gone up higher in the Coogan building, to the second floor. B. S. Slinn, Jr., needs all of his big store for his violet shipments.

The last reports from John Reimels, who was taken suddenly ill at Pittsburg, are encouraging, and his full recovery is assured.

Charles A. Krick is now proprietor of the business of the late W. C. Krick, Brooklyn, having purchased the interest of his mother. Mrs. Krick starts in a few days for a visit among relatives in southern California.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Good roses are not plentiful and American Beauties are scarce. Carnations are abundant but prices are good, from $3 to $4 per hundred. Narcissi are plentiful but Roman hyacinths are scarce. Daffodils and jonquils are making their appearance and sell well. Tulips are not very plentiful. There are quite a few violets on the market and they meet with ready sale.

Azaleas seem to be a glut and the demand after Christmas seems to be getting less every year. Primroses are selling well at 50 cents a pot, but cyclamens seem to go rather slow.

Funeral work is keeping up well and some of the florists have as much at times as they can handle. The weather has been fine, with good sunshine, and all stock is taking on a better hue.

Various Notes.

The Wm. L. Rock Flower Co. greenhouses are a pretty sight. The carnations are in full crop.

James Payne's show window was well decorated last week. His Primula obconicas seem to be perfection.

There is a rumor that in the near future there will be built a large plant to raise cut flowers for the Kansas City market. All we can say is that there is room for such a place that can grow first-class stock and can furnish it when needed.

The Geo. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. is established in its new quarters at 1123 Grand avenue. It is a large room and the new fixtures are fine. The location is more central and the manager is catering for more retail business.

Your correspondent made a visit to the W. A. Rule farm, which is located a mile and a half south of a small town named Dodson, a suburb of Kansas City. There are 240 acres in this farm. Ed Pratt, formerly a florist of this city, is superintendent. He has built three large greenhouses, one 30x250 and two 28x250, heated by steam. Everything is up to date. Mr. Pratt is growing one house in tomatoes, which are eight feet tall, grown to single stem, and there are about 2,000 plants in this house, loaded with fruit from the bottom to the top. He is now picking ripe tomatoes, from fifty to 120 pounds a day, and brings them to the city in an automobile. The present price is 20 cents a pound, wholesale. He also has part of one house in sweet peas, in full bloom ever since Christmas. He picks from 2,000 to 3,000 a day. One florist takes them all at 75 cents per hundred. Part of this house is in leaf lettuce and beets. The third house is in head lettuce, which is fine. His stock plants of mums are looking well and he expects to plant about 25,000 for the Kansas City market. He has plans drawn for a large violet house which will be built this summer. He also expects to plant a large lot of snapdragon for cut flowers. They have an abundance of water, a large lake within 150 feet of the greenhouses. There are five acres of water in this lake, which is stocked with fine fish. There is a boathouse with a gasoline launch to use in the summer, also a bath house. A steam pump stands on the shore that forces the water to a big reservoir upon a hill ninety-five feet above the lake. The water for the greenhouses is taken from this and the force on the water is good. They have also a garage for three automobiles, next to the boiler room, heated by steam. All bunching and packing is done in this large room, which has a cement floor. The soil on this farm is excellent. Mr. Pratt attends to the marketing of the output and his foreman, Walter Bridges, oversees all of the work and men. They have six men at present. A large ice house by the lake contains 8,000 tons of ice twelve inches thick.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The executive committee and other members of the American Rose Society have held two conferences in New York in regard to the details of the coming rose show. The total amount of prizes offered in the schedule reaches some $1,500. In conjunction with the rose show the Horticultural Society of New York has a preliminary prize schedule, the total of which comes to $700.

S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia, offers a special prize of $25 to be awarded in the discretion of the committee.

Moore, Hentz & Nash, New York, offer a silver cup valued at $50 for the best six roses, two to be white and four to be red, pink or yellow, American Beauties excepted.

Wm. F. Kasting Co., Buffalo, offers a prize of $25 wherever it can be best used.

The Toronto Horticultural Society offers its silver and bronze medals.

Arthur T. Boddington, New York, offers a cash prize of $25.

Stumpp & Walter Co., New York, offers a special prize, for private gardeners only, for twenty-five Richmond roses, $10 and $5.

A valuable paper is being prepared by W. S. Sibson upon northern Pacific coast roses.

The Horticultural Society of New York will issue jointly with the American Rose Society the Preliminary Prize List and rules within a few days. Joseph A. Manda has been appointed superintendent of exhibits.

AMONG BOSTON GROWERS.

Backer & Co., of Billerica, are among the best known of the carnation specialists shipping their cut to the Boston market. Their new scarlet seedling, Red Prince (Manley x Queen), was carrying a tremendous crop when seen, but E. T. Wheeler, of the firm, said it was off crop as compared with Christmas. It has a long, wiry stem and is of clear scarlet color. A seedling with some Prosperity blood in it is grown in quantity. It has some color in midwinter, but comes pure white later. It has an ideal stem and is fragrant. Outside of a tendency to split at times, it would seem to be a valuable thing. While the greater part of the bench space is devoted to home raised seedlings, Variegated Lawson, Winsor, Ruby, May Day, Pink Delight, Beacon and other standard sorts are also grown. The grower, Gustave Thommen, believes there is a good field open in the hybridization as against cross fertilization of carnations, and is intending to follow this upon the same lines as A. C. Zvolanek in producing his winter race of sweet peas. With this object in view, he has procured seeds from Italy, Germany, France and Spain of various species of dianthus which he intends to work with. Many of these are now almost in flower, and it will be possible to start hybridization soon. The getting away from the constant in-breeding and the infusion of other blood is an interesting experiment, the results of which will be watched with much interest.

L. E. Small, of Tewksbury, has a nice house of sweet peas, from which he has been cutting since August, the variety Mrs. A. Wallace being specially good. A house of Carnation Fair Maid looked well. Winsor, Fenn, Beacon, Queen and White Fair Maid are also grown. A bench of Dimorphotheca aurantiaca was just coming into flower, and its beautiful orange flowers should sell well. Single and double violets and marguerites are also grown here.

At Albert Roper's, Fair Maid, one of Mr. Roper's introductions, fills two houses and is found a paying sort. This variety, carried over two years in the same benches, has netted $1.50 and $1 per plant, a record which would be hard to beat. Considerable space is devoted to the new scarlet seedling, William Penn. It has been Mr. Roper's intention to disseminate this variety in 1910 but some stem-rot showed itself, and unless this has disappeared by another season it will not be sent out. Several long benches are planted with Bay State, sent out in 1909 and winner of the gold medal at the last convention of the American Carnation Society. One or two other seedlings are grown in quantity, while a bench containing a considerable number of new seedlings is interesting. Some have the earmarks of good things.

Forest City, Ia.—Willard Secor, of the Hill City Greenhouses, is vice-president general of the National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1910: President, F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; vice-president, F. W. Vick, Rochester, N. Y.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg, Pa.

Annual convention, Rochester, N. Y., August 16 to 19, 1910.

RESULTS.
We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

RETAILERS like Carnation May Day because of its superior keeping qualities.

ANONYMOUS inquiries are not answered. Sign your name if you expect attention.

J. A. VALENTINE says that the selling prices of florists' products have not advanced in proportion to the cost of high living.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending the REVIEW $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

DON'T substitute. The fact that you gave a better variety, or a higher priced sort, as often is the case, does not count in the average purchaser's mind; what he wants is what he ordered or his money back—promptly.

FINDS IT SUFFICIENT.

There are many factors which may influence an advertiser part of the time, but it is actual results which influence him most of the time.

I have saved every copy of the Review issued since I first subscribed, several years ago, and would not take $1 (the price of a whole year's subscription) for any one copy. The Review is the only florists' paper I take, as it is quite sufficient and covers the ground in an up-to-date manner; it is beyond comparison with any sample copy of other florists' papers I have ever seen.—H. C. Smith, Mgr., Colville Nursery and Greenhouses, Colville, Wash., Feb. 3, 1910.

OBITUARY.

Eugene K. Diemer.

Eugene K. Diemer, aged 39 years, head of the Diemer Floral Co., St. Louis, Mo., died last week after a lingering illness. He leaves a wife and son to mourn his loss. The funeral took place from his late residence, 1805 South Broadway, Friday, February 4. Quite a few in the trade were in attendance. Mrs. Diemer will continue the business.

COUNCIL OF HORTICULTURE.

The National Council of Horticulture held a meeting at the Congress hotel, Chicago, January 17, 1910. There were present C. E. Kendel and C. Cropp, from the American Seed Trade Association; E. D. Smith and W. N. Rudd, from the Society of American Florists; J. H. Burdett, of the press bureau service; J. C. Vaughan, chairman, and H. C. Irish, secretary. Letters or telegrams were read from J. Horace McFarland, J. Otto Thilow, F. R. Pierson and C. L. Watrous.

The term as delegates at large of Professors W. B. Alwood, S. A. Beach and S. B. Green having expired, Professors Alwood and Beach were elected to succeed themselves and Professor J. C. Blair, of Urbana, Ill., was elected to succeed Professor Green. It was announced that C. Cropp and C. E. Kendel were the authorized representatives in the council from the American Seed Trade Association, J. Otto Thilow, E. D. Smith and W. N. Rudd from the Society of American Florists, C. L. Watrous and Guy A. Bryant from the American Association of Nurserymen, H. S. Watson and J. F. Wilson from the National Nut Growers' Association.

The secretary reported $183.22 on hand and $200 available from the American Seed Trade Association, or a total of $383.22 for the current year's work.

J. H. Burdett made a report on the press bureau work. The secretary was instructed to ask the assistance of experts in the preparation of articles and to arrange a schedule for their distribution as soon as practicable. Some sixty subjects were suggested, one-half of which the members present pledged to prepare. It was arranged to send out at least ten installments this spring, beginning the latter part of February.

THE TAX ON GROWING STOCK.

Readers of the REVIEW may remember that a recent number of the paper—the issue of January 13—contained a letter from Christ. Winterich, of Defiance, O., giving a brief account of his experience in connection with the taxation of the stock in his greenhouses. In another letter, just received, Mr. Winterich speaks of the urgent need of a general agitation of this subject, and suggests that it would be an excellent topic for discussion at the next convention of the S. A. F. Mr. Winterich also encloses a letter which was written to him by James R. Norton, of Akron, O., and which reads substantially as follows:

"I noticed in the REVIEW your letter under the head of 'Tax on Growing Stock.' Now, growing stock in greenhouses is not taxable, according to the statutes of Ohio. They wanted to tax me here, in Akron, but I went to the board of review and made a kick and they admitted they could not tax the growing stock in my greenhouses, though they could tax my tools. There was a florist in Youngstown, O., who was threatened with a tax on his house of Easter lilies, but he took the matter into court and the judge threw the case out, on the ground that no valuation could be placed on the lilies or on other growing stock."

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Supplies were on the upgrade all last week, and prices naturally traveling in the opposite direction. Beauties and roses held their own in good shape, the principal weakness being in carnations. It has happened now for several weeks in succession that the early part of the period would see a stiff carnation market, with such an increase in supply that the later days brought a slump. Each week of the last three or four this condition has become more pronounced. Last week the weakness in prices was accentuated by the sudden drop in the temperature, which shut off all the buyers who do business outdoors and also cut down the transient trade which on Saturday takes immense quantities of stock, especially carnations, out of the Greek stores.

The present week opened with the market much easier than it has been on any recent Monday. The supply of Beauties is not large, but the demand seems to have fallen away to a point where moderate receipts suffice to satisfy the buyers. The price already was weaker February 7, and the prospect for the first

We want to hear from large users of Carnations who have not previously bought of us. We can make it interesting for all such—not the cheapest, but the best Carnations on this market, and the largest supply.

Sweet Peas

We are now handling large quantities of long, fancy Peas, in white, pink, lavender, and a few of fancy colors. The way the stock is coming in indicates we are going to repeat our last season's great success with this specialty. If your trade likes fine peas, better get in touch with us.

VIOLETS For St. Valentine's Day
FEBRUARY 14
We are headquarters on these in the St. Louis Market.
Fine home grown stock in CARNATIONS in all varieties.
Wm. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co.
WHOLESALE FLORISTS 1316 Pine Street, ST. LOUIS, MO.

few days of Lent was for a declining Beauty market. Many houses report Richmond as hanging fire, and prices have been below those of white or pink roses of equal grade. The rose market is easier, but with no great increase in supplies as yet. Killarney, indeed, continues decidedly scarce. The wholesalers, however, have nearly all come to one mind as to the prospect. They figure that, all the growers having been off crop at one time, it only needs a little bright spring weather to set them all cutting heavily from the new crop now about due. Indeed, the average wholesaler who gives thought to the future is looking for an unwieldy glut of both roses and carnations, the date of its arrival depending largely upon the weather. Wintry weather means its postponement, bright spring days its early arrival.

Lent began February 9, but it no longer cuts much figure in the flower market. Whatever reduction in demand Lent has occasioned has been more than made up for by the increasing importance of St. Valentine's day. There is a large amount of business booked for February 11 to 13. Violets, of course, have the largest part of this special demand, but sweet peas, which are in increased supply, also share in this special call. Tulips, jonquils and daffodils also are wanted, while red and bright pink carnations have been ordered freely. Violets have had several weeks of rather slow business, and the wholesalers hope to make up a little lost time for the growers this week.

Sweet peas are coming in much more heavily; all it will take is a little bright weather to make the peas both abundant and fine. Jonquils are much more plentiful than heretofore. These flowers have sold for $5 and $6 per hundred until the last few days because of the percentage of loss the growers sustained on their first batches. Daffodils are now available in quantity. Tulips have been selling steadily, but not at fancy prices; it has taken special fancy stock to get above $4 per hundred. Easter lilies and callas are abundant and there is plenty of valley. Freesia is selling slowly. Not so many Paper Whites are seen. The green goods situation is receiving more attention. There is now not much call for strings of asparagus, but bunches of plumosus and Sprengeri, especially the former, are in good request and bringing good prices. Smilax of good quality is available in fair quantity. Many of the wholesalers are wondering what they are going to do with their boxwood. Mexican ivy also is in large supply. Picking over ferns is a daily occupation.

Club Meeting.

Installation of officers drew an exceptionally large attendance at the meeting of the Florists' Club at the Union restaurant, February 3. President Asmus began his second term and E. F. Winterson, who has been treasurer for so long his reëlection is taken as a matter of course, started another year. L. H. Win-terson was returned to the office of secretary after a year's rest, the only really new officer being Vice-President H. E. Philpott, one of the club's suburban members. He was at Tacoma, Wash., that night, and telegraphed his regrets. President Asmus appointed his standing committees as follows:

Good of the club—Herman Schiller, Frank Pasternick, John P. Degnan.

Sports—T. C. Yarnall, A. Zech, Frank Ayers.

Transportation—E. F. Winterson, M. Barker, F. Lautenschlager.

The good of the club committee was instructed to prepare a ladies' night for the March meeting. Something elaborate is expected, because a good appropriation was made with the understanding that the club pay half the expenses and that the sale of tickets cover the other half. For this event H. N. Bruns, A. C. Kohlbrand and Duncan Robertson were added to the committee.

Edward J. Fichter, J. F. Dumke and William Graff were elected to membership and Joseph Straus, of the A. L. Randall Co., was proposed.

C. W. Johnson discoursed on the Pittsburg meeting of the Carnation Society and J. C. Vaughan spoke for the Illinois State Florists' Association and the necessity for supporting the asking for an appropriation from the legislature in the interest of the experimental greenhouses at the State University. There was a meeting of the advisory committee of the state association at the Union restaurant the following evening to consider ways and means.

It is planned to take a good delegation to the meeting of the state society at Champaign next week, leaving Chicago at 9:40 a. m., February 15, on the Illinois Central railroad. The fare is only $2.55 each way.

Refreshments were served as usual.

Various Notes.

John Orsesky died Thursday at St. Bernard's hospital, after only four days' illness with appendicitis. Everyone who fails to recognize him by his full name will know him as "Whitey." He had worked in the city store of Wietor Bros. for seven years, and was known and liked by everyone who frequents the market. He was at work on the Sunday preceding his death. The George Wittbold Co. has been forcing quite a little more white lilac than was needed for its own retail stores. This has been consigned to Percy Jones, E. C. Amling and others.

The board of directors of the Flower Growers' Market corporation met recently and elected the following officers: President, Walter Tonner; vice-president, Frank Beu; treasurer, Miss Hertha Tonner; financial secretary and manager, John Sinner; recording secretary, Alex. Henderson. Mr. Tonner some time since ceased to operate his greenhouses; he is now employed in the Northwestern freight house.

W. E. Lynch, at E. H. Hunt's, says it does not take an expert to tell when the violet growers have been fumigating with hydrocyanic acid gas.

A. Lange had six men at Ottawa, Ill., the other day, putting up one of the most elaborate wedding decorations he has executed this season.

Frank Johnson, of the A. L. Randall Co., is calling on customers in Toledo and Detroit this week.

Mr. and Mrs. C. W. McKellar find much of special interest at the Coliseum, where the automobile show is on. The Wittbold Co. had the largest decoration of the season there this week.

Kyle & Foerster state that three of the big houses of the Benthey establishment at New Castle are to be planted to Beauties this season.

The Poehlmann Bros. Co. is beginning to cut choice cattleyas in considerable quantity. August Poehlmann says they will add to the orchids this season so that they will have two large houses of them next year.

Bassett & Washburn say that lilies this winter have paid them better than lilies usually have at Easter.

Phil Schupp, at J. A. Budlong's, says he looks for an early and large increase in the rose supply.

It is reported that Fred Lieberman, of the Vaughan & Sperry staff, committed matrimony Thursday evening, February 3.

E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., says that the Saturday before Ash Wednesday for uncounted years has been the busiest Saturday of the season with them, larger sales than any other Saturday, unless a holiday made extra business. This year the Saturday before Ash Wednesday fell February 5. It was a big day all through the market, but wa cut into by the extremely cold weather, which shut off the buyers who take th cheap stock and tone up the market.

The Market.

Business continues quite satisfactory. There are, of course, off days, but the general tone is good. Carnations are now finer than at any other time, and prices on them have not changed materially. Violets, on the other hand, are coming into a heavier crop and show a weakening tendency. The singles are now remarkably fine, and the crop in the bulk of greenhouses should this season last until Easter. Roses are not in heavy crop, and are moving satisfactorily, Beauties, Killarney and White Killarney particularly so. More Easter lilies are arriving, also callas, with prices about the same.

Dutch bulbous stock is much more abundant and a little lower in price. Golden Spur narcissi sell well. Princeps and ornatus move slowly. Marguerites are arriving a little more freely. There is a great difference in the quality of these. There is no trouble in selling any of them. Some good antirrhinum and mignonette are seen. Freesia is somewhat on the wane. Wallflowers, myosotis, ten weeks' stocks, English primroses, calendulas, pansies and other spring flowers are coming in more freely. Adiantum is temporarily rather short, but Asparagus Sprengeri and plumosus are in good supply. Gardenias continue in demand, while cattleyas and dendrobiums are selling well.

Various Notes.

There is a growing feeling in favor of holding the forthcoming S. A. F. national show in Horticultural and Symphony halls, bridging the avenue between the two halls. For the construction of special gardens some weeks of preparation are necessary. At Mechanics' hall this would be out of the question. These special features, such as Dutch and Italian gardens, are what draw the crowds, far more than long tables of roses and carnations or stereotyped groups of plants.

George E. Buxton announces that for the coming national show he will offer $25 in gold, to be divided into three prizes for the best vases of 100, fifty and twenty-five blooms of Carnation Bon Ami, $15 for the first prize, $8 for the second prize and $2 for the third prize. He does this to set the ball a-rolling for the biggest and best show ever held in the United States.

R. C. Bridgham, of the Newtonville Avenue Greenhouses, has purchased the stock and good will of Albert Scott, florist at 67 Beacon street, Boston, and will continue the same as a high grade flower store, paying special attention to wedding, reception and dinner decorations.

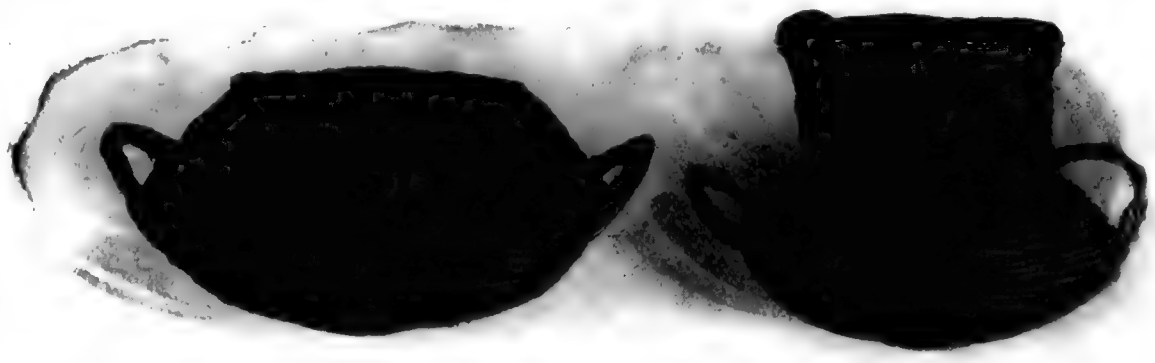
Remember the club meeting February 15. The Cottage Gardens Co. will send several of its novelties, while quite a number of other new varieties are promised. Mr. Goddard's paper will undoubtedly bring out a lively discussion, and carnation night promises, as usual, to bring out a record attendance. All exhibits from a distance addressed to Horticultural hall, Boston, and express prepaid, will be carefully staged and well cared for.

John K. M. L. Farquhar spent a few days in New York this week on business, returning via Lenox.

William Whitman, M. Sullivan, gardener, showed half a dozen fine cinerarias of the large flowered type at Horticultural hall February 5, which were awarded a gratuity.

Recent changes among prominent gardeners include Thomas Howden, of Whitinsville, who assumes charge April 1 of an extensive new estate being laid out for Henry Hornblower, at Plymouth, Mass.; H. Terry, of Hingham, Mass., goes to manage R. H. White's estate at Chestnut Hill, his place in Hingham being taken by Henry T. May, now with William Downs at Chestnut Hill.

The North Shore Horticultural Society held its annual banquet in Lee's hall, Manchester, February 4. Over 200 were in attendance, including several from Boston and vicinity. It was a thoroughly enjoyable affair in every respect. Following the banquet came speech-making, songs and other entertainment, the rest of the evening being given up to dancing.



John W. Duncan, the recently elected club president, hopes to be able to attend the coming club meeting. Sickness at home prevented his attending the annual banquet. Mr. Duncan expects to leave about March 1 for his new post in Spokane, Wash.

Philip L. Carbone is away on a European trip. His business shows a continued increase since his new store in Boylston street was opened. It is hoped that Mr. Carbone will make a fine exhibit at the forthcoming national show.

Mann Bros., of Randolph, are handling quantities of well grown Lilium speciosum at present. They are also bringing in fine lots of cut lilac.

William H. Elliott and Alexander Montgomery expect to attend the rose convention in New York February 16. Several other local growers are also planning to be on hand.

years. February is at present giving us some good, seasonable winter weather, which should last till the middle of March, if the ground hog theory proves correct. Candlemas day could hardly have been clearer. February 7 was one of the coldest mornings of the winter.

Robert Laurie, traveling salesman for W. W. Rawson & Co., lost a splendid collection of nerines during the January cold wave. They were in a greenhouse at his home in East Mansfield, and steam went down during a night of 10 degrees below zero, while Mr. Laurie was out on the road, destroying every bulb. In addition to a fine collection of named varieties, there were many choice seedlings of Mr. Laurie's raising which could not be duplicated.

The H. E. Fiske Seed Co. is having an exceptionally good call for both flower and vegetable seeds. They carry many special lines for trade growers, and are building up a first-class business.

James Wheeler, for the last twenty-two and one-half years superintendent for Joseph H. White, Brookline, has purchased thirty-two acres of excellent land in Natick, Mass., and will start in business there on his own account April 1. A greenhouse 60x300 will be erected the present season for carnations. Phloxes, peonies and other perennials, as well as choice trees and shrubs, will later be grown. The site is an ideal one and Mr. Wheeler's skill as a grower leaves no room for doubt that he will succeed in his new venture. As an active worker and past president of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club and Massachusetts Horticultural Society, the name of James Wheeler is a familiar one.

The severe cold wave February 7 descended unheralded and caught some growers napping. We have not, however, heard of any serious damage. A number of cut flower shipments arrived in a frozen condition.

Massachusetts Horticultural Society.

The midwinter show at Horticultural hall, February 26 to 28, promises to be equal in magnitude to the regular spring exhibition, which is this year to be omitted, owing to the big orchid show following so closely after its usual date. Quite a number of new classes have just been added, which should appeal especially to commercial growers. These are as follows:

It was voted at the last meeting of the board of trustees to suspend all exhibitions for 1910 after the orchid show in May. PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

"When the days begin to lengthen the cold begins to strengthen." The closing week of the social season has been marked by an active demand for all varieties of flowers that was insufficient to hold prices firm in the face of the increasing supply. The decline was most noticeable in carnations, in sweet peas, in violets, and, greatest surprise of all, in Beauties. It is probable that the decline in Beauties was quite as much due to the fact that the average quality was hardly up to the mark as to anything else; a flower must inspire admiration to become popular. The carnation market held well February 3, but increased receipts the next two days were more than the market could stand, despite excellent buying. The little additional activity occasioned by the close of the season was more than offset by the extraordinarily cold weather, which destroyed transient business.

Sweet peas, although quite as good as they were a week ago, have dropped back to $1 and sometimes 75 cents, due to increased receipts. The consumption is large. Violets have become quite plentiful and, while they sell well when the weather permits of street wear, extreme cold is most prejudicial to the violet. Spring flowers are better and more plentiful. Golden Spur is the daffodil of the day. The transactions in this variety alone have been heavy. Both yellow and white tulips can be had in quantity; they are not especially popular. Freesia is obtainable in quantity, the good stock going well.

The sales in greens have been enormous, asparagus leading the way, with adiantum an active factor at good prices.

To return to the more-sought-after flowers, Killarney is the leading rose and the quality of some of the stock is worthy of admiration. Richmond and Bride come next. Cattleyas are quiet; the heavy crop has been marketed and the moderate supply is about equal to the demand. Gardenias and valley, while much used, show no special change from the report of two weeks ago. Cyps are pretty nearly over. The supply of Easter lilies has been decreased by the temporary elimination of an important factor. Callas are becoming more plentiful.

The Storm.

Sunday morning, February 6, saw the severest storm that has visited this city in two years, a severe northerly gale increasing the distress of the zero temperature that came with it. The storm raged with great severity all night, causing anxiety in all the greenhouses near the city, but so far as learned everyone withstood the cold successfully. There were several close shaves, one instance being reported where the temperature of the house fell to 34 degrees, due to insufficient boiler capacity. The temperature moderated the following morning and with it the gale.

Carnation Pink Delight.

It may be of interest to carnation growers who were unable to attend the Pittsburg convention to know that of the carnations introduced a year ago none is in such lively request as Pink Delight. Pink Delight, an introduction of Fred Dorner & Sons Co., is a shade or two brighter than Enchantress, a little smaller in size, fragrant and long stemmed, especially so in the fall, when long-stemmed carnations are scarce. It is commanding $1 more today in the Philadelphia market than any other variety, saving possibly a few fancies. The stock is so scarce in comparison with the demand that none of the growers will take orders for Pink Delight unless with it come orders for some of the varieties they are most anxious to sell. Samuel S. Pennock, in speaking of this variety, called especial attention to the fact that it is a good keeper, a quality of first importance in every commercial variety.

Joseph Heacock was asked, on his return from the carnation convention in Pittsburg, how the carnation growers liked his new carnation, Dorothy Gordon. Mr. Heacock said the interest taken in the new variety had been most encouraging. Everyone who saw it seemed to be interested and appreciative of its fine points.

Speaking about Dorothy Gordon, Mr. Heacock said that he firmly believes this variety to be the most profitable carnation ever introduced. It has been so with him, he said, and he sees no reason why it should not be so with other growers. When asked how the orders for the young plants are coming in, Mr. Heacock said that over 100,000 rooted cuttings had already been ordered. Of these, 70,000 have been sent out. When asked whether the supply would keep pace with so heavy a demand, Mr. Heacock said he felt confident that February and March, usually the heaviest months in carnation plant buying, will find sufficient cuttings of Dorothy Gordon at Wyncote to meet all requirements.

Coal.

Smith, Lineaweaver & Co. report the car situation as easier in both anthracite and bituminous regions. The tie-up experienced by the railroads following the storms of several weeks ago is gradually being overcome. The Pennsylvania railroad is now carrying coal readily, but the Baltimore & Ohio is still experiencing some difficulty is supplying cars. The orders for anthracite coal, steam sizes, are rather in excess of the supply, but all orders are being filled that have been placed a little in advance. The delay is greater in the bituminous fields. Business is active. Prices have not materially advanced.

The February Meeting.

The essayist of the evening sat down and one speaker after another rose to discuss the question of the hour, until ten or more had been heard. Some were serious, some witty, some sauced business with fun. The members were served with wheat and chaff, it being left to each member to sift one from the other. The various branches of the florist tree were fairly, evenly distributed. Each branch advocated its side with a fervor born of total disregard of opposing interest. The value of these discussions is enormous; no one can listen to them without deriving food for thought, with certain benefit therefrom.

Various Notes.

Albert M. Herr, of Lancaster, Pa., will speak on "Carnations" before the Florists' Club March 1.

C. H. Twinn, North Tonawanda, N. Y., is in this city looking after the interests of the King Construction Co.

Samuel F. Lilley, the youngest commission merchant in this city, is the latest nominee for membership in the Florists' Club.

John R. André, Doylestown, Pa., has shown marked ability as a Killarney specialist this season.

C. S. Levis, Aldan, Pa., has been making a success of his sweet peas this winter. Mr. Levis purchased the greenhouses of W. C. Smith, Sixtieth and Market streets, erecting them in good shape on his new place at Aldan, last fall.

Godfrey Aschmann has his 5,000 lilies, multiflorum, giganteum and Formosa, in excellent condition, nicely timed for Easter. His other stock looks well.

Frank Gall, until recently manager of the Century Flower Shop, has succeeded Frank S. Jackson as manager of the Thornhedge Nurseries. Mr. Gall will produce for three stores, no small undertaking. His friends are confident that he can make good in his new place.

R. Schoenhut, of Buffalo, N. Y., visited this city February 7.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. have a new imported pot cover that recommends itself to everyone who sees it, for business reasons.

A. C. Brown, Springfield, Ill., sent a vase of his new carnation, Sangamo, to the Florists' Club meeting February 1. Unfortunately, it failed to reach the city

PHIL.

All the growers and gardeners of Philadelphia and vicinity have been sent cards of invitation to a public test of the insecticide Aphine, at the store of the Henry F. Michell Co., 1018 Market street, Saturday afternoon, February 12, from 2 to 5 o'clock. The demonstrators request that any who can do so bring insect-infested stock for treatment. A large attendance is expected.

HUDSON, N. Y.—J. Bryant, of A. H. Hews & Co., the pottery firm, was a caller at R. W. Allen's and expressed the opinion that the healthy condition of the fine orchids here was chiefly due to the excellent pots they are grown in. Admitting this to be so, the combination cannot be beaten.

The Market.

Trade conditions last week were only fair. The dull weather which has prevailed during the last month has had a great effect on the supply of roses. Carnations are more plentiful, but the recent cloudy weather has weakened the stems. Bulbous stock is coming in larger quantities and is moving well.

B. Fohl, formerly with the Lebanon Greenhouses, has taken the position as florist at the Plainfield Reform School for Boys.

Rolker & Sons, New York, N. Y.; Mr. Knickman, with McHutchison & Co., New York, N. Y.; Charles Schwacke, with C. F. Meyer, New York, N. Y.

Floriculture at the Agricultural College.

The short course in floriculture at the Massachusetts Agricultural College began January 4 with the registration of ten. This registration includes: Albert C. Bradstreet, Topsfield, Mass.; Lydia A. Bowser, Cohasset, Mass.; George A. Gray, Beverly, Mass.; Edward L. McCarroll, Waban, Mass.; Albert Lewis, Rockaway, Long Island, N. Y.; John L. Killam, Boxford, Mass.; Willard M. Pease, Monson, Mass.; William Scace, Pittsfield, Mass.; Edwin G. Scott, Garfield, Wash.; Edwin R. Selkregg, North East, Pa.

The class has thus far taken three Saturday observation trips, the first to the commercial range of H. W. Field, Northampton, the second to the conservatories connected with Mt. Holyoke College, and the last to the large commercial establishment of A. N. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn. On each of these trips the students have been provided with outlines and have been required to make notes on special types of construction and the different cultural methods used.

Aside from the general lectures of the course, a talk each week has been given by some practical man, on various features connected with greenhouse work. The speakers thus far have been F. J. Elder, heating expert, Lord & Burnham Co., Irvington-on-Hudson, N. Y., and Eber Holmes, Montrose, Mass., who gave an interesting and instructive talk on rose culture. On Tuesday, February 8, Peter Fisher spoke on the development of the carnation, and he will be followed February 15 by M. A. Patten, on cultural methods with the carnation. February 21 W. H. Elliott, of Brighton, will lecture on rose culture, and March 1 E. O. Orpet, of Lancaster, will speak on orchid growing. March 8 E. J. Canning, of Northampton, will speak on the work of the private gardener. It is hoped that arrangements may be made during the course to have Charles H. Totty, of Madison, N. J., talk on chrysanthemums. Edward MacMulkin, of Boston, was scheduled to lecture on the retail trade, but was prevented from doing so because of sickness.

Twenty four-year students are taking the floricultural course this year. The first half of the year has been devoted wholly to practical work, and few lectures have been given. The work has been under the direct supervision of the instructor in floriculture, and has included glazing, concrete bench construction, propagation of bedding plants by cuttings, propagation of carnations, rose grafting and design work. Saturday, January 22, a public exhibition of designs made by the students was given in French hall. Each student prepared for this exhibition a galax wreath with flowers of varying kinds, also an emblem of the various fraternal orders.

The Market.

For the last two months we have enjoyed an ideal old-fashioned winter, with steady snow and cold, except on one or two occasions of mild spells. The coal bills tell best of the steady cold, for most greenhouses report an unusually large bill for December and January. The dark weather has also been with us, and with the exception of last week we have had little sun since early in December. As a result, roses are scarce and naturally up in price. Carnations were greatly relieved by bulb stock, which has been well received, with plenty to go around and good prices. The early bulb stock is a pleasure to handle in every way, not so long stemmed as to be weak and always good, clean flowers. They also make up and sell well in pans. Violets and valley are always in demand, but are rather short at the present time.

Carnations were much in evidence in town for McKinley day. One house supplied 20,000 for the occasion, they being used by one of the charitable institutions of the city. Girls and women were placed on the principal streets and the flowers were sold to everybody whom they could stop. This greatly affected the sale in the retail stores, but nevertheless Easter stock is the principal point of interest to greenhouse men just now, and the lilies are being forced to the limit. Giganteums are grown principally, and all stock looks clean and healthy. The bulk of the stock looks promising, especially the roses.

VEGETABLE MARKETS.

CHICAGO, Feb. 8.—Lettuce, 25c to 30c case; radishes, 35c to 50c doz. bunches; mushrooms, 15c to 30c lb.

BOSTON, Feb. 7.—Tomatoes, 15c to 25c lb.; cucumbers, $3 to $12 box; lettuce, 75c to $1.25 box; dandelions, $1.75 to $2 box; mint, 50c to 60c doz.; parsley, $2 to $2.25 box; mushrooms, $1 to $2 box; rhubarb, 8c to 9c lb.; radishes, $1 to $1.25 box.

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—Cucumbers in light supply and fancy quality would command $2. No further change in other descriptions. Mushrooms moving rather better, with sales of fancy white as high as 45 cents. Practically no lettuce coming and fancy quality would sell readily. Cucumbers, $1 to $2 doz.; lettuce, $1.50 to $2.50 strap; mint, 60c to 65c doz. bunches; mushrooms, 20c to 45c lb.; radishes, $2 to $3 doz. bunches; tomatoes, 10c to 25c lb.

TEMPERATURE FOR LETTUCE.

Please state the best night and day temperature for lettuce. J. T.

Between 45 and 50 degrees at night and 15 to 20 degrees higher on bright, sunny days suits lettuce best. About 10 degrees above night temperature is a great plenty for cloudy weather. Thermometers must face north and be protected on sides and back by some kind of a box to keep the sun from shining on the frame of the thermometer in order to get accurate temperature. H. G.

WORMS IN LETTUCE.

I am enclosing a sample of worm that has been causing trouble in one of our benches of lettuce. The worm is of a greenish yellow color and is about an inch and a quarter long and about one-eighth inch in diameter. It seems to eat into the root and then bore right up into the heart, causing the plant to die and look as if it had mildewed off or had the root-rot. The soil is two-year-old sod. If you know of any remedy, besides killing it when found, please inform me.

D. H. S.

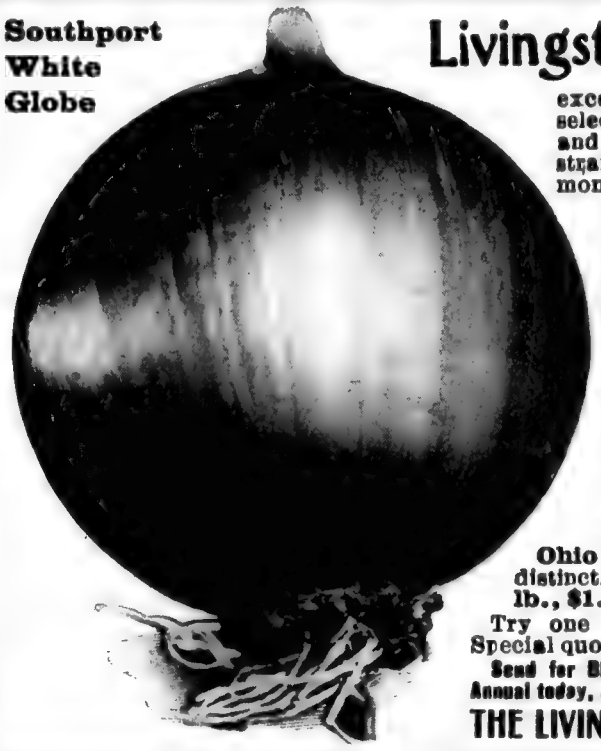
The worm is entirely new to me and I am unable to suggest any remedy other than to look over the plants carefully a few times until about all of them are caught. You might send a sample in a small package to the Bureau of Entomology of the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C. They can, no doubt, give you the name and habits of the pest. H. G.

SIFTING RADISH SEED.

I have seen it recommended, when growing radishes, to put the seed through a sieve with a certain size of mesh. Could you advise me as to what mesh to use and also state where these sieves can be obtained? I want to grade some Lady Roosevelt aster seed also. Can you tell me what mesh this seed should be put through before putting it up for sale?

J. M.

A sieve for radish seed, to separate the large, healthy seeds from the small and crippled ones, is used by many greenhouse men who grow radishes under glass.



The size of the mesh should be about three-thirty-seconds of an inch, but the exact size cannot be given, on account of some radish seeds being larger than those of other lots or varieties. A good way to do is to take a small sample of your seed and try it over a piece of wire cloth, using different pieces having different sizes of mesh, until you find just the right mesh for your seed.

Usually about one-third of the best radish seed is imperfect—small and crooked—and will not make good radishes. Not only that, but some of them will not make anything, while others that do succeed are slow in growth and make misshapen, tough and decidedly poor radishes. These cull seeds, if not sorted out, will occupy bench space where good radishes could be grown. They will also make it necessary to delay replanting the house, while they are struggling along for some time after the good ones are pulled and sold.

It seems a loss to throw away a third or a fourth of the seed after paying 60 cents or 70 cents a pound for it, but it is really a way of making considerably more out of the crop. The fine, healthy, perfect seeds that stay in the sieve will all make fine, perfect radishes in the shortest time and all at once, so that they can be pulled clean within a few days after the first one is pulled, thus permitting the replanting of the beds without any delay. Prof. Bailey many years ago recommended sorting the seed by making a sieve out of a piece of sheet brass, with holes punched in it two-twenty-fifths of an inch in diameter.

As to sifting seeds for sale, I could not say, but I believe that they are never run over a sieve with a large enough mesh to let any seeds fall through.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The trade reports a good business for last week. The last of the big weddings, receptions and dinners were worked up as Lent begins this week and society will not need much in the flower line for the next six weeks. Among the downtown florists it is reported that they had a splendid week in over-the-counter sales and were busy every day with good-sized funeral orders. The wholesalers had a good supply of everything in season except roses, and they are still scarce in all varieties, but a full crop is expected during the lenten season.

Carnations are in plenty, but the prices are stiff, 2 cents to 4 cents for choice in small lots. Violets are a glut and they have been selling cheap, as low as $1.50 per thousand. There will be plenty for St. Valentine's day. All bulbous stock is selling well, with no glut, as is usual in Romans and Paper Whites. Tulips

Various Notes.

The leasehold and greenhouses of the Michel Plant & Bulb Co. were sold last week at the court house by Commissioner Coleman to George Waldbart for $6,500. Mr. Waldbart will stock up the place, engage a manager and grow stock for his Grand avenue store. The purchase was in cash.

The Volkman Nursery Co. succeeded the Ratermann Floral Co., doing business at 5415 Easton avenue. They will continue at the old stand, doing a general florists' business.

James Arata, manager of the cut flower department at C. Young & Sons Co., says they had a busy week in the shipping line, one order, amounting to $400 for funeral work, keeping all hands busy.

John Barnard, a well known buyer for Grimm & Gorly, has been on the sick list all the last week. His many friends in the trade hope to see him soon, as usual, in the wholesale district each morning.

Many local members of the S. A. F. were surprised at the resignation of H. B. Beatty as treasurer of the society and at the same time much pleased with his successor, William F. Kasting, who is well known in the trade here, having spent his boyhood days in this city with the old Jordan Floral Co.

We regret to announce the death of Mrs. Martha Hentschel, wife of Ernest Hentschel, florist at Webster Groves. The funeral took place Monday, February 7, from her late residence in Webster Groves. We extend our sympathy.

John Connon, at Webster Groves, is reported sick in bed all the last week. From last accounts he was improving.

Carl Beyer is another one on our sick list. His brother, Robert, who reported him sick, says he has a bad case of the gout.

William C. Smith says his firm will have a big supply of California violets for St. Valentine's day. The present weather is just right for a big crop.

Prof. William Trelease, director of the Missouri Botanical Garden, delivered a lecture last week before the South Side Self-Culture Club. His subject was "How to Make the City More Beautiful." The lecture was well received.

The Florist Ladies' Home Circle will meet Monday, February 14, at 2 o'clock, at the Washington hotel. Miss M. Meinhardt, the secretary, is visiting Chicago this week and will return home Thursday, February 10.

The Brix Floral Co. has sold its greenhouses to J. Michel, their foreman. The sale took place last week. The Brix Floral Co. will continue to operate their retail store at 1518 St. Louis avenue, where they have a large run of trade.

William Young, Jr., was elected secretary of the Florists' Bowling Club, W. C. Smith having resigned in favor of the young man, who takes a great interest in the club and has the making of a great bowler.

Fred C. Weber has resigned as treasurer of the St. Louis Horticultural Society and also resigned as a member of the executive board. Harry Young was elected treasurer and Fred H. Weber was elected as a member of the executive board. J. J. B.

BURLINGTON, VT.—John Wilson says midwinter is no time to change a boiler, but there is an end to the best. Just at a most critical time one of his gave out. Fortunately Hitchings & Co. came to the rescue with one of their tubulars, which is being quickly connected by local workmen. Old Boreas was kind. A heavy fall of snow protected the houses.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

It looks as though field corn that will test well will be in larger demand than supply.

The Chicago Tribune recently devoted a half column editorial to the seed catalogue as the first and most reliable sign of spring.

The only full page seed advertisement in the February general magazines is that of John Lewis Childs and his improved Wonderberry.

This year many seed planters will have to take seeds of a lower germination than the standard requires, on account of bad weather at time of harvest.

The Northern Wisconsin Seed Co. has been incorporated at Sturgeon Bay, Wis., with a capital of $25,000 by P. R. Cunningham, William Birdsall, Jr., and B. J. Jellinek.

The flood in Paris, France, is worrying some of the dealers on this side. The belated shipments of some important French seed crops are likely to be still further delayed if they can be forwarded at all.

No one seems to be complaining seriously of short deliveries. When the wind-up arrives there may still be a few lots available. The popular sorts are not indispensable when the situation is looked at rightly.

Knud Gundestrup, of Kirkeby & Gundestrup Co., Chicago, will, it is said, dispose of his American interests and cast his lot with the mother country again, in the spring or summer of this present year.

The much discussed high cost of living is likely to be a help to the seed trade in the same way many said the panic of 1907 was; it will make more people plant gardens and other people plant larger gardens.

Reports from France indicate that prices on French bulbs will undoubtedly be much higher this year. Martial Bremond wrote his American agents, Ralph M. Of course no definite prices have been quoted yet, but there is no doubt but that Roman hyacinths especially will be higher, and Paper Whites also. Recent vantage, and in a way he has, but only so long as his stock lasts.

They come into bloom from two to three weeks after the average type, usually being at their best during September.

W. W. RAWSON & Co., Boston, have just issued a catalogue of 108 pages devoted exclusively to dahlias and gladioli. The pages are 5x9, freely illustrated and handsomely printed. Rawson & Co. say they believe the book contains the most complete lists of dahlias and gladioli ever published, and the book will serve as a work of reference as well as a business-bringer.

THE canners are holding their annual convention at Atlantic City this week, but without the big exhibition of machinery and supplies. Several of the growers of seeds, especially peas, corn and tomato, are present or represented, but the principal interest of the canners appears to lie in getting the U. S. Department of Agriculture to inspect canneries and guarantee the purity of the output.

IN TENNESSEE.

Col. John Thompson, commissioner of agriculture in the State of Tennessee, is urging the farmers throughout the State not to purchase any seeds which do not bear the inspection tag of the State. Said he, in speaking of the enforcement of this law:

"Dealers in agricultural seeds have sold to the farmers of this country seeds without any regard to their purity. Many of these seeds contained seeds of noxious weeds. These have been sowed all over the country until the whole country has been infected and poisoned by the presence of these harmful weeds. In the past few years there has been a general outcry against this from the best farmers in all parts of the country.

"The legislatures of a few States have passed laws requiring pure seeds. The time is coming when every State in the Union will pass similar laws. The last general assembly of this State passed a seed law, which went into effect June 1, 1909, prohibiting the sale of agricultural seeds containing any seed of certain specified weeds and providing that seeds containing certain other seeds should be considered adulterated.

"The reputable seed dealers in the State are supporting the law enthusiastically. Some seed dealers outside the State are attempting to disregard its provisions and are hiding behind the laws which govern and control interstate shipments, hoping to avoid the inspection tax by shipping direct to the consumers.

"It is the earnest desire of this department that farmers who want pure and unadulterated seeds coöperate with this department and refuse to buy any agricultural seeds that have not the tag and stamp required by law. This tag and stamp guarantee that the seeds have passed the inspection and come up to the requirements of the law. If the farmers will do this, they will put out of business those dealers who are trying to disregard the law. They will get what they want when they buy and pay for seeds. They will thus avoid sowing the adulterated seeds that have been prevalent in the past."

IMPORTS.

The imports of seeds through the port of New York for the week ending January 29 were as follows:

Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.	Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.
Castor	2800	$12314	Hemp	1010	$10990
Caraway	300	2379	Millet	234	614

Fennel	33	178	Sugar beet	337	2680
Grass	1133	3409	Other	29	1951

In the same period the imports of bulbs, trees and plants were valued at $8,454; peas, $5,440, and beans, $37,762.

THE FRENCH FLOODS.

We believe that the French floods will have three disastrous results to the interest of the seed trade of the world: First, by the complete destruction in warehouses of large quantities of seed stored of past crops, not alone in the storehouses of the city of Paris but in towns in many river valleys; the percentage of destruction may not be known for several weeks. Second, in the destruction, a loss impossible to replace, of large breadths of plants, biennials carried over the winter for seed to be grown next summer, as cabbages, beets, mangolds, carrots, and celery; the percentage of destruction of these plants may not be realized until the first part of April, as they will comprehend wintered crops over a broad territory. Third, in the reduction of seed growing operations consequent upon the destruction of farm buildings, agricultural tools, live stock, and the wiping out of the capital necessary to conduct spring operations. These serious conditions, as respects the percentage of next year's crop of annuals, will not be realized until after seed-sowing time.

Rawson's World Renowned Asters

We never had a dissatisfied customer with Rawson's Asters; we need no better recommendation. Rawson's Aster Seeds are fresh, plump and of unapproachable quality.

NOVELTIES FOR 1910

ASTER, AURORA. The most unique colored Aster ever introduced. Yellow, passing to old rose. The flower-petals first appearing are shaped similar to those of the "Comet" type and are a perfect yellow, but when the flower is fully expanded it takes on a tint of delicate fresh rose, which the artist calls "old rose." The plant grows fully 24 inches high in a pyramid form and produces any quantity of double blooms 3½ inches across. Pkt., 35 cts.

ASTER, CACTUS CELESTINE. A new form of petal, resembling exactly a true Cactus Dahlia. The color is a most delicate lilac of unusual beauty. Pkt., 20 cts.

ASTER, CROWN OF GOLD. A pure, delicate yellow flower, of good size and borne on stout stems, resembling in shape the Victoria Aster. Its color is original and did not exist heretofore. Pkt., 20 cts.

ASTER, RAWSON'S NEW GLORY.

(Introduced by us in 1909.)

The most perfected type of Giant Comet that can possibly be produced. The flowers invariably measure 6 inches across and are always double. In our whole field last year we could not discover a single plant which showed the least sign of disease. The long stems are graceful and not stiff. Colors are distinct and most desirable for commercial use.

	⅛ oz.	¼ oz.	oz.
Pure White	$0.60	$1.00	$3.50
Delicate Lavender	.60	1.00	3.50
Shrimp Pink	.60	1.00	3.50
Finest Mixed	.50	.80	3.00

ASTER, TRIUMPH OF PARIS. The nearest approach to a yellow aster. The form is a single comet with a quilled center. The petals consist of two rows of glistening white, while the quills are a clear yellow. Stems range 2 feet in height and produce the giant blooms singly. A grand aster for the florist. ⅛ oz., $1.00.

THE CREGO ASTER. This aster is the nearest approach to a chrysanthemum of any flower grown. It is unusually large in size, running 4 to 5 inches in diameter when well grown. The petals are about double the length of those in the older varieties, and are twisted and curled in such a manner as to give the blossoms an exceedingly beautiful fluffy appearance. The plants are large and vigorous, producing their blossoms on very long stems. The central stalk is very short, the branches breaking out very near the ground, are generally clean their entire length, needing little or no disbudding, making it the easiest variety to prepare for market I have ever seen. Our seed is direct from the originator.

Colors:	Pure White	$1.00	$3.50	$6.00
	Shell Pink. (Exact shade of Enchantress Carnation)	1.00	3.50	6.00
	Dark Pink	1.00	3.50	6.00

ASTER, RAWSON'S PINK BEAUTY. Unquestionably a grand and valuable florist aster and mainly so on account of its color and massive flower. The form of flower is a perfected Victoria which never shows a center. The color is so intensely beautiful that a graphic description can never do it justice. Delicate peach-tinted pink with a glowing shade of rich pink towards the center. No other aster can boast of such a pleasing combination. The stem of this flower is fairly tall and very erect. The plant branches from the bottom. ⅛ oz., 60 cts.; oz., $4.00.

ASTER, GEISHA. This strain originated in Japan and this can easily be seen in the formation of the flower. We were so much impressed with the attention the visitors to Rawson's Dahlia Farm paid to this fantastic type that we were actually forced to catalogue it and now believe it has a great future. The plant is extremely robust and produces stout stems growing very erect and carrying their gigantic flower formed of fine needle-shaped tubed petals around a conspicuous central disc. The very open center of this flower has an immense charm which appeals to the public, and as we must first of all please them, this is a point in its favor.

STANDARD VARIETIES

DAWN OF DAY

(Novelty, 1908.) The earliest flowering Aster in existence. Fine white, perfect in form and growth, long branching stems and flowers; often three weeks ahead of Queen of the Market. It is of branching habit and very full and if freely cut will continue to bear blooms until late in fall. See last week's Review, page 8. ⅛ oz., 50c; oz., $3.00.

RAWSON'S NEW MIDSUMMER ASTER.

This is our own introduction. We have received high praise from all growers. It has most graceful formed flowers, which are borne on immense long stems full two weeks ahead of the Late Branching Aster, and the plants will continue to bear flowers as late.

The colors are true and hardly any open-centered flowers among them.

Delicate Shell Pink	.60	2.00	Bright Rose	.60	2.00

RAWSON'S DAYBREAK. This variety must not be compared with the strain offered elsewhere and a trial will convince the ever-so-critical of its superiority. ⅛ oz., 40c; oz., $2.50.

RAWSON'S PURITY. (Pure white.) Of the same type as Daybreak, differing only in color, which is a pure glistening white. Just as free-flowering and symmetrical as Daybreak and undoubtedly unsurpassed as a white bedding variety. ⅛ oz., 50c; oz., $3.00.

ASTER, RAWSON'S LATE BRANCHING. Flowers are very large in size and borne on long, stiff stems. It is one of the best and most popular varieties for late flower markets.

TWO NEW SALVIAS FOR 1910

ZURICH. The best salvia yet introduced. Plants grow very compact, show little foliage and bear heavy flower spikes, which are thickly laden with bright scarlet flowers. Flowers early in July and remains in bloom with later varieties, ⅛ oz., 75c; oz., $5.00.

SALVIA SPLENDENS. KING OF CARPETS. The best dwarf bedding Salvia on the market today, outrivaling even "Zurich." The plants branch from the bottom and to such extent that the main stem is never visible. All side branches droop completely to the ground, making the whole plant a perfect half ball of fire. The plant grows but 15 inches high and flowers even earlier than "Zurich." ⅛ oz., $1.00; oz., $6.00.

The veteran Salvia grower, Mr. F. Bedman, says: "About the Salvia, 'King of Carpets.' It has done very well considering the dry weather that we have had, and I consider it one of the grandest dwarf salvias that I ever saw."

considerable difficulty and expense. Usually they were thrown out in piles to rot, the resulting manure being used for fertilizer.

During recent years the pea vines have risen to the dignity of a by-product, from which the factories derive considerable profit. They are now utilized for silage, or fed to stock in a fresh state, or cured for hay. They make a silage superior in value to corn silage. They may be preserved in silos the same as green corn or they may be put up in large stacks in the open air. If these stacks are well put up and the vines are well tramped, decay will only affect the surface to the depth of a few inches. The pea vines can easily be cured by spreading them on sod land. Pea-vine hay is considered better than clover hay. Both the hay and the silage are excellent feeds for dairy cows. They are also satisfactory feeds for beef, cattle, horses and sheep. The hay sells at $3 to $5 a ton. In some cases the pea vines are hauled away from the factory by the farmers who supply the peas; in other cases they are sold in a fresh state, and in still other cases the factories either silo the vines or cure them for hay.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

Business is good with all the retailers and all of the downtown stores are making handsome and attractive window displays. Funeral orders continue to be numerous, and as a rule the character of the pieces demanded is of a better class than for a number of years past. In larger pieces callas are increasing in popularity, after having been a somewhat slighted flower for two or three years. Freesia is also increasing in its popularity.

Potted stock is coming along in good shape and in increasing quantities. A majority of the growers report good stocks and plants sufficiently advanced to be ready for Easter.

Various Notes.

Stephen Green, for H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, was here January 30 on his way home from a several weeks' successful trip through New England.

Last week Representative Sheffield, of Newport, presented two petitions in Congress from the Rhode Island Horticultural Society, one in favor of securing the purity of the materials used in combating the fungicidal insect foes of fruits, flowers and vegetables, and the other favoring the Lafean apple package bill.

H. L. DeBlois, 80 Broadway, Newport, has just received a large importation of palms and ferns.

The annual banquet of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society will be held in the parlors of the Mathewson Street Methodist church, this city, on February 16.

Send flowers to your sick friends ere it is too late; to those in wealth, for they may be the next to go. Of course you will get them at Herron's, Masonic Temple. Both phones."

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
Officers for 1909-10: Pres., F. H. Stannard, Ottawa, Kan.; Vice-Pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-fifth annual meeting, Denver, June, 1910.

THERE are 288 nurseries in the State of Texas.

J. W. ADAMS & Co., Springfield, Mass., look forward to a fine business on Clematis paniculata this spring.

CHAS. N. LOWRIE, of New York, has been elected president of the American Society of Landscape Architects.

THE U. S. Department of Agriculture has issued a bulletin by Wm. L. Bray, entitled "The Mistletoe Pest in the Southwest."

IF business keeps on increasing as fast as it has since January 1, the middle of March will find a lot of nurserymen where they will be ready to quit taking orders.

THE State of Texas now proposes to apply its nursery inspection and license law to any outside florist who has an order to ship twenty-five geranium cuttings into that commonwealth.

WHY not move up the retail prices of nursery stock just a bit, in order to keep on a footing with other commodities? Besides, with a little more money for his product, the nurseryman can afford to give a better article.

AT the recent meeting of the Tennessee Nurserymen's Association, held at Nashville, the following officers were elected: President, A. I. Smith, Knoxville; vice-president, J. M. Miller, Winchester; secretary and treasurer, G. M. Bentley, Knoxville. The following committee on legislation was appointed: Col. John Thompson, Prof. H. M. Morgan, Prof. G. M. Bentley, Percy Brown, Geo. E. Parks, J. L. Jones and J. C. Hall.

WISTARIA AND MAGNOLIAS.

Please tell me what kind of roots to use for grafting white and blue wistarias and Magnolia Soulangeana. C. W. K.

Graft wistarias on portions of their own roots. They can also be propagated quite easily by layering. Magnolia Soulangeana should be worked on seedlings two years old and grown along in pots of M. acuminata or M. tripetala. A greenhouse is the best place for the successful carrying out of this method of progagation and either cleft or tongue grafting can be done. C.

ENGLISH IVY IN SHADE.

Will you tell me if the English ivy, so commonly used in Kew gardens under trees where the shade is too dense for grass of any kind to grow, has been found satisfactory when used for this purpose in America? If this is not satisfactory, kindly suggest something that would be, as I am desirous of covering some ground under trees in Pennsylvania where grass will not grow with something green the whole year around. J. R.

English ivy, while it grows fairly well under shady conditions, requires winter covering, or the leaves become badly scorched. For this reason it is hardly a desirable plant in our northern states for growing under trees.

The most satisfactory evergreen plant, one which winter never kills and is of a uniformly deep green color, which grows quickly and forms a close carpet even under trees, is Vinca minor, commonly called periwinkle and creeping myrtle. Even in poor, gravelly soil this vinca will grow surprisingly well. It is best planted in early spring, but can be set out during any moist, cloudy spell during the summer. Propagation is easy, either by division of the roots or from cuttings. While the plant produces its blue flowers freely, it bears few seeds. You will find this plant much superior in your latitude to the English ivy for the purpose named. W. N. C.

PACIFIC COAST.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

While most of the northern and eastern cities are reporting zero weather, with many plant shipments coming in late and some of them frozen, southern California is enjoying summer weather, with a maximum temperature of 80 degrees, which tends to increase the supply of all kinds of flowers, though heretofore they have been scarce.

Sweet peas from outside have improved wonderfully; their stems are lengthening perceptibly and the flowers are large and perfect. Some nice stocks are being sent in, some pale pink ones being especially pretty, and they have a good sale. Calla lilies are so common that they are seldom seen in the stores. They are full of bloom now, in the open ground, and hedges of them are seen everywhere. Some Trumpet Major narcissi are coming in from outside. Many pots and pans of Dutch hyacinths are now seen in the stores. Tulips do not do well in California and only a few of them are grown. Azaleas and cyclamens are in fine shape, and help out when other flowers are scarce.

Many of the florists report business as unusually dull during aviation week, with nothing doing but funeral work. Others say that they had good sales of corsage bouquets and one of the florists remarks that there never has been a season when flowers were in such demand for corsage wear. An item in one of the daily papers was as follows: "A casual glance at the proscenium boxes down at Dominguez field any afternoon now reminds one of a flower show."

The damage done to the oranges by the frost is not as great as at first reported. The packers are taking great care that none of the frozen ones get in with those sent east. Some deaths of children have been reported from eating them. The frosts have put local tomatoes out of the market, and they are being shipped in from Cuba. The first carload sold at $4 per crate of six baskets. Eggplant is coming in from Florida. A few strawberries from local fields are coming in, but they are poor and sell at 15 cents a basket.

Various Notes.

Wright's Flower Shop reports a big call for orchids, Beauties and other choice flowers. One order called for two dozen choice orchids. One bunch of 110 Beauties sold for $300 at holiday time. They grow most of their own flowers. They are building four new houses, each 27x300, and will erect another, especially for orchids. They are the only growers in Los Angeles who handle Easter lilies. They grow Harrisii, using only the largest bulbs, and do not have much loss. Mr. Wright makes a specialty of valley and gets some exceptionally fine flowers.

At The Angelus some white poinsettias were seen, which are a rarity and can hardly become popular.

Some of the best roses sent into Los Angeles come from the greenhouses of William Haerle, of Hollywood. The florists who can procure them consider themselves fortunate. The writer paid a visit there and found everything in the pink of perfection. The house of Beauties was quite a sight, with canes six and seven feet long. He also grows My Maryland, Killarney, White Killarney and Richmond, all of which were in fine shape and so clean it was a pleasure to look at them. The orchid house had many blooms of cattleyas and cypripediums. One house of giganteum and longiflorum will be in bloom for Easter. He gets no lilies in before that time. He also grows quantities of azaleas and other flowering plants for the holidays. The cut of roses for the following morning's shipment fully upheld his reputation, as they were all fine buds with long stems. He uses distillate oil for heating. Soft coal is $14 a ton in California.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Business continues to be rather quiet, although the general opinion among retailers is that it is somewhat better than it was one year ago at this time, and the tendency is decidedly upward.

Flowers of all kinds, both inside and outside grown, are scarce, owing to the continued cold weather with which we have been blessed during the last six weeks. It gives signs, however, of becoming more salubrious and, although this will be pleasurable from one point of view, it is questionable if these really cold winters are or are not a benefit to the florists' trade. Roses and carnations are higher in price than we usually see them at this time, but the stiff rates will not keep in vogue much longer, as already the signs are for a heavy crop with a consequent dropping in price. We usually have plenty of wild flowers and fruit blossoms at this time, but from present indications it will be several weeks before these are seen in quantity. Violets and narcissi are practically all that we have from the outside at present, and we are bound to have a late season at all events. Maidenhair fern, both wild and cultivated, continues to be scarce, and the same can be said about both smilax and asparagus, although not quite so noticeable.

Various Notes.

H. M. Sanborn, of Oakland, has sold the property on which his floral establishment was situated for many years, and will retire from active business in favor of his son, who has been associated with him for several years.

The Sievers Floral Co. made an assignment to E. W. Gunther during the present week, in favor of their creditors. This firm was located on California street for several years before they opened at their present location.

The Elmhurst Floral Co., of Oakland, Cal., has opened a store in the Central Bank building in that city.

Word comes from Santa Rosa, Cal., that the magnificent greenhouses of Rudolph Spreckels were totally destroyed by fire on the night of January 29. The loss will approximate $5,000, and was caused by an explosion in the oil-burning apparatus.

John Mallett, one of San Francisco's pioneer gardeners and for several years a resident of southern California, is in town on a short visit.

G.

Pelicano, Rossi & Co. have had the plans drawn for a handsome six-story building, which is to be erected for them on Powell street, north of Ellis and immediately adjoining the Golden West hotel. The cost of the building will be

The Crego Aster The Best in the Market

With its enormous blossoms, long stems and vigorous, healthy plants, this Aster is becoming more valuable to the florist from year to year, and its remarkable success is due to the fact that it has had the benefit of twelve years of the most rigid and painstaking selection, every effort having been directed toward developing its commercial qualities—toward making it a money-maker for every florist who handles it. Growing no other seed of any kind, I am able to give this the closest possible attention.

This Aster has proved itself to be exactly what every florist needs; an aster which finds instant favor with his customers, for which they are willing to pay the highest price, and which gives him the highest return for his time and labor. It costs the grower no more to produce flowers of that grade than to grow the common run of asters which sell for but little more than enough to pay express charges.

If you are interested in getting the highest possible returns from your aster crop next summer, I shall be pleased to hear from you at an early date.

I have plenty of white and shell pink, but the supply of rose pink is already very low. Orders for that shade should be sent at once.

Prices for this season: Trade packet, $1.00; half-ounce, $3.50; ounce, $6.00. A substantial reduction from last year.

G. S. CREGO, 562 East Alder St., Portland, Ore.

P. S.—By an arrangement with a local grower I am able to offer seed of Vick's White and Pink Mikado as follows: Trade packet, 60c: quarter ounce, $1.35; half-ounce, $2.35: ounce, $4.00.

CAMELLIAS IN CALIFORNIA.

Among the most satisfactory of our hardy flowering shrubs, the camellia easily takes first place. Until a few years ago most people looked on this plant as only suitable for growing under glass or when kept in a pot. But it has been amply demonstrated that it will grow much more luxuriantly and flower more profusely when planted in the open. All that is required is a fairly heavy soil, good drainage and an abundance of water. The last proposition is the most important one to the entire camellia family. Rich soil will add greatly to the vigor and beauty of the shrub, but an excess of moisture can hardly be given.

Another erroneous impression is that the camellia is fond of shade. Although the foliage may assume a darker and more glossy luster when given partial light only, it will make a much more compact and stocky tree when perfectly exposed in a not too windy place. The sunshine never hurts either the foliage or the blooms. G.

NORTH ADAMS, MASS.—Hitchings & Co. are completing the extensive new greenhouses on the Cluett place in South Williamstown. The houses are of concrete and brick and are modern and up-to-date in every particular.

SCRANTON, PA.—Morel Bros. grow part of a house of that old favorite, bouvardia, and claim that the space occupied is as profitable as that devoted to carnations. White, pink and crimson in equal proportions are grown. For bouquet work there is scarcely anything more handsome and simple, with a backing of adiantum.

TAUNTON, MASS.

The Taunton Greenhouses have 3,000 longiflorum giganteum lilies in fine shape for Easter. Not over fifty pots were diseased in the lot. Governor Herrick violet is found to be useful here for funeral designs, blooming profusely all winter. Large quantities of plants are being grown for Memorial day and spring sales. Funeral work has been extra good all winter.

J. D. Christensen, at W. J. Clemson's, has a fine lot of candidum and Harrisii lilies for Easter, also hydrangeas, marguerites and other plants.

At the greenhouses connected with the Insane hospital, H. H. P. Carstens has a fine house of carnations, which includes a bench of seedlings. There is a good display of primulas, cinerarias and other seasonable plants. Among the orchids, Stanhopea oculata was in fine flower.

At the funeral of Congressman W. C. Lovering, February 7, there was the largest display of floral designs ever seen in Taunton. Many of these came from Washington and were elaborate. Local florists also furnished a number of designs. C.

Grand Rapids, Mich.—Wencel L. Cukerski has completed his greenhouses and is busy working up stock for spring plant trade.

ADMIRATION

This carnation we offer to the trade as being one of the finest Carnations of any color that we know of up to date. Being a beautiful shade of pink, somewhat lighter than Winona, having that beautiful satin finish, always showing up well either in natural or artificial light. Plants benched in August are now coming into full crop, carrying from 10 to 20 buds. We have been cutting since September 10th. As a money maker you will find no equal.

The size of the flower is 3 to 3½ inches, excellent form, well built up in the center, with the petals so arranged as to make it stand the general requirements of a good fancy commercial variety. A grand keeper and shipper.

The habit is ideal, upright with no surplus grass and every shoot going into flower. Its freedom and earliness make it nearly the ideal carnation. The calyx is very tough and seldom bursts. Can be handled with great success either from the field or grown inside all summer. No one has to be an expert to handle this variety. It scored 86 points at the American Carnation Society meeting at Indianapolis, January 27 to 28, 1909.

Price, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

You must have seen and admired our Carnation Dorothy Gordon at the Pittsburg meeting. If you were there; our exhibit of this superb new variety attracted a vast amount of attention and caused much favorable comment from the hundreds of visitors who saw it. If you missed the show, just notice the very flattering mention that Dorothy Gordon received in the reports appearing in your trade publications of last week.

Our exhibit of 100 Dorothy Gordon in Section A won Second Prize; but more than any award we value the opportunity that many more of our friends had at that meeting for seeing this worthy new variety and passing on its merits at first hand.

POEHLMANN BROS CO., Morton Grove, Illinois

LOUISVILLE, KY.

Funeral work has had a good, steady call, and everyone has had his share. Several big weddings took place, and some decorations were taken care of by the live decorators, and, as lily of the valley is the popular flower for the society girls' bridal bouquets, quite a few were used. Dinner and after-the-theater parties were frequent, and that gave us some work for tables. Two golden weddings were celebrated and a good call was had for yellow tulips and jonquils, which at the time were rather scarce, it being a little too early for them. Quite a few blooming plants, trimmed in yellow, were sold for these occasions. Blooming plants had a good call all through January, although the supply was limited to only a few varieties the first three weeks of the month. The last week of January and the first week of this month found all the stores with azaleas, rhododendrons, cyclamen, primulas of all kinds, jonquils, tulips, hyacinths and a few others. A few white lilacs are to be seen, but they are quite scarce.

In the line of cut flowers we have had enough of everything but roses, which are off crop, and what few are to be had are of poor quality, but are bringing good prices nevertheless. Carnations have been rather plentiful, but about two-thirds of them were splits. A good many were sold at 75 cents per dozen, which is a poor price for them at this season of the year. A large number were sold at 5 cents for McKinley day—in fact, more than any previous year for that occasion. Violets are never too plentiful, and are retailing at $2 per hundred. Valley and orchids are about equal to the demand. Jonquils, tulips, narcissi, hyacinths and freesia are equal to the demand. Green goods are a little scarce, with the exception of smilax. St. Valentine's day is near at hand, and a busy day is expected. K. R.

SCARLET GLOW. (New) an extra good bright scarlet, a large flower and exceptional keeping qualities. It is in perfect health, and has that early and free flowering habit that characterizes a paying commercial variety. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

PINK DELIGHT. Clear waxy shell pink. The variety that won over Enchantress at the A. C. S. meeting, Indianapolis, January, 1909. It has all the good points to make it the leader and with its unequaled substance, the best keeping and shipping carnation in the light pink class.

In 1909 we had no surplus stock to offer. With our large stock this season we are in a position to take care of all orders. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

We have large stocks of White Perfection, Rose-pink Enchantress, White Enchantress, Winona, Enchantress, Aristocrat, Beacon.

Selected, healthy, well rooted cuttings, $3.00 per 100; $25.00 per 1000.

We do not supply the cheapest, but the best.

The Market.

With quite a few pre-lental parties, balls and other such functions, and a steady stream of funeral work, all the incoming stock last week was quickly disposed of. Roses were hardly up to the demand at various times. The supply of Beauties was limited, and they moved well. All kinds of bulbous stock is becoming more plentiful; so, also, are carnations, but there was nothing left at any time.

Club Meeting.

The club meeting, February 3, was a most interesting one. N. Zweifel and H. V. Hunkel gave short, interesting reports on the trip to the Pittsburg carnation convention. They also spoke of various eastern establishments, among them the Cottage Gardens, Julius Roehrs Co., F. R. Pierson Co., etc., visited after the convention.

It was voted to hold a flower show in 1910, and the chair appointed the following to serve on the executive committee: C. Dallwig, Aug. Kellner, C. C. Pollworth, J. G. Heitman, H. V. Hunkel, A. Leidiger, Wm. C. Zimmermann and Nic Zweifel.

The following were elected to membership: Fred. Mueller, Frank Burndt, Geo. Dubberphul, Fred Kaiser, A. Sommer, Frank Holtketter, Paul Benke, Henry Koegler, Martin Christiansen, Peter Monhos, Otto Eggebrecht and A. Griebler.

Various Notes.

The Aug. F. Kellner Co. had the decorations at the West Side Turners' hall for the annual masquerade ball of the Turnverein, held February 5. They transformed the large hall into a Japanese garden, using large quantities of wild smilax, and this, with numerous Japanese lanterns and parasols, gave the whole a very artistic appearance.

Wm. C. Zimmermann, of Fifth street and Grand avenue, reports a good business in funeral work all last week. It was especially rushing on Wednesday.

Fred Holton, of the Holton & Hunkel Co., has a great deal of sickness in his home, both wife and family being ill.

Walter Halliday, head of the working force at the C. C. Pollworth Co.'s wholesale house, was absent the first half of the week, owing to the death of his mother, who had been ill for some time. She was 54 years of age.

Visitors who called during the week were: Mr. Zuelke, of the Riverside Floral Co., Appleton, Wis.; Mrs. Miller, of the Racine Floral Co., Racine, and Mrs. Hinchliffe, Racine. E. O.

FLORIST PETUNIAS

Every florist having a design trade has felt the difficulty of getting suitable flowers for the work during hot weather, when roses and carnations are barely presentable. After years of selection we have found three varieties of Double Petunias, No. 1, Pure White; No. 2, Clear Shining Pink; No. 3, Pure Lavender, which have made us more money for the labor expended than anything we have ever handled. The flowers are large, 4¼ to 6 inches in diameter, and as a keeper during hot weather beats anything we have ever tried, while the enormous quantity of blooms they produce makes the cost practically nothing. We find indoor culture suits them best. Price, 2-inch pot plants, $1.50 per doz.; one dozen of each of the three varieties for $4.00.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

The monthly meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held in its rooms January 28. Important business was transacted with reference to the fall show. The committee appointed in this connection at a former meeting, to make such inquiries as would aid in selecting a good place for the show, reported that the Tarrytown hall could not be secured, but that suitable arrangements could be made for the use of the Irvington Town hall. They reported this as being as large as the Tarrytown hall and even better fitted for the purpose in view. On their recommendation, therefore, it was decided to hold the show there.

The monthly prize, for two plants of cyclamen, was won by James Stuart, gardener for Mrs. F. A. Constable, Mamaroneck, N. Y., with splendidly grown specimens. The judges also recommended that the unusual merit of the exhibit be recognized by awarding a cultural certificate, in addition to the regular prize. By a unanimous vote of the members present, the certificate was awarded. Mr. Stuart was requested to start the evening's discussion by giving an account of the methods by which he obtained such good results, and he responded with an interesting and instructive address.

At the next meeting of the society the subject is to be "Roses," the monthly prize being offered for a vase of twelve, other than American Beauties. Mr. McHendry, gardener to W. A. Read, Purchase, N. Y., will give a talk on "Rose Culture." For the March meeting the prize is offered for three varieties of forced vegetables.

WABASH, IND.—The annual convention of the Northern Indiana Association of Florists was held in the Tremont hotel, in this city, January 19. Owing to the flooded condition of the railroad tracks, the attendance was not as large as it might have been, but the meeting was good and was greatly enjoyed. W. W. Dederick, of Warsaw, presided, and John H. Shelton, of Rochester, was secretary. J. D. Conner, of the Conner-Ulsh Floral Co., and Mrs. Conner were host and hostess at a banquet at noon, served in the hotel. The next meeting will be held at Rochester. The new officers will be elected at Winona in July.

Nephrolepis, which will be found one of the best selling and most profitable plants that florists can handle. Our stock is in unusually fine shape, and we will guarantee it will please the most exacting, as it is exceptionally good value at the prices quoted.

Improved Elegantissima. The finest of all this type. It was introduced by us in 1905. Superbissima. Introduced by us in 1908. A very unique and distinct novelty. Its distinguishing characteristics are its dark green foliage and dense growth. Fronds are very heavily imbricated, making them very dense and compact. SWEET PEAS FOR OUTDOORS.

Are the early forcing varieties of sweet peas, such as Watchung, Snowbird, Christmas White and others, a success for outdoor culture in early spring? If not, could you give the names of some of the best early varieties and the time of planting inside, preparatory to planting out? P. W. C.

We have not had much success with the forcing varieties of sweet peas, such as you name, when planted outdoors. Mont Blanc, as a white, does fairly well and comes in flower quite a little ahead of Dorothy Eckford and other sorts usually grown outdoors. Burpee's Earliest of All is a decided improvement on Blanche Ferry, and much earlier. Sunbeams is useful if pale yellow flowers are wanted. Among the varieties suitable to plant as a succession to the foregoing are Dorothy Eckford, white; Helen Lewis, orange pink; Helen Pierce, white, veined and marbled blue; King Edward VII, scarlet; Countess of Spencer and Gladys Unwin, clear pink; Frank Dolby, lavender, and Lady M. Ormsby Gore, blush.

For an early outdoor crop you should start the seeds in 3-inch pots in a cold frame about the middle of February. Sow two or three seeds in each pot. These can be planted out as soon as the weather will permit, usually early in April. If you want strong haulm and long stems, plant a foot apart in the rows. The rows may look thin for a time, but the quality and quantity of flowers will well repay you for the additional space given. C. W.

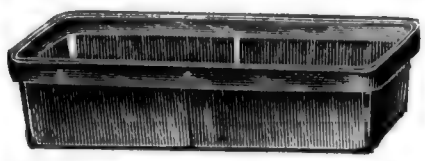
PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The wholesalers agree that trade is good in a way, but prices are not what they should be just before Lent. Beauties are scarce, but there is no demand for them when anything over $5 per dozen is asked, so the shortage is not greatly felt, and there is plenty of everything else.

Among the retailers there is nothing to brag about. The usual funeral business and a fair amount of general trade is all they are doing. The weather, no doubt, has something to do with this.

Various Notes.



A. C. Brown, of Springfield, Ill., stopped over on his way home from the east and visited the Randolph & McClements greenhouses and the east end stores.

Frank Faulk, who has been suffering with rheumatism, is improving somewhat, but is not yet well, by any means.

The thermometer on the morning of February 7 registered 2 degrees above zero, and the weather is still cold.

Greenhouse Heating.

BOILER AND SMOKESTACK.

I have a fire-box boiler, four feet wide, twelve feet long and containing forty 3-inch flues, eight feet long. The grate surface is three feet six inches square. The boiler has a dome two feet high and two feet in diameter, and is now used for steam. Please state how much glass this boiler would heat with hot water, and whether it would heat more or less with steam. What should be the diameter and height of the chimney?

G. O. K.

The boiler should heat from 8,000 to 10,000 square feet of glass, using steam, and although it is customary to make a somewhat smaller estimate for hot water, it is probable that, owing to the large grate surface, it would answer for the same amount when hot water is used.

It will be well to make the chimney sixteen inches in diameter and from thirty to forty feet high, the greater height being used if there are buildings in the vicinity which would interfere with the draft. By increasing the height of the chimney a slight reduction in its diameter could be made.

THREE DEFECTS IN PIPING.

Please tell me the correct way to heat my greenhouse. The house runs east and west and is 20x80 feet. The boiler pit is at the northeast corner. The boiler is an upright of the usual make, with a 2-foot grate. The house has 4-foot walls and measures ten feet to the ridge. I had the boiler tapped for 1½-inch connections. I would have made larger openings, but, owing to the circumference of the boiler shell, I could not get a full thread in the iron, and thus would not have made a good job. The pipes are now connected as follows, using hot water:

I am using 1¼-inch flow lines, running west over the benches, on the walls, and 2-inch return coils, with one-eighth inch of fall to every eight feet of pipe. Is this the right way to put the piping in to receive the best results? I can not obtain a temperature above 45 degrees in zero weather. I should like to carry a night temperature of 50 degrees when the outside temperature is 15 degrees below zero. In the middle of the house I have an 8-foot bench, which I use for vegetables and which has no pipes either overhead or under it. Is this correct? I am located in Indiana. C. E. F.

From the description given, it is evident that there are at least three reasons why satisfactory results cannot be obtained. To obtain a temperature of 50 degrees when 15 degrees below zero, there should be at least 520 feet of radiating surface, and to carry this there should be either three 2-inch flow pipes or two 2½-inch flows, instead of two 1¼-inch flows, as in the present plan. Then, too, instead of having 520 feet of radiation, there are only a little more than 400 feet, and the arrangement of the pipes in the coils is such that the circulation is slow and ineffective. A part of the difficulty could be overcome by using a closed system, but even then it would be well to use 1½-inch flows, and 2-inch would be better.

It would be found helpful to the crops in the middle bench if a part of the radiation could be underneath, and if the piping is to be rearranged I would advise the use of three 2-inch flow pipes, of which one should be under the ridge, to supply two 2-inch returns underneath the bench. Then on the sides use one 2-inch flow and two 2-inch returns, although, unless the house is well built and somewhat sheltered, it would be safer to put in an additional return on the exposed side.

BOILER BOILS OVER.

I have a small greenhouse, 20x26, running north and south, with the north end against a shed. The house is nine feet to the ridge and the side walls are four feet high; the east side is glass. There are eight lines of 2-inch pipe, four on each side; or, rather, there is one continuous pipe on each side, extending twice to the farther end of the house and back. In other words, the 2-inch pipe, starting as a flow attached to the purlin, runs to the farther end of the house, downward to the side wall and back to the vicinity of the boiler, but then, instead of emptying into the boiler, it makes the journey again to the farther end of the house and back. This piping does not work effectively.

The expansion tank is fifteen feet above the riser and is attached to the return close to where it enters the boiler. The return pipes, before dropping down into the boiler, are about on a level with the top of the boiler, which is a Bolton heater and has plenty of capacity. It is difficult to keep it from boiling over. R. C. H.

It is possible that one reason for the trouble from boiling over is that the boiler is larger than is required. Another reason is that the amount of radiation is considerably less than should be used to heat a house of the size described, and then, too, the arrangement of the piping is such as to prevent the rapid circulation of the water, and these all tend to increase the boiling over of the heater.

One method of correcting the difficulty would be to use it as a closed system, and this certainly should be done if the zigzag arrangement of the coils is to be retained and no more radiation is to be put in.

A better way would be to put in six additional 2-inch returns and connect them at each end, so that there will be two coils of six pipes each, through which the water can return directly to the heater, without traveling back and forth through the coils as with the present arrangement. The arrangement of the flow pipes, with one 2-inch main on each side, need not be changed, but it will be better to connect the expansion tank with the highest point in each flow pipe, rather than with the returns, as in the present system.

INSTALL ANOTHER FLOW.

My greenhouse is built on a slope, running lengthwise of a lot which is 150 feet long and has a fall of ten feet in the 150 feet. The house is 20x140, with the potting room and boiler room at the lower end. The boiler room is 10x20 and eight feet deep. The potting room is 10x20, making the total length of the greenhouse and potting room 150 feet. We have a 70-foot room in one end and a 70-foot room in the other, separated by a 4-foot concrete wall, with glass above. The side walls are four feet high.

making sixteen return pipes, and the flow is at the ridge. The returns are 1½-inch pipes. The flow from the boiler to the partition is 3-inch, and is then reduced to 2-inch. The coils come up to the partition and around to the door at the lower end, and they are arranged in the same way in the upper half of the house. Now, the upper end of each room is hotter than the lower end, and I want to know whether something can be done to equalize this heat, as it rises to the two higher ends. Please state, also, if we have enough piping to keep the house at 60 degrees at night when the outside temperature is 4 degrees below zero. We are located in Pennsylvania. M. E. A.

As near as I can make out from the description, there are two rooms, 20x70 feet, each of which has sixteen 1½-inch return pipes, and the common flow for the two houses is a 3-inch main, which is reduced to 2-inch after the first house has been supplied. This will give something over 1,200 feet of radiation in the two houses, which is too much to supply with one 3-inch main, especially as it means furnishing water to thirty-two 1½-inch returns, each of which is nearly eighty feet long and turns the corners at each end, which still more impedes the circulation.

While it would be better to use 2-inch pipe for the returns in a house of this length, it will not be necessary to make any change in the return pipes, especially as they provide about the correct amount of radiating surface. By running an additional 3-inch main, so that the coils in each house will be supplied by a 3-inch flow, the difficulty will probably be overcome. As now arranged, with a 2-inch flow supplying sixteen 1½-inch returns, it is not strange that the pipes become so cold, owing to the slow circulation, before they reach the lower ends of the coils, that they are not able to keep up the temperature, especially as the warmer air has a tendency to seek the highest part of each house.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Business was exceptionally good last week and prices were somewhat more steady. The shortage on roses has been discouraging both to the wholesaler and retailer; in fact, they were ordered ahead of their arrival. The best grades of roses, which usually bring from $4 up, have been wholesaling at $10 per hundred. There has been an unusually heavy demand for American Beauties and Richmond, and shipments received in response to long distance telephone calls often proved disappointing. No doubt Lent will have a tendency to lessen the demand and as we are looking for brighter weather this shortage will soon be overcome.

Carnations have increased both in quality and quantity. Enchantress and White Perfection fetch top notch prices of $4 per hundred. Other grades vary from $2 to $3, according to quality. Narcissi, both white and yellow, also daffodils and jonquils, have been meeting with a ready sale. Double violets are more plentiful, especially shipped stock, but the singles have the call and are cleaned out daily. Harrisii and callas have been used liberally for funeral work and more could have been sold. Prices ranged from $10 to $12.50. Lily of the valley has been good property, selling out daily.

Sprengeri and plumosus are rather scarce, smilax enough to meet demand, and other greenery plentiful.

Furnished in any length up to 500 feet, without seam, joint or connection, ½ and ¾-in. sizes. An exceptionally high grade greenhouse hose, manufactured with a double woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover. The double woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking. Noxall Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 lbs. per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this. Noxall Hose is made by the latest and most improved methods and its construction is the most important improvement made in the manufacture of rubber hose since Goodyear discovered the process of vulcanizing rubber 75 years ago. No hose made will give equal service for greenhouse use.

T. E. Hallbeck has for several years been working on canna crosses, and has obtained a number of varieties which seem to him to be improvements on existing sorts. Most noteworthy of these is a seedling he has named Bronzo, obtained by crossing King Humbert and King of Bronzes. The flower is salmon red and is not unusually large, but the beauty and usefulness of Bronzo is not in the flower, but in the foliage, which is quite unusual and difficult to describe. Around the edges of the leaves there is a band two inches or more wide, of a reddish purple, and the veining also is distinct. The midrib is a madder-brown, with green between these colors. The stalk is reddish brown. The leaves are long, of medium width. The variety grows from five to five and one-half feet high, and has a heavy base stalk which enables it to withstand high winds. Mr. Hallbeck thinks the variety will have a future as a bedding plant.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.—W. G. Saltford has a house of Lilium giganteum for Easter which appears to be the finest yet. As previously noted, these were potted up in December, and in many instances buds can be seen. A temperature of 80 to 90 degrees by day and 76 degrees at night will be maintained for a while. When the buds are full, the temperature will be reduced. Harrisii is as uncertain a proposition this season as it has been of late years. The grower who has a clean batch is a lucky individual.

An interesting event that took place here on the evening of January 28 was the organization of the Horticultural Society. It has long been felt that the time was ripe for such a society to be formed, and it was only necessary that someone take the initial step. That the efforts of the promoters were successful is shown by the fact that nearly sixty members were enrolled.

The first meeting was an enthusiastic one. The following officers were elected: President, E. Bennett; vice-president, R. Cochrane; secretary, W. H. Waite; corresponding secretary, Lee Whitman; treasurer, P. MacDonald. The executive committee consists of H. Scott, J. Goff, T. Mahoney, R. Cummings, L. Taylor and A. MacDonald.

That the society will be a success there can be no doubt, with such a man as E. Bennett as president and W. H. Waite as secretary, both having had large experience in such societies. All the other officers and the members of the executive committee are also good, live men and hustlers. Lee Whitman.

The Market.

Business is rushing and the weather is good, but stock is scarce excepting carnations. Some few weeks ago carnations were at a premium, but just at present they are plentiful and the quality is fine, with but few exceptions. Roses are good, but exceedingly scarce, and orchids and gardenias meet with a good demand, better than in previous years. Bulbous stock is coming along nicely and cleaning up well, excepting tulips in light colors. Considerable southern smilax is used for decorations for large fancy dress balls.

Various Notes.

Harry Bunyard was an interested listener at the recent meeting of the Florists' Club, and offered some good suggestions concerning flower shows.

The best Killarney now seen in these parts are being consigned to the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange by John Casey, of Mount Clemens.

Jacob Miller, of Kinnell & Miller, contractors, recently gave a talk and demonstration on cement benches, which proved most interesting.

The last meeting of the Florists' Club was fairly well attended. The better part of the evening was spent in discussing the fall show. Various schemes of advertising, decorating of hall, raising funds, etc., were brought up. H. S.

Portland, Me.—The business of the E. J. Harmon Co. has now been incorporated, with a capital stock of $10,000. The officers are: President, Edward J. Harmon; treasurer, Mabel I. Hayes. Last fall the firm opened a handsome, finely equipped store in the new Baxter building, and Miss Hayes has been one of the managers of this place.

North Adams, Mass.—Has it ever occurred to you that the refuse of tobacco dust, remaining after fumigating, makes an excellent substitute for wood ashes? A. J. Schmutz found this out by accident. Usually throwing the ashes on the bench at a particular spot, he was surprised to find the plants in the immediate vicinity doing so much better than those not so favored. Now he gives the beds all that can be gathered.

These are the houses, 150 x 30, 7-foot sides.

TWELVE FOOT SWEET PEAS IN THESE THREE HITCHINGS HOUSES

Sounds like a "Jack and the Beanstalk" story, but it's true.

They are at Baldwin, L. I., and George Schunemann is the man who is growing them.

Planted in July, Mr. Schunemann began cutting the latter part of September. Instead of tearing them out about this time they are climbing pretty near the ridge, 15½ feet high, and are loaded down with big blooms, and good for several weeks more cutting.

That's one of the things that have been done in light, tight, perfectly ventilated and rightly heated houses.

It paid him to build Hitchings Houses, it will pay you.

You Can't Mistake a U-Bar House

The very minute you see a U-Bar you know it is a U-Bar. It has that U-Bar light airiness about it—that nicety of detail and perfection of finish that stamps it as the finest of greenhouses. Everybody knows they can't be equaled for growing houses, and that's what you want houses for. Don't make the mistake of getting a house that looks like the U-Bar; have a U-Bar and then you know you have the best house. Glad to send you a catalogue if you will write for it.

ILLINOIS STATE FLORISTS' ASSOCIATION

OFFICERS ELECTED.

President—C. L. Washburn, Chicago.
Vice-president—C. Loveridge, Peoria.
Secretary—J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville.
Treasurer—F. L. Washburn, Bloomington.

Possibly the most important result of the meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association, that thriving little body of prairie state enthusiasts, at Champaign-Urbana this week, was the adoption of resolutions calling upon the authorities of the great university with which the florists now are so closely associated, to consider the landscape art in relation to their broad campus. As "men build grandly before they come to garden finely," the higher art largely has been neglected at the University of Illinois. The deficiency long has been noted and the possibilities commented on in private, but it remained for the State Florists' Association to start the movement for better things by the adoption of resolutions offered by W. N. Rudd, after the subject had been discussed at the annual banquet. The university recently has appointed a campus commission, for the purpose of improving the appearance of its great group of monumental buildings. But the commission is composed entirely of architects; not a landscape man among them! The Illinois State Florists' Association asks that a competent landscape man be added to the commission.

The influence of the skillful landscape treatment of the 1,200 acres of campus will be of infinite value in inculcating an appreciation of and love for gardening in the 4,000 young people who are constantly in residence at the university.

Meet at Experiment Station.

The object of meeting at Champaign-Urbana was to afford the florists of the state an opportunity to inspect the model greenhouse plant which has been erected at the university and the work for floriculture that is being conducted there under the direction of H. B. Dorner. Phil Foley takes special pride in the two houses that thus far have been built, for they are up-to-date in every particular, not only the houses but the heating plant and service building. The range is commercial in character throughout, as experimental work under any other conditions would have little value to the trade. The enterprise is solely in the interest of the florists' business. At present tests of chemical fertilizers for carnation growing occupy most of the space. It is yet much too early to publish results, but the members of the association, most of whom grow carnations, took much interest in examining the test plots, for it is recognized that before many years some substitute for animal manures must be found. Apart from the floricultural experiment station there is some interesting work in sweet pea breeding in progress in one of the old university greenhouses.

Opening Session.

The business sessions of the association were held in a hall of the College of Agriculture and were opened by an address of welcome by Dr. Edmund J. James, president of the University of Illinois and an enthusiast in the work. He spoke most interestingly for twenty-five minutes, explaining the relationship of the university and other public institutions to the people of the state, sketching the growth of the university from its inception as one of the first land-grant colleges to its present enrollment of over 5,000, counting all departments. He told of the purposes of the university and the education it imparts and said that the functions of such a great center of learning are not only to teach what is known but to find out what is not known. In the latter sphere agriculture offers an almost virgin field, for there is as yet little exact knowledge. For floriculture the university will do its part, he said, but its authorities rely for advice and assistance on the State Florists' Association, speaking through its advisory board, and upon the craft at large to know when it has made good in its work.

P. J. Foley responded for the association, speaking of the appreciation the trade has of the efforts of the university officials made in behalf of this new department, of the personal courtesy of the men at the helm of affairs, and said the association will push along in the hope that some day Illinois will have the leading floricultural institution of the United States.

Reports of Officers.

Secretary J. F. Ammann read his report, in part as follows:

"Your secretary begs to report a total membership of 175, divided as follows: Life members, 18; annual members, 153; honorary members, 4. In the matter of data on our industry I am sorry to report slow progress. It seems there are still a great many florists throughout the state in a dormant condition, who need forcing. For instance, out of 400 return postals mailed, I received 125 answers, so you see the percentage of dormant stock is large. Some means should be devised by which our membership would be materially increased. Present members who are in arrears for dues should be urged to pay up and take more interest. The secretary has tried various means through correspondence to accomplish results on these lines, but so far has received little encouragement for his work."

Treasurer F. L. Washburn reported finances as follows:

Balance	$138.00
Receipts	164.00
	$302.00
Expenditures	124.00
Balance	$178.00

W. N. Rudd, secretary of the advisory board, reported on the three meetings held by that body during the year. He said that the present greenhouse range represents an investment of $18,650 and that plans are on foot for additions to glass and equipment. He reported briefly on the work being done in the testing of fertilizers and said: "The reason for taking up the study of fertilizers was that it seemed to be the one subject of greatest interest to the florists of the state at large at the present time. The reason for selecting the carnation for the beginning of the experiments was that in certain ways it was the most available and desirable plant to begin with, and that a good share of the results would be almost equally applicable to other florists' flowers, and with the space available only one variety could be handled in the complete and comprehensive way desired. The reason that no results have been published is that while much of interest has been learned, everything must be verified by repeated experiments, as conditions affecting any one series of tests might interfere with the accuracy of the conclusions drawn, and it was strongly put before the board and concurred in unanimously by them, that it was much better to let the florists wait for their information than to take any possible chance of giving them information which might, by subsequent test, be found wrong. In conclusion the board wishes to extend its thanks to Dean Davenport and Professor Blair for the many courtesies shown and to express its confidence in Mr. Dorner and its great satisfaction with the able way in which he has handled our work, of which he has been directly in charge."

A. M. Augustine, secretary of the State Horticultural Society, was present to invite the Florists' Association to join in a ten days' meeting and short course of instruction at the university about the middle of December. This was referred to a committee consisting of J. C. Vaughan, C. L. Washburn and W. N. Rudd.

A. T. Hey, A. G. Fehr and O. B. Heinl were named as an auditing committee.

Address of Prof. Blair.

Prof. J. C. Blair, chief of the department of horticulture of the university, read a paper on "The Value of the Experiment Station to the Florists and the Duty of the Florists to the Station." He said it is only recently that the florists' business has been thought of sufficient importance to receive attention in experiment station work. Out of the thousands of publications of the experiment stations of the United States only forty-seven relate to florists' work, but these are of real help to the trade. He estimated the present investment in floriculture in Illinois at $20,000,000 and said he could see into the future far enough to figure an investment in the state of a hundred millions. Fertilizer for the work is even now not available in sufficient quantity, he said, and he had been told one Chicago firm of growers plans to start a dairy simply to supply the deficiency. He said it is up to the florists' experiment station to find a chemical substitute for animal manure. He estimated the present glass area in Illinois as 20,000,000 square feet, or about 400 acres, and said that no industry will receive fuller value than will the florists for time and money put into the experiment station work. Some of the things wanted are improved cultural methods, improved types and improved methods of packing and shipping. He promised that the investigators will work long and faithfully and predicted that the tax money used in the task will be given back to the people a hundred or even a thousand fold.

Prof. Blair said it is the duty of the florists individually and collectively to support the work of their experiment station, work directed by them through their advisory board of five appointed by the president of the State Association. He said that the trade must make its wants known to the station authorities, and also to the state legislature, so that florists, who are heavy taxpayers, will not be forgotten when the means of prosecuting the work are apportioned. More glass is wanted. What has been done is only a beginning. Concluding, he said that if the floricultural department did not add one iota to the knowledge of florists it would nevertheless be worth while because it would instill the love for the beautiful in the 5,000 pupils who are constantly passing through the State University.

The Closing Session.

At the final session, Wednesday morning, February 16, Dr. J. W. Garner spoke on behalf of the Illinois Outdoor Art Association, which enlists the interest of all florists, C. L. Washburn read a paper on the cut flower industry of the state, which appears in full in this issue, and H. B. Dorner told conversationally of the work being done in the greenhouses under his charge. "The work for the season is with chemical fertilizers as supplementing natural manures in the growing of carnations. Fertilizers chosen for this work are those that had proven most successful in the previous season's work. The fertilizer is used on dried blood for nitrogen acid phosphate, for phosphorus and a potassium sulphate for potassium. In three sections manure sulphate replaces the dried blood and in a second set of three, ground rock replaces the acid phosphate.

"The test this year is a test of quantity used in the sections in varying proportions. Each section is marked with a single label upon which is a record of the amount of the fertilizer applied. All sections have added to them at the beginning, thirty pounds of cattle manure, which is about two-thirds of a bushel."

An amendment to the constitution was adopted so that the time and place of the annual meeting hereafter will be decided by the executive board of the association.

Resolutions were adopted putting the association on record as urging the appointment of a competent landscape architect on the campus commission and favoring national conservation of natural resources.

Officers were elected and the judges reported.

The Judges Report.

The judges were Emil Buettner, Nic Zweifel and C. W. Johnson. They scored the new carnations as follows: Hoosier Lad, 88 points; Scarlet Glow, 85; Annie May, 86; Dorner's No. 42-06, 85; Mary Tolman, 85; Greenwood, 86; President Valentine, 85; Mrs. W. W. W. Riley, 81.

The judges made special mention of the excellence of the Killarney and White Killarney exhibited by Wendland & Keimel, mention of the very good Maryland of A. C. Brown and of the Maids of Bassett & Washburn. They also made special mention of J. A. Peterson's Begonia Gloire de Cincinnati and of the table of well grown blooming plants of F. B. Smith & Son, Danville. All the other exhibits were listed and given, collectively, a good word.

The Exhibition.

The flower show was of unexpectedly large proportions. It was not a trade exhibit, such as has been held when the association met at Springfield, but a showing of plants and cut flowers specially for the edification of the university and the 20,000 people of Champaign-Urbana, who never had seen its like. The show was in the Memorial hall, adjoining Agricultural College, and was thronged both days and especially in the evenings.

Not only was the quantity of stock large but the quality of much of it was of superior excellence. Perhaps the exhibit that attracted the most attention was that of Wendland & Keimel, Elmhurst, who staged a superb vase of Killarney and one of White Killarney that was still more wonderful when it is considered that they have only 250 plants to cut from.

J. A. Peterson, Cincinnati, had some beautiful plants of Begonia Gloire de Cincinnati that received equal attention from florists and townspeople. He also showed Phœnix Roebelenii, kentias and asparagus.

Frank B. Smith & Son, Danville, had a large table of flowering plants of special excellence. Among them were cinerarias, cyclamens, violets in pans, pansies, Primula obconica, P. Kewensis, tulips and a cherry tree, also a vase of fine single violets.

Bassett & Washburn, Chicago, had an excellent vase of Bridesmaids and another of O. P. Bassett carnation.

The Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, was as usual one of the largest exhibitors. They showed their season's novelties in good shape: Conquest, Mary Tolman and two fine vases of Sangamo. Other sorts shown included O. P. Bassett, Alvina, Winsor, Afterglow, White Perfection, May Day, Mrs. Chas. Knopf, White Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress and Pink Delight.

Henry Eichholz, Waynesboro, Pa., sent Washington, the Lawson-colored sport of Enchantress, and Princess Charming, light pink.

Baur & Smith, Indianapolis, were represented by a fine vase of Shasta.

Nic Zweifel, Milwaukee, brought 100 Bright Spot that stood up above the other deep pinks.

W. W. Coles, Kokomo, Ind., sent enough of his new crimson, named Mrs. Coles, to make two handsome vases.

R. Witterstaetter, Cincinnati, sent his light pink seedling named President J. A. Valentine and his deep pink designated as No. 1407-O.

W. N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill., set up two handsome vases, one of Greenwood, the large light pink, and the other of mixed seedlings.

Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, staged three vases of roses that were of fine quality, cut tight as for shipping. The varieties were Killarney, White Killarney and Maryland.

J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill., showed Ivory, Chatenay, Killarney, White Killarney, O. P. Bassett, Rose-pink Enchantress, White Enchantress, May Day and a vase of single violets.

Anton Then, Chicago, staged two seedling carnations that he thinks well of as commercial sorts, No. 291, red, and No. 41, white.

A. Jurgens, Chicago, sent a vase of jonquils and another of Double Von Sions that gave a touch of variety.

Joseph Heinl & Sons, Jacksonville, had a nice vase of White Enchantress.

C. Loveridge, Peoria, had a fine vase of O. P. Bassett and good ones of Winsor, Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress.

White Enchantress and White Perfection.

Wirth & Gaupp, Springfield, sent Rose-pink Enchantress, Enchantress and White Enchantress.

Albert T. Hey Floral Co., Maywood, staged Bride rose and Enchantress and Mrs. Lawson carnations, the latter looking as though the stock retained its full vigor.

F. Dorner & Sons Co., Lafayette, Ind., sent a vase of their enormous scarlet, Hoosier Lad, one of Scarlet Glow, White Wonder, No. 42-06, light pink; also Rose-pink Enchantress and Pink Delight.

The E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., sent vases of three of its new ones, J. W. Riley, Mrs. Beckwith and Annie May.

The W. C. Hill Floral Co., Streator, sent a nice lot of Beacon and a variegated seedling labeled Mrs. F. Plumb.

H. Johann & Son, Collinsville, showed O. P. Bassett, Rose-pink Enchantress and White Enchantress.

Henry Baer, Peoria, brought Aristocrat, Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress and White Enchantress.

E. W. Guy, Belleville, set up a vase of Ivory rose.

W. H. Gullett & Sons, Lincoln, showed Maid, Bride, White Killarney, Maryland and Killarney roses.

A. C. Brown, Springfield, was one of the largest exhibitors. He had the only vase of Richmond rose and it was fine. He also showed Killarney and My Maryland in good shape. His carnations were mostly new varieties. Sangamo showed up in good shape. Superba also looked well. He had a new bright pink labeled Optimo, Clara Mae, a good light pink, and another of the same color designated as No. 314. A vase of Afterglow was all right. He also had several seedlings under number, of which only a half dozen blooms of each were shown.

Mrs. A. C. Canfield, of Springfield, brought a fine lot of carnations, including large vases of Red Nelson Fisher, O. P. Bassett, Winona, Afterglow, Winsor, Beacon, White Enchantress and White Perfection.

A. Washburn & Sons, Bloomington, staged Beacon, Enchantress and White Enchantress; also some fine sweetpeas and single violets.

The American Blower Co., Detroit, had a salesman with a model of the Detroit steam trap.

I. L. Pillsbury, Galesburg, had a vase of split carnations mended with his calyx staple.

D. D. Johnson Co., Chicago, sent an exhibit of his Evergreen brand fertilizer.

PITTSFIELD, MASS.—Robert L. Smith and Stanley G. Barnes, of Schenectady, N. Y., have opened a flower store in the Agricultural Bank block, with an entrance on both Fenn street and Dunham street. Mr. Barnes has been with Charles Limmer, the Schenectady florist, for a number of years, and Mr. Smith has also had a wide experience in handling flowers. Mr. Barnes' sister, Miss Elsie Barnes, will assist at the store for a few weeks.

THE CUT FLOWER INDUSTRY.

[A paper by C. L. Washburn, of Chicago, read at the fourth annual convention of the Illinois State Florists' Association, at Champaign-Urbana, February 15 and 16, 1910.]

The cut flower industry of the state of Illinois has made most remarkable progress in recent years. To fully obtain an idea of this industry, we must look back some eighteen or twenty years and compare the business then with that of the present time. The business then was not considered of any importance by the other commercial lines of trade, but of late years it has been recognized as one of the standard industries of the state. The quality of flowers twenty years ago would not compare with the quality handled at the present time. The stems of the best grade of roses then were only twelve to fifteen inches long, and American Beauties had stems only thirty to thirty-six inches long. Carnations were about the size of a quarter dollar, but as the demand kept calling for a better grade of flowers, the growers kept improving the quality of their product.

Prices also averaged better as the quality improved. The flower buyers all through the country began to see that the better quality of flowers lasted longer, as well as looked better, and they would prefer paying a fair price for good flowers rather than buy the smaller stock at lower figures. These facts compelled the growers to raise improved varieties of plants and also use better facilities and better houses in which to grow their stock.

The One Continual Effort.

The evolution in the cut flower industry is one continual effort toward better flowers, and better methods of growing and shipping the stock. This is a peculiar feature of our line of trade, for in the competitive strife of business we are continually on the lookout for new ideas, new varieties of plants, new methods of construction and new everything else pertaining to our business which can in any way improve our output.

The experiment station here, at this college, should prove of immense value to the florists' trade of this state, as a large number of the new things can be tested before being offered to the trade. In fact, it would be a good idea if the trade would insist on a trial test of some of these new things before they are offered for sale, and a certificate from this station, showing the results that were obtained from such a trial, would be of immense value toward determining the quality of the goods offered for sale.

Growing the Flowers.

The growing end of the cut flower business has to keep up to date in everything regarding new varieties of plants, better methods of ventilation and the most improved fertilizers, fumigating compounds, etc.

The houses themselves must also be kept up to date. The question of what is the best greenhouse is a hard one. It is generally acknowledged that a separate house is best for Beauties and roses, while for carnations and other plants a number of connected houses seem to do as well as separate houses, and they cost less money to build and operate.

A separate house should be at least twenty-six or twenty-eight feet wide, if not wider, and seven to eight feet to the gutters. This gives a large body of air and a more even temperature. Such a house, if built of all iron frame construction, would cost complete, including its share of the heating and other apparatus, about 50 cents per square foot of glass, while a wooden house costs from 25 to 35 cents per square foot of glass. The cost of running a greenhouse depends largely on the quantity of glass handled, but for the average place the fuel cost can be estimated at 3 to 4 cents and the labor at 8 to 10 cents per square foot of glass. The supplies and repairs cannot well be estimated, as they depend on the quality of the house, etc.

Opportunities in the Trade.

In the cut flower industry there is a continual struggle for improvement at all times, and I do not know of any industry in which a man stands a better show for success if starting in now. One must have experience, of course, in the growing of the stock, but there is at least as good a chance for individual effort in our line of trade as in any other. There never can be any monopoly or trust that would control the output or sale of the flowers, for that output is raised in a thousand different places. Every man stands on an equal footing as far as the market demand is concerned, for there is no combination to help or restrain trade for the benefit of any firm or set of firms.

The selling of the greenhouse product, whether cut flowers or plants, is just as important a branch of the business as the growing end. No matter how good the stock is or how carefully the greenhouses have been run, all will be wasted if the product is not well sold.

Selling the Flowers.

There are two methods of selling. According to one method, the growers sell their own stock, having their own grades and methods of sorting, and of course they know just when the stock was cut. A grower who sells his own stock usually caters to some special class of buyers, as the shipping trade, for instance. This trade requires flowers cut tighter in the bud and also careful sorting and packing, in order that the shipment may arrive in good condition. Flowers can be shipped a distance requiring them to remain packed in the boxes forty-eight to sixty hours. These long-distance shipments demand the utmost care, especially as to the weather conditions. During the warm and wet weather it is hard to have carnations arrive in good condition when shipped a long distance. Roses and Beauties will ship in better shape during such weather. The grower who sells his own stock should take pride in having an even run of flowers in each grade.

The other method of selling consists in shipping flowers to a commission firm, to be sold for the account of the shipper. There are a number of firms in the larger cities that make this selling on a commission a specialty. Their usual charge for such work is fifteen per cent of the gross sales. It is worth this amount to handle the stock right. The expenses of selling are almost this amount with the larger commercial growers.

A Benefit to the Community.

The cut flower trade is favorably located as far as Illinois is concerned. Our shipping facilities are unsurpassed. We supply flowers to an immense territory, going east as far as Buffalo, Pittsburg and Washington, south to the Gulf of Mexico, west to Colorado, Montana and the Dakotas and north as far as Winnipeg. This immense scope of country drains to Illinois a continual flow of money from our sales. The cut flower industry is not a jobbing trade, where the most of the money received for its goods goes off to another state in payment of them, but is what might be called a manufacturing enterprise. The grower takes a piece of ground and covers it with glass. He is what might be called an intensified farmer, as he irrigates his plants by watering them; he ventilates them; he controls the temperature in cold weather by artificial heat and sometimes grows two or three crops a year from the same bench space. This product is the result of steady labor for 365 days in the year. There is no let-up, but one thing crowds into another, so that there is always something to be done.

A greenhouse establishment is a very beneficial industry to any town. Its outlay for labor and supplies is just so much cash that is brought right there to be spent, and when the total amount of glass is considered in the state of Illinois—estimated at about 18,000,000 square feet—the magnitude of the trade can be appreciated. There is a total business in cut flowers and plants, grown in this state, of at least $5,000,000 per year. A good share of this immense sum is drawn here from other states and all of this sum is expended right here in this state. It will thus be seen that the cut flower industry is one of the most solid foundation stones on which the prosperity of the state of Illinois is built.

ORCHIDS

SEASONABLE ORCHID NOTES.

Lælia Anceps.

Lælia anceps is at its best during January and February and is one of the most useful orchids grown for the florist. Its culture is comparatively simple. Pans or baskets of osmunda fiber, with good drainage below it, through which water will percolate freely, is what it requires. A common error is to grow it too warm. I have seen it in densely shaded palm houses, making beautiful growths, but not one in ten of them would flower. A carnation house temperature, with plenty of air and only a little shade, is what this lælia wants; under such conditions practically every new bulb will bloom. Anyone with an ordinary greenhouse can grow and flower this fine Mexican orchid, as well as that other charming variety, L. autumnalis.

The objection is sometimes raised that Lælia anceps keeps poorly when cut. The stems are long and hard. If they are split from the bottom upward and a light slanting cut is made here and there below the water level, so that more water can be taken up, this trouble will largely disappear. The white forms, such as Sanderiana, Stella, Schroderiana and Dawsoni, are much better keepers than the bulk of the colored ones. The true L. anceps alba is not at all common. It is pure white, except for a little yellow in the throat. Any rebasketing or potting required by these lælias should be done soon after flowering.

Calanthes and Cattleyas.

Calanthes have been making a glorious showing for some weeks. Arranged with adiantums on a stage, nothing could be more beautiful. As they pass out of flower, remove them to a shelf where they will be free from drip and watering from the hose. It is just as well to remove them from the pots and pack them in boxes of moderately dry sand for a time. As a compost, equal parts of well decayed and dried cow manure and fibrous loam, with a dash of coarse sand through it, have been found satisfactory during the last season. We prefer, when starting the bulbs, to place them in flats of sand until growths and roots start, later placing two bulbs in a 6-inch pot and three in an 8-inch pan. If the bulbs are extra large, it is a good plan to tie them to a short stake to keep them firm. No orchids should be potted loosely, or they will never thrive. A small lean-to house, which can be kept hot and moist during the growing season, will be to the liking of calanthes.

Cattleya Mossiæ will now have its bulbs well made up. It is a free blooming species and of quite easy culture. Do not shade this, or any other cattleyas, for a while yet. Never mind if the bulbs and leaves turn more of a golden hue than you like; this will not harm them in the least and the green color soon returns after shading is started. Beautiful dark green bulbed and foliaged cattleyas are the poorest bloomers. In their native habitats all these cattleyas get a lot of sun, and keeping them in semi-dungeon like structures is not at all to their taste. C. Mossiæ is the great early summer cattleya and is one of the varieties any intelligent commercial grower can grow successfully. The fact that they are so inexpensive would seem to be one reason why more florists should try a few of them.

Coelogyne Cristata.

Cœlogyne cristata is one of the most generally useful florists' orchids, flowering in February and March. It enjoys a moderately cool house at all times and a winter minimum of 50 to 54 degrees is sufficiently high. It does not pay to force it. The flowers seem to hang fire and open just as quickly and of much finer quality in a cold house. The plants should be kept moderately dry while in flower. There is sufficient energy stored up in the bulbs to keep the flowers fresh. For design work C. cristata is invaluable. Of the several forms grown, the old type with round bulbs is the least worth growing. The variety Chatsworthi, with longer, oval-shaped bulbs, is fine. The pure white variety, alba, flowers later. Maxima has large flowers, a sort of improved Chatsworthi. There is also a pretty form named Lemoniana, with a pale lemon lip. Many consider this the gem of the family. When well established, cœlogynes enjoy an abundant water supply in the growing season and, next to calanthes and phaius, will take as much liquid manure as any orchid.

Phaius grandifolius now has its strong spikes well developed, and occasional weak doses of cow manure water will strengthen them and improve the quality of the flowers. Although an old orchid, this is quite a decorative one. We find fibrous loam, with a little cow manure, sphagnum and pieces of sandstone, grows this orchid to perfection. A winter temperature of 60 degrees answers well for it, although it can be successfully grown 10 degrees cooler.

Dendrobiums.

Dendrobium nobile is now coming into flower. While an old orchid, it is still hard to beat when well flowered. When it comes to a choice between a well bloomed specimen cattleya and a specimen of this dendrobe, carrying 500 to 1,000 flowers, the weight of popular opinion will invariably be with the latter. Where many growers fail with dendrobes of the nobile section is in affording too much moisture after the nodes appear, causing these to form bulbs in lieu of flowers. Light syringings overhead will suffice for moisture until it can be told with certainty that flower buds are really formed. With D. Wardianum, D. Phalænopsis, D. formosum and other varieties, a little extra moisture in no way affects the flowering.

These dendrobes will last a long time if hung in a shaded and slightly cooler house while in bloom. They are inexpensive, and when purchasing newly imported stock there is a likelihood of sesuring a wide range of types from a small number of plants. Newly imported plants look a little shabby on arrival, but there is always a probability of a fine white cattleya or heavily spotted Odontoglossum crispum, any one of which will recoup the grower for his entire purchase, and in addition the pleasant anticipations as the flowering season approaches must be experienced to be rightly understood. ORCHIDIST.

BURKI ON ORCHIDS.

Immense quantities of orchid flowers are sold in Pittsburg, and all are shipped in from distant cities. But Fred Burki, of the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co., is taking the bull by the horns. "If those eastern men can grow orchids and ship them here and make money out of them, why can't we at home have a finger in the pie?" That is the way he puts it and this is why he has an end of a large greenhouse filled with recently imported Cattleya Trianæ. "Oh, yes. We'll have to get a lot more; we'll have to get enough to keep a man busy with them all tne time. You see it isn't every man who understands orchids, and the man to grow them had better have nothing else to do. The orchid fly has given us some trouble; the gouty young growths indicate their presence. Now, a man who doesn't know orchids is apt to mistake the work of these flies as promises of extra strong shoots. Yes, we must get an orchid man."

WM. FALCONER.

Laelio-Cattleya Digbyano-Mossiae.

A FINE LAELIO-CATTLEYA.

Lælio-Cattleya Digbyano-Mossiæ was originally raised by John Seden, the noted hybridist for James Veitch & Sons, London, and was the result of a cross between Lælia Digbyana and Cattleya Mossiæ. From seed sown in 1882, the first of the two plants raised bloomed in 1889 and received a first-class certificate from the Royal Horticultural Society. One of the two plants passed into the collection of the late F. L. Ames, at North Easton, Mass., and a number of plants taken from the original are now in that collection.

Flowering, as it does, in December, January and February, this lælio-cattleya is particularly useful. The large, beautifully fringed flowers are usually carried two and three on a sheath, but require some support, as they do not hold up their heads like the cattleyas. The flowers, however, will keep fresh even longer than any of the cattleyas. They grow well in pots of osmunda fiber at the warmest end of the cattleya house and, like some other hybrids, will make two growths and give two crops of flowers a year in some seasons.

This was the first of the crosses in which Lælia Digbyana was one of the parents. Quite a number of other crosses have since been made, all of which are showy. The leading European commercial growers who make a specialty of hybridizing offer many of these crosses in an unflowered state. C.

FARMER CITY, ILL.—John McDonald, of the Farmer City Greenhouse, has had a better trade this winter than ever before and sees indications of a most satisfactory business in the coming spring.

SOUTH WEYMOUTH, MASS.—J. Streiferd & Son have an unusually fine lot of genistas in excellent shape for Easter. This firm grows genistas largely and their produce is now so well known that it sells quickly.

Carnations

CARNATION CULTURE.

[A paper by S. J. Goddard, of Framingham, Mass., read at a meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, February 15, 1910.]

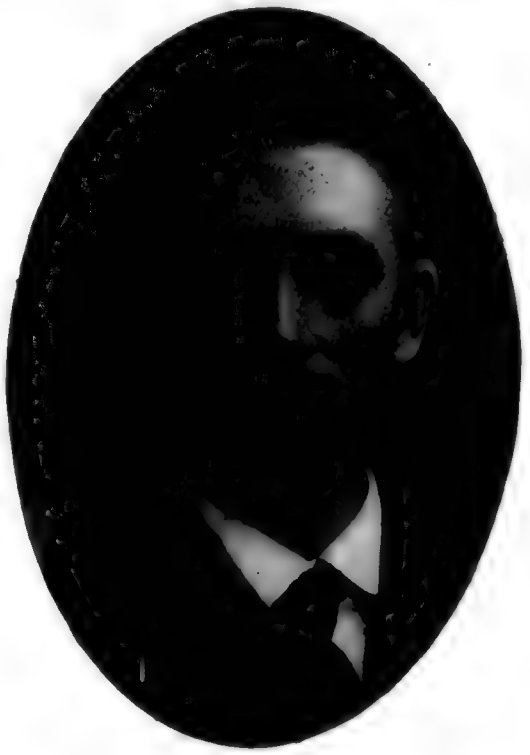
To be successful in growing carnations, the minutest details must be carefully considered.

To start with, the propagating bench must be absolutely clean; no old, rotton bottom or side boards should be allowed to remain when starting to propagate in the early winter. My method is to build a bench of 1-inch pecky cypress. We lay the boards close together, using sides three and one-half inches deep.

Ready for the Cuttings.

Before filling with sand, whitewash the bench thoroughly, using hot lime with a small proportion of Portland cement, of the consistency of very soft mortar, so that it has to be rubbed well with a brush in order to fill every crack.

In picking off cuttings, great care should be exercised to make the selections from only the healthy plants, and do not take them unless they have fully matured. By being matured I mean that they are on stems on which the bud is showing color or is fairly well developed. In setting them in the sand be careful not to set them too deep; about three-quarters of an inch is deep enough. Make them as firm as possible and water each row as soon as pressed in. This method gives one a better chance to see that the sand is thoroughly soaked and leveled, so that there are no dry spaces around the bases of the cuttings. Water should be given every day for ten days. The sand will then keep wet enough to carry the cuttings for the balance of their sojourn in the propagating house.



Flats Versus Pots.

The next proceeding is to shift the rooted cuttings from the sand to flats or pots. We prefer flats, as they are easier to handle, take up less room and are much easier to care for later in the season, with regard to watering. My experience has been, when lifting field-grown plants, that stock planted from pots will retain the shape of the pots and the loose roots around the outside will break off to a great extent. This is not the case with stock planted from flats. We use flats twelve inches wide, twenty-four inches long and three inches deep. These will hold sixty plants, placed in ten rows, with six in each row. That is for the earliest boxed stock. Later in the season, or with any boxed after March 1, we put in eleven rows, with seven in a row, or seventy-seven plants in each flat. We prepare our boxes by making the soil moderately firm and of the right degree of moisture to work well, using one part well rotted cow manure and four parts fresh loam. We always immerse the roots of our cuttings in a pail of water when lifting, to remove the sand, finding that by this procedure fewer roots are broken in course of handling.

Always give a good soaking after transplanting. Put the young transplanted stock in a house that is kept at a night temperature of not over 52 degrees or less than 48 degrees, shielding them from the bright sunshine for three or four days and keeping them from drafts as much as possible.

Topping the Young Plants.

Do not top or pinch back until the cutting has grown enough to show the joints. I notice that when a top is pulled from one not developed, one does not get the heart out clean and the process has to be repeated some time later. Consequently the cutting that was jointed has commenced to branch and the other is two weeks behind.

Repeat this operation every week, taking tops from the ones most advanced. Never try to save the tops to increase your stock, even if it is a new variety and cost you $12 a hundred. The temptation is great, but the profits will be less the next winter. Also this may cause you to say the variety is "N. G." and heap abuse on the disseminator.

Keep the young plants growing continuously; never fail in your attention. Water, top and feed. Do not hurry to put them in a coldframe until the weather is warm enough to have the sash off in the daytime. I prefer a coldframe to a hotbed.

Now for the spring rush to plant outside; we are all anxious to get the carnations in the field. Here, in Massachusetts, we commence about April 25 or May 1, if the weather is favorable. Of course, the land must be dry enough and properly plowed and smoothed.

Planting Outside.

Our system is as follows: Set the line across the piece to be planted. Take a Plant, Jr., wheel hoe, with the small plow attachment, and make a small furrow right across. This is just as good as chopping with a spade and ten times as rapid. Have a boy drop the plants (which have previously been cut out), six inches apart. After planting, rake or smooth off a couple of feet next to the row and repeat the operation, setting the line this time fifteen inches from the starting point. This will give ample room to run a wheel hoe through for weeding and cultivating.

Never let the weeds get ahead of you. Keep the wheel hoe going once a week and hand-weed every two weeks. We never use a hand hoe, as too many plants are injured by carelessness on the part of the operator. I find we can do the work faster and much better by getting down on our knees and weeding, leaving the weeds on the right-hand side of the row. This accumulates all weeds in every other row, where they can be more readily taken off with a fork, if the weather is unfavorable for killing them.

Topping in the Field.

The most important work to be considered at this stage is the topping or pinching back. Here is where your foundation is laid for next winter's succession of blooms. Never pinch back every shoot at one time. Go over the plants at least once a week and remove the longest shoots, pinching them back hard to secure good, strong growths. We never use a knife.

I believe that one can regulate the crop right through the winter by this style of topping, at least until spring, when carnations will crop anyway.

We commence planting inside early in July and plan to finish during the first week in August.

Removing to the House.

Do not have too many plants dug at a time, so that the roots dry up and the plants wilt. Get them in place as soon as possible and put a support around them at once. We plant a small section and then put a support around them before watering. This holds the plant for all time and, when watering or syringing through the summer, holds them upright and in place.

We find that later in the season we have gained considerably by staking at planting time. The plants are upright; new growth will be straight, and, if the second support is not put on as soon as we would wish, the plants are not lopping all over the bench.

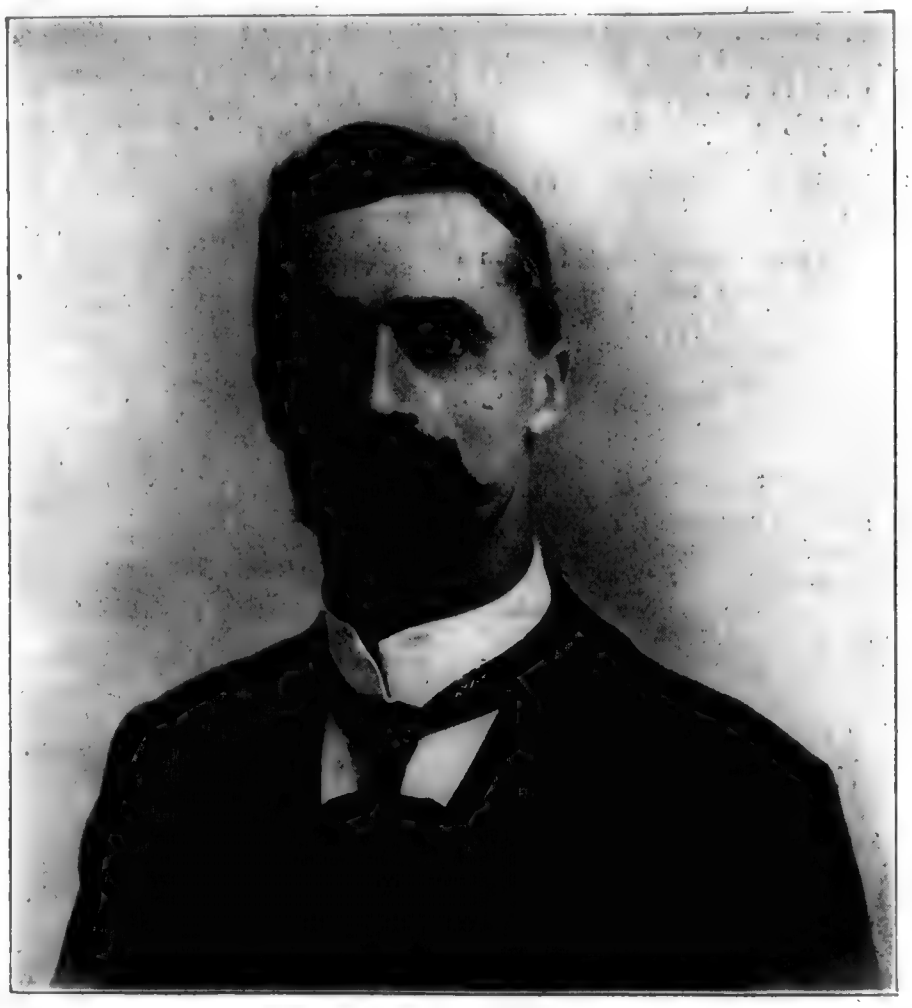
Do not shade the glass unless to keep the sun from taking all the moisture out of your own and the help's carcass. A little mud will do this trick, but a much better and cleaner shading is whiting and water put on by a force pump. This will come off by its exposure to the wind or rain and does no harm to the paint or putty.

The Endless Round of Details.

I do not believe in shading the newly planted stock. Keep plenty of moisture around the plants and under the benches for the first week, and your plants will take hold better than if you shaded. Their growth will be firmer and they will not have that wilted appearance when the light strikes them.

Now comes the time when the best of one's knowledge and intelligence must be brought out. Don't water too much! Don't allow the soil to get too dry! Don't allow the house to get stuffy! Don't allow the strong wind to strike the plants! So many "Don'ts," but there are just as many "Do's," possibly more. Go over every bench, all around every bench; dig in the soil carefully; study the condition of it and the condition of the plants. Water where needed and no more; do this twice a day on bright days, in hot weather. Lots of bother, but one will have been well repaid for bothering before the holidays have passed. There is no such word as failure, if these little "Don'ts" and "Do's" are carried out carefully. They are the minutest details I started with in my paper, and on them is laid the foundation for your future profits.

CARNATIONS, PAST AND PRESENT



[A paper by W. H. Taplin, of Brooklyn, N. Y., read at a meeting of the New York Florists' Club, February 14, 1910.]

So much has been said and written on the subject of carnations and carnation culture during the last few years, and has also been expressed so well, that it seems scarcely possible that I may present anything new on this subject for the consideration of such an up-to-date organization as the New York Florists' Club. The literature of the carnation has become extensive, and there are doubtless many repetitions to be already found in it, so possibly a few more will be pardoned at this time.

The Oversupply of Inferior Blooms.

That the output of carnations is steadily increasing will, I think, be readily admitted by anyone familiar with the wholesale trade of our city, and that there is no better market for high grade flowers will also be conceded by the majority, but it is also unquestionably true that there are still many carnations sent into market that are far from ideal, either in size or condition, and the oversupply of such flowers breaks the market to such a degree that good stock is frequently sacrificed. It has been said that New York is the dumping ground for the growers of flowers in all the surrounding country at any time when the home markets of these growers become overloaded, and there may be some truth in that assertion, but at the same time one cannot blame the growers for hunting for a market, and the commission men would probably not refuse to accept the trifling percentages that come their way from this outside business.

Still, the New York market is critical in regard to carnations, as well as other stock, and it is more profitable to the grower to supply the varieties and the grade that the market calls for, rather than to produce simply an ordinary run of stock.

W. H. Taplin.

Thirty-five Years Ago.

To look back some thirty-five years and recall the varieties of that time, and then to glance at the carnations of today, gives room for thoughtful comparison.

Astoria, Edwardsii, Peerless, Degraw, La Purite—these were among the stock from which in later years an improved race sprang. In fact, it would seem that Astoria was the original parent of most of the yellow varieties that have since been grown. But the onward movement from Degraw and Peerless, down through the multitude of whites that have followed them, until we reach White Enchantress and White Perfection, shows many strides of improvement, and what the next ten years may bring forth we can only guess. Possibly that traditional 4-inch flower, on a free growing and free blooming plant, may be among the good things the hybridizers will surprise us with.

Progress in Pinks and Reds.

Then there have been the successive steps from Daybreak and Grace Wilder, through the various shades of pink, until Peter Fisher brought forth Enchantress, the most popular light pink of today, and in all probability the most widely grown variety in the carnation world.

And from Portia onward through the various shades of red, there have been many changes. A red of the size of Portia, free-blooming though that variety was, wouldn't stand much chance in the market in comparison with Victory and Beacon. And, according to the returns from Pittsburg, even these latter fine sorts are not in the same class, in regard to size, with Hoosier Lad, Dorner's latest triumph.

Victory, Its Strong and Weak Points.

But the majority of scarlet varieties have an unfortunate habit of being favorite hosts to the rust fungus, and Victory is no exception to the rule; in fact, it is decidedly the exception to find a bench of this variety that is free from rust. Of course, we all know that rust is not such a handicap to the grower as stem-rot or spot, but at the same time it does not help the appearance of a carnation house; neither does it improve the stamina of a variety infected by it. In addition to this, Victory does not branch very freely in the field and as a natural result the plants are likely to be small at the time of lifting. Yet, in spite of all these drawbacks, it is a fine flower and a good keeper, and as such sells readily.

A Noteworthy Trio.

The later red, and I had almost said the favorite red of the present day, is Beacon, also a product of that clever hybridizer, Peter Fisher. It is a great record for one grower to have produced

CARNATION CULTURE.

[A paper by S. J. Goddard, of Framingham, Mass., read at a meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, February 15, 1910.]

To be successful in growing carnations, the minutest details must be carefully considered.

To start with, the propagating bench must be absolutely clean; no old, rotton bottom or side boards should be allowed to remain when starting to propagate in the early winter. My method is to build a bench of 1-inch peeky cypress. We lay the boards close together, using sides three and one-half inches deep.

Ready for the Cuttings.

Before filling with sand, whitewash the bench thoroughly, using hot lime with a small proportion of Portland cement, of the consistency of very soft mortar, so that it has to be rubbed well with a brush in order to fill every crack.

In picking off cuttings, great care should be exercised to make the selections from only the healthy plants, and do not take them unless they have fully matured. By being matured I mean that they are on stems on which the bud is showing color or is fairly well developed. In setting them in the sand be careful not to set them too deep; about three-quarters of an inch is deep enough. Make them as firm as possible and water each row as soon as pressed in. This method gives one a better chance to see that the sand is thoroughly soaked and leveled, so that there are no dry spaces around the bases of the cuttings. Water should be given every day for ten days. The sand will then keep wet enough to carry the cuttings for the balance of their sojourn in the propagating house.

Flats Versus Pots.

The next proceeding is to shift the rooted cuttings from the sand to flats or pots. We prefer flats, as they are easier to handle, take up less room and are much easier to care for later in the season, with regard to watering. My experience has been, when lifting field-grown plants, that stock planted from pots will retain the shape of the pots and the loose roots around the outside will break off to a great extent. This is not the case with stock planted from flats. We use flats twelve inches wide, twenty-four inches long and three inches deep. These will hold sixty plants, placed in ten rows, with six in each row. That is for the earliest boxed stock. Later in the season, or with any boxed after March 1, we put in eleven rows, with seven in a row, or seventy-seven plants in each flat. We prepare our boxes by making the soil moderately firm and of the right degree of moisture to work well, using one part well rotted cow manure and four parts fresh loam. We always immerse the roots of our cuttings in a pail of water when lifting, to remove the sand, finding that by this procedure fewer roots are broken in course of handling.

Always give a good soaking after transplanting. Put the young transplanted stock in a house that is kept at a night temperature of not over 52 degrees or less than 48 degrees, shielding them from the bright sunshine for three or four days and keeping them from drafts as much as possible.

Topping the Young Plants.

Do not top or pinch back until the cutting has grown enough to show the joints. I notice that when a top is pulled from one not developed, one does not get the heart out clean and the process has to be repeated some time later. Consequently the cutting that was jointed has commenced to branch and the other is two weeks behind.

Repeat this operation every week, taking tops from the ones most advanced. Never try to save the tops to increase your stock, even if it is a new variety and cost you $12 a hundred. The temptation is great, but the profits will be less the next winter. Also this may cause you to say the variety is "N. G." and heap abuse on the disseminator.

Keep the young plants growing continuously; never fail in your attention. Water, top and feed. Do not hurry to put them in a coldframe until the weather is warm enough to have the sash off in the daytime. I prefer a coldframe to a hotbed.

Now for the spring rush to plant outside; we are all anxious to get the carnations in the field. Here, in Massachusetts, we commence about April 25 or May 1, if the weather is favorable. Of course, the land must be dry enough and properly plowed and smoothed.

Planting Outside.

Our system is as follows: Set the line across the piece to be planted. Take a Plant, Jr., wheel hoe, with the small plow attachment, and make a small furrow right across. This is just as good as chopping with a spade and ten times as rapid. Have a boy drop the plants (which have previously been cut out), six inches apart. After planting, rake or smooth off a couple of feet next to the row and repeat the operation, setting the line this time fifteen inches from the starting point. This will give ample room to run a wheel hoe through for weeding and cultivating.

Never let the weeds get ahead of you. Keep the wheel hoe going once a week and hand-weed every two weeks. We never use a hand hoe, as too many plants are injured by carelessness on the part of the operator. I find we can do the work faster and much better by getting down on our knees and weeding, leaving the weeds on the right-hand side of the row. This accumulates all weeds in every other row, where they can be more readily taken off with a fork, if the weather is unfavorable for killing them.

Topping in the Field.

The most important work to be considered at this stage is the topping or pinching back. Here is where your foundation is laid for next winter's succession of blooms. Never pinch back every shoot at one time. Go over the plants at least once a week and remove the longest shoots, pinching them back hard to secure good, strong growths. We never use a knife.

Still, the New York market is critical in regard to carnations, as well as other stock, and it is more profitable to the grower to supply the varieties and the grade that the market calls for, rather than to produce simply an ordinary run of stock.

Thirty-five Years Ago.

To look back some thirty-five years and recall the varieties of that time, and then to glance at the carnations of today, gives room for thoughtful comparison.

Astoria, Edwardsii, Peerless, Degraw, La Purite—these were among the stock from which in later years an improved race sprang. In fact, it would seem that Astoria was the original parent of most of the yellow varieties that have since been grown. But the onward movement from Degraw and Peerless, down through the multitude of whites that have followed them, until we reach White Enchantress and White Perfection, shows many strides of improvement, and what the next ten years may bring forth we can only guess. And from Portia onward through the various shades of red, there have been many changes. And, according to the returns from Pittsburg, even these latter fine sorts are not in the same class, in regard to size, with Hoosier Lad, Dorner's latest triumph.

Victory, Its Strong and Weak Points.

But the majority of scarlet varieties have an unfortunate habit of being favorite hosts to the rust fungus, and Victory is no exception to the rule; in fact, it is decidedly the exception to find a bench of this variety that is free from rust. Of course, we all know that rust is not such a handicap to the grower as stem rot or spot, but at the same time it does not help the appearance of a carnation house; neither does it improve the stamina of a variety infected by it. In addition to this, Victory does not branch very freely in the field and as a natural result the plants are likely to be small at the time of lifting. Yet, in spite of all these drawbacks, it is a fine flower and a good keeper, and as such sells readily.

A Noteworthy Trio.

The later red, and I had almost said the favorite red of the present day, is Beacon, also a product of that clever hybridizer, Peter Fisher. It is a great record for one grower to have produced such a noteworthy trio of varieties as Mrs. Lawson, Enchantress and Beacon, all of which originated with Mr. Fisher. While the west is undoubtedly coming forward at a good, round pace in the production of new carnations, yet there may be many that "also ran," before such another team as that we have noted is brought forth.

The evidence seems to be that Beacon is the most productive red in the market, and although it is not extra large, and with many growers is given to splitting badly during midwinter, yet it is a good Christmas color. In short, with all its faults, we love it still.

The Lawson Family.

We have already mentioned Mrs. Lawson, which for several years was the leader in the dark pink class and even yet is grown to some extent, having displaced a number of other varieties in various shades of pink. But Mrs. Lawson does not appeal to our market very strongly now, her place in turn having been taken by some later arrivals.

Mrs. Lawson has, however, left a numerous family. Among them are Welcome, Winsor and Variegated Lawson, which are still grown to a greater or less extent, and White Lawson may also be occasionally found, though these varieties are usually under the standard for length of stem.

Counting from La Purite, which I believe was introduced from Europe in this country by Dailledouze, Zeller & Co., and was the first pink carnation with which I had an acquaintance, there have been hosts of pink varieties launched on the sea of trade and many of them have been wrecked on the rocks of criticism.

But it is much easier to be a knocker than to produce the goods, and I think we should all give honor to the pioneers in the carnation trade, who offered to the world for a proper consideration, in due course, such pinks as Grace Wilder, Wm. Scott, Albertini, and others.

The varieties we have noted were not perfect, but neither have those of the present day reached that lofty standard. Even now there is room for a good dark pink, and there are more than whispers that such is on the way.

Crimson and Variegated.

Crimson is not a color that is demanded in thousand lots in most markets, the most likely exception to this statement being found in the neighborhood of Harvard, but crimson carnations have been grown for a good many years when we count from Crimson King, and even now the crimsons that are offered do not approach the size and vigor we find among the white and pink varieties. This fact makes us think that there is still room for improvement among the crimsons, and possibly it may be found among the number of crimson seedlings that are being tried out. In some parts of the country Harry Fenn is still producing some good flowers, but in our neighborhood this variety has lost its grip.

Patten and Variegated Lawson are probably the most popular of the variegated varieties, but neither of them can safely be counted upon to pay the rent. The first named is especially slow in blooming in the fall and early winter, though it produces abundantly in spring.

Bay State secured the gold medal last season, but, from the accounts of several growers, it does not seem to produce much gold in the regular order of business.

Fancy and Dark Pink Sorts.

Among the fancy varieties of past years, Prosperity was the greatest success, and in its time brought the highest price of any, but now one would have to hunt for some time to get 100 flowers of Prosperity, for few growers handle it. Toreador is a later variety of similar type to the last named, and though variable in color it is an attractive flower, on an unusually stiff stem.

In dark pink and cerise there have been many novelties of late years, among them being Aristocrat, Afterglow, Rose-pink Enchantress and Dorothy Gordon, each of which has had or still has its champions, and each of which is beautiful in its own way. The first three, however, have all developed some disadvantages, and regarding the latter variety most of us will know more in a year from now.

Mrs. Ward and Alma Ward are both beautiful varieties. They have commanded good prices during the last two or three seasons, and, being on the market now, may be tested by the trade in general.

Room for a Good Yellow.

There still is room for a good yellow variety. Strive as they may, yet the hybridizers do not seem to attain their ideal in this line, for yellow carnations, generally speaking, are either lacking in constitution or else they are not free in blooming or are under-sized, with the result that no yellow variety is now grown to even the extent that Eldorado was a few years ago.

And now, to sum up briefly, it may be said that in the opinion of an ordinary observer, and one that by no means claims to know it all, there is much that is encouraging in the progress that has been made in carnation varieties and culture during the last few years. Wonderful things have been done by Dorner, Fisher, Ward, Weber and other men of prominence in this department of our profession, and I fully believe that there will be quite as great achievements to chronicle in the next ten years as have been witnessed in the last decade, for with increased knowledge and experience more systematic work will be possible in the future than has been accomplished in the past.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Herbaceous Calceolarias.

Herbaceous calceolarias should now be in their flowering pots and will be starting to push their flower spikes in some instances. We like to pinch these prematurely early ones. It causes the plants to break freely and make much nicer flower heads. Short of actual freezing, the plants can hardly be grown too cool; 40 degrees at night is far better than 50 degrees, and in the lower temperature the green aphis is far less troublesome. While a little winter sun will not harm the plants, we prefer to grow them with a light shade even at this season. On clear mornings we give a light spraying over. Those of the rugosa section are useful at Memorial day. These should now have their last pinching and can go in their flowering pots. A good plan is to set them out in a bench containing four to five inches of soil, in a violet temperature. Grown thus, they thrive amazingly and give a grand crop of fine golden heads of flowers, which are always welcome at Memorial day.

Marguerites.

Quite a number of growers have considerable trouble with the leaf-miner each year, which disfigures the foliage on marguerites. Spraying with Nicofume juice is the best of the remedies we have tried. If persisted in, the worms all appear to be killed, even though they are within the inner tissue of the leaves. Plants for Easter should be in their flowering pots before this time. They are now, with us, growing rapidly and take abundant water supplies. We do not plan to flower all our plants for Easter, but select some of the largest and most forward, giving these slightly elevated positions, clear of the surrounding plants, in order to make them shapely and at the same time get better light. The demand for marguerites is even better in April, May and June than at Easter, especially for cut flowers, and all the later plants should be reserved for these months. Plants in boxes or shallow benches will give a grand crop of long-stemmed flowers in May and June. The present is a suitable time to take some cuttings from both the white and yellow varieties to carry over summer and flower for next Christmas.

Smilax.

When a crop of smilax has been cut off clean, give the bed a rest for a week or two, keeping it on the dry side. Give a mulch of cow manure before starting it up again. Be sure to get strings in place before the new crop gets entangled. Smilax will grow in a comparatively low temperature, but 55 to 60 degrees at night is what we like to give it. If you have forgotten to sow a batch of seeds, it is not yet too late to do so. The seeds germinate quickly and should be potted off into 2-inch pots, as soon as large enough to handle.

Gladioli.

From the middle to the end of February is a good time to plant a batch of the large-bulbed gladioli for Memorial day. There are probably patches of unoccupied bench space which may be utilized for them. America, May, Augusta, Snow White, Benchleyensis and, in fact, almost any other variety of moderate cost may be planted. As a rule, the high colors sell best at Memorial day.

A batch of Colvillei The Bride in a carnation house is just commencing to show its flower spikes. A few flats of this variety, and also of Blushing Bride and some of the nanus section, will be placed in heat—50 degrees at night—once a week for the next three months. Do not try any hard forcing tactics, or you will only ruin your bulbs.

Dutch Bulbous Stock.

Answering several inquiries, we would say, do not house your hyacinths, tulips and narcissi wanted for Easter before March 1. Much then depends on the weather, but if started at 60 degrees at night there will be no trouble about flowering any of the bulbs at the time they are wanted. A lower temperature as the flowers commence to expand is desirable, and of course any of the bulbs named can be held for a few days when expanded in a cool cellar, or even a north lean-to greenhouse. To have your plants stocky you can bring them along in coldframes, if desired, and flower them in season. Of course, a little bottom heat to take the chill away from the frame, and a covering at nights, are necessary with frames. It is also advisable to bottle up some sun heat every clear day.

LILIES FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

I have a lot of Lilium giganteum in the cellar in 6-inch pots. The growths are from one to two inches above the soil and they have made roots two or three times around at the bottom of the pots. I wish to have them in bloom for Memorial day, May 30. Would you kindly let me know when I shall treat them to have them in flower for that date? E. H. O.

Keep the lilies in a cold house, about 40 degrees at night. Keep them somewhat on the dry side until the pots are well filled with roots. They are just a little early for Memorial day and must be held quite cool. You want to be able to see the flower buds distinctly a full month before they are to be in bloom. You will be able to judge early in April whether the plants are sufficiently early or not. Give them more heat if they are at all backward, but growth is much more rapid in May than in March and you can allow ten days less from bud to open flower than when growing for Easter trade. C. W.

THICKNESS OF CONCRETE WALL.

How thick should a concrete wall be built for the north side of a greenhouse which measures seven feet to the eaves, and is it practicable to fill the center of the wall with rock? How much lower is it possible to make the west end of a house, seventy-five feet long, than the east end, and still have a first-class job when completed? W. H. H.

To make such a wall substantial, it will be necessary to make it at least nine inches thick. By using rock in the center and filling the vacancies with cement to bind it, the wall will be made even stronger.

It is not good policy to have the west end of a house much lower than the east end, for many reasons. Houses built on this principle, if the difference is great and if the houses are wide, require more supports and trussing to keep them stable. They are also more liable to be affected with drip. RIBES.

FEEBLE GROWTH OF PERLES.

We are sending you part of a rose stem and leaves, and should be glad if you would kindly say what the trouble is, and what is the best way to eradicate it. It started among the Perles, and during a spell of dull weather it spread rapidly, causing the leaves to drop and in many cases killing the plant completely. The Brides, which are next to the Perles, show no trace of it. Until recently the Perles, which were benched late, had made rather a soft growth, but appeared strong and healthy. C. K. N.

The branch and leaves reached me in extremely poor condition, so much shriveled that I could learn but little by an examination, and as the letter contains no data as to the treatment given, with reference to feeding, temperature, ventilation, etc., it is hard even to make a guess at the trouble.

Recently another case was submitted to me which was described as having behaved in the same manner, and I found that the stock acted splendidly till near the holiday season. Then, because the crop was a little late, the temperature was raised, less ventilation was given and more water was used. The result was the same as described in C. K. N.'s inquiry. In this case I advised reducing the temperature to 50 degrees at night and 52 degrees in the daytime, withholding water and giving the surface a light mulch. The stock has now begun to break and made nice, healthy wood. As soon as the eyes break, the temperature can be raised to normal and watering resumed.

During the period of partial rest the ventilators must be open on all favorable occasions and the syringe must be used at least once a day, and oftener during bright weather. RIBES.

SOLID BEDS OR RAISED BENCHES.

We are proposing to enlarge our glass area next year for rose growing and we are in considerable doubt as to the best bench construction. At present we are growing our roses in solid benches, with concrete sides and plenty of good drainage. We should like to know if there is much advantage in raised benches, made of wood, over solid benches. In short, we should like to get good, expert advice as to the best and most up-to-date bench construction for roses.

T. A. I. & S.

There is still a difference of opinion among growers as to which is the best style of bench. Some use the solid beds, with excellent results, while others use raised benches, with equally good results. The general tendency, however, is to eliminate the wooden bench, mostly using concrete as a substitute, since it is more durable and less liable to harbor insects and fungi.

That some varieties of roses do better on raised benches there is little doubt. Varieties which have a tendency to go to rest early in the winter are easier to handle on the raised bench than on the solid, as the roots are confined within a limited area and cannot travel to uncongenial soils and temperatures.

During a recent trip through part of New Jersey I saw some raised benches made of cement, which seem to meet the requirements of a perfect bench. The legs and cross supports were of one piece of concrete, reinforced with strong wire running lengthwise. The bottoms were also of cement, with wires running through it the whole length of the bench and with half an inch of space for drainage between the slabs, which were apparently about two inches thick by six inches in width. The sides were also of cement, with reinforcing wires, and were one and one-half inches thick. These benches were erected by using molds, which could easily be removed when the concrete had set. I was surprised at the lightness of the material, but, having seen the benches since they were planted and subjected to the winter's work, I am convinced that they come near being the ideal bench. RIBES.

GRAFTED OR OWN-ROOT.

What are the advantages in having Bride, Maid, Richmond and Killarney roses grafted instead of on their own roots? C. K. N.

Grafting these varieties is practiced with the purpose of giving better root action. Some varieties are naturally weak on their own roots. Others, which have strong roots of their own, do not possess a sufficiency of fine, fibrous feeding roots to enable them to take up the supply of food necessary to the plant under greenhouse conditions.

Some varieties, such as My Maryland, do better in some soils on their own roots than when grafted. RIBES.

WILD ROSES FOR BUDDING

I should like to know what is the difference, if any, between ordinary wild roses and Manetti stock, and why the wild ones would not be as satisfactory for budding purposes as Manetti. I do not know much about Manetti, as we generally grow own-root roses, but there are millions of wild roses in close proximity to our place and one can hardly kill them with an ax; so I propose to experiment with some this summer. The worst feature I see, is the thorns, which vary in numbers from a few to thick clusters, but could easily be rubbed off with a heavy leather glove. H. C. S.

That many of our wild roses can be and are used as stocks for budding and grafting is certain, but with what amount of success I am unable to say. The wild rose of Britain, Rosa canina, is used almost exclusively for outside work there, especially for standard and half standard grades. The reason why Manetti is preferred is because it possesses so fine a mass of fibrous roots, which gather and supply more food to the plant than do the less fibrous roots possessed by most varieties. Some varieties of wild stock have also the undesirable habit of taking a long rest in winter, making them unfit for using for greenhouse purposes.

Experimenting with different stocks which are native to your section, and comparing results with those on Manetti, will certainly give you desired information. Ribes.

WHITE FLY ON PRIMULAS.

I am sending you a primula leaf with white fly and eggs. They seem to breed by the thousands. Smoking with tobacco stems seems to have no effect on them. They just ruin the plants. What is the simplest and best method of fighting them? L. A. D.

Spraying with soap and water helps to keep white fly in check. Fumigation with tobacco stems has no effect on them whatever; in fact, they seem to revel in a smoky atmosphere. One form of fumigation only will clean them out and that is hydrocyanic acid gas. This must be very carefully used, as it is a deadly gas, but hundreds of successful florists now rely on it exclusively. Always use it in the evening, and the lower the temperature the better. There is little liability of injuring the plants at this season of the year; in hot weather the foliage is more liable to be hurt.

For a house 20x100 we use two jars, each containing two ounces of sulphuric acid and six ounces of water, dropping one ounce of cyanide of potassium in each. We find two doses, given two or three nights apart, will exterminate the fly and an all-night exposure will not hurt the most tender plants in the least. We have found from repeated trials that the above quantities suffice if a calm evening is chosen for the work. C. W.

HYACINTHS AND NARCISSI.

How soon ought we to bring our hyacinth and narcissus bulbs to the heat to produce blooms for Easter? The average night temperature is about 50 degrees. W. C. F. C.

Easter Sunday comes March 27. House your hyacinths March 1, and your narcissi, if of the Trumpet family, four or five days later—that is, provided they are well started. It is well to start them in good season, as it is easy to hold them a few days in a cold house or shed, when open. W. C.

PLANTS TURN YELLOW.

Will you kindly inform me what is the trouble in my greenhouse. I am a young florist, located in Greenville, Ill., and just started the business for myself eight months ago. I have only one greenhouse, 15x50, heated by a small steam boiler, and one 2½-inch pipe runs up in the middle from the boiler to the end of the house and comes back by three 2-inch returns under each side bench. The house runs from north to south. I have cut a nice lot of carnations since last September, but my geraniums, asparagus, ferns, etc., do not grow well. I have my propagation bench covered with glass, so the cuttings do fine, but as soon as I put them on the bench they start to turn yellow, as you see by the sample leaves enclosed. I have a wood wall between the boiler room and the greenhouse, the cracks being covered with paper. I give as much ventilation as possible. Do you think that I ought to put something on the pipes while they are hot? Please tell me what to do. I also would like to have your advice about watering my stock. I use cistern water, but I like to use the well water, but it is so hard that it kills my young plants. Can I put something in that water so it can be sweet? E. C.

If your carnations have bloomed well since last September, the house evidently suits them. It is possible that you are allowing gas to escape from your boiler room to the greenhouse. This would account for the Asparagus Sprengeri dying, as your sample shoots have done. Close up tightly every possible crevice where this can come in. If the trouble still continues, try leaving a little chink of air on the top ventilators all night. Have you painted your pipes with any of the patent metal paints on the market? These sometimes do great damage, especially if some turpentine has been mixed in them. A safe paint is lamp black and linseed oil, if you want to cover any heating pipes as a rust preventive.

If your well water is so very hard, it will be better to use the soft rain water for the plants. Write to the Agricultural College of your state, send a sample of your well water and ask them their opinion of it. They will analyze it and advise you if unsuitable, and may be able to suggest a way to improve it.

For so small a house I think hot water would be better for you than steam. The latter heat is strong and drying and temperature fluctuations must be more violent with it. The heating expert of the Review would be glad to tell you how to change from steam to hot water. Do not get discouraged. Write again for information. It is difficult without knowing exact conditions to advise you, but the Review will help you in every possible, practical way. W. N. C.

PALMS WITH SHALLOW ROOTS.

Kindly tell me if there is any way of preventing palms from pushing up out of the pots. All of ours are doing this more or less. They are not potbound. They stand above the soil on their roots and get wabbly. We have to push stakes down in the pots to hold them upright. This spoils the looks of them and also their sale. What can I do to them? A. H. W.

It is natural for the majority of palms to have the base of the plant above the surface of the ground, though the roots are usually stiff enough to support them without need of staking. The plants in question, however, may have been potted unnecessarily high, with the result that they are unsteady in the soil. When repotting, keep the base of the plants just below the surface of the soil and then there is not likely to be a recurrence of this trouble.

When growing naturally, many of the palms are found with the base raised up from one to three feet above the soil, according to the age and size of the plants, but they are enabled to stand strong winds by means of the foundation of stout roots that supports them. W. H. T.

FLATS.

Noticing the REVIEW's advice to growers to get their flats ready for spring trade, I will describe my method of making flats. For the ends I use pieces of inch lumber, twelve inches long and three inches wide. The sides and bottoms are of common plaster lath, cut in two, making the length of the flat two feet. This form of flat, 12x24 inches and three inches deep, makes a nice size for handling and gives two tiers for 4-foot benches.

In transplanting into these flats, we place in each flat fourteen rows of eight plants each, or 112 plants in all, which we sell as 100 plants. We have used this kind of flats for over fifty years and find that they give the best of satisfaction.

H. C. GREEN.

FORCED VALLEY PIPS.

I have forced some valley in boxes four feet long, eleven inches wide and twelve inches deep, the valley being planted in about five inches of sand in the bottom part of the box. I am cutting them now. Can I use these pips next season? If so, please state what treatment they should have. S. S.

After forcing, lily of the valley pips are of no value whatever and it would not pay you to attempt to use them again. C.

WHITE FLY.

I enclose herewith a sample leaf with egg deposits. When hatched, this is a small white fly. Can you tell me what it is and how to exterminate it?

C. L.

The egg deposits are those of the white fly. The only sure way to exterminate it is fumigation with hydrocyanic acid gas. We have found that for a house 20x100 and twelve and one-half feet to the ridge, two jars, each containing two ounces of sulphuric acid and six ounces of water, into which one ounce of cyanide of potassium is dropped, will kill most of the fly. A second application two or three days later will finish the job. Select cool evenings for the operations. Drop in the cyanide and beat a hasty exit. Lock the door and allow no one to enter until next day. Leave the house closed tight. It will be perfectly safe for anyone to enter the next morning. A host of formulas have been given for killing this fly, some much stronger than others. You will find the above proportions will clean it out. Remember the deadly nature of the gas and run no risks with it. C. W.

TO EXTERMINATE MILLEPEDS.

I certainly do not agree with the correspondent who said that millepeds are not injurious to plants, as I have had some costly experience with them. I have known the pests to clean out, or almost clean out, a whole box of seedlings in one night. They have also eaten some of my plants, which they prey upon about the same way as wood lice and some other bugs do.

The remedy is a simple one and applies to both the millepeds and the wood lice. Get five or ten cents' worth of brown sugar and some Paris green. I always buy the latter by the pound, so as to have it on hand. Mix the quantity required; there is no need of being exact as to the proportions, so long as you put in enough Paris green to color the sugar. Drop a pinch of the mixture here and there between the plants and seed boxes, and in a short time you will find Mr. Milleped lying dead on his back. This recipe, I think, is simpler and cheaper than most others, and is not dangerous; but you must keep the mixture covered, lest your favorite cat have access to it, and you must place it beyond the reach of children. F. J. FILLMORE.

ASPARAGUS PLUMOSUS NANUS.

What is the proper distance to plant Asparagus plumosus in solid beds? Will 2½-inch stock, bought now, plunged in a hotbed in 3-inch pots and planted in June, produce good results by fall? I would build over the plants and keep a night temperature of 60 degrees. I have had good success with them when planted 8x9 inches in ten inches of soil, placed on three inches of cinders. R. W. G. S.

Planted 8x10 or 8x12, plumosus does well. You will have to wait about a full year after planting before strings are ready to cut. This means two years from seed sowing to the first cutting. An average temperature of 65 degrees is better than 60 degrees. If you will make your bed eighteen to twenty-four inches deep, with good sod and cow manure, it should produce profitably for seven to nine years. In ten inches of soil its lease of life will be much shorter. Ample drainage by means of broken bricks, stone or coarse cinders must always be provided. Leaves one year old and only partially decayed may be added to the soil; the asparagus seems to like them. A too close compost may cause yellowing of the foliage. C. W.

GARDENIAS.

The demand for gardenias in winter seems to grow steadily each year. While there are occasional periods of glut even at this season of the year, prices as a rule hold up well, and those who are able to make gardenias bloom freely during the coldest months will find them a paying crop. We still have complaints of loss of buds and yellowing foliage, due to too wet or dry root conditions, cold drafts or extremes of temperatures. Those who would succeed with gardenias in winter must watch them carefully and keep as even a temperature as possible, particularly at night. The idea that they are tropical plants and can be forced ad libitum is responsible for many failures. They are not hard plants to grow after we have mastered their requirements. A night temperature of 65 to 70 degrees just now is right for those which are blooming. A fairly moist atmosphere is indispensable, as is a porous soil. Water should pass quickly through the benches when applied. If it does not, the conditions are wrong and yellow foliage and dropping buds are certainties.

Now that fire heat is at its maximum and the propagating benches are constantly warm, it is a good plan to put in a batch of cuttings. They should have a bottom heat of 75 to 85 degrees, with a top heat 10 degrees lower. It is entirely needless to put each cutting in a pot and plunge them in fermenting material. An ordinary sand bench with the necessary heat will answer just as well. The cuttings can hardly be overwatered. Let them get once dry and they are gone. If enclosed in a case, the roots may appear a little earlier, but cuttings will root easily in any house where the necessary heat and moisture can be afforded. As soon as they are rooted, place them in small pots and stand them in a close, warm house until established, after which they can be gradually inured to cooler conditions.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1910: President, F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; vice-president, F. W. Vick, Rochester, N. Y.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg, Pa.

Annual convention, Rochester, N. Y., August 16 to 19, 1910.

THE REVIEW brings results.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending the REVIEW $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

TRIALS OF A COUNTRY FLORIST.

I thought that possibly the REVIEW'S readers would like to hear about a country florist's first experience with Carnation day. Having resolved to make a special effort for the occasion, I advertised in the two local papers, had cards printed for the windows, explaining the meaning of the day's celebration, then marked my choicest carnations down to 5 cents each and sold — sixty. If this was not a complete failure, it certainly was not a howling success.

I could write a book on my experiences in educating a country town to buy flowers. While others have tried and failed, I have hung to it for six years, but feel that I am only at the bottom of the ladder now. I often have calls for wreaths at $2, which I think most city florists would laugh at, and I am sure they would laugh now if I should tell them what I made the wreaths of.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The Horticultural Society of New York, under whose auspices the American Rose Society will exhibit in New York city, has taken upon its part the duty of enlisting the interest of as many members of that society as possible to develop the best attendance and support for the occasion.

The New York Florists' Club has appointed a special committee to extend courtesies to all members of the Rose Society. The intent is to display in the great hall of the American Museum on Seventy-seventh street, for popular exhibit without cost to the public, a show of the first magnitude. The hall is at present being repainted and decorated. The measurement is 75 x150 feet. The effort is to obtain, among other things, a fine exhibit of potted plants. Many a dweller in the metropolis can grow a plant in a pot and would enjoy doing so, and an exhibit of that kind is likely to foster a demand for that class of roses.

The full list is being revised by the chairman of the schedule committee, ex-President Robert Simpson, and as soon as completed will be put in permanent form in conjunction with the premium list and schedule of the Horticultural Society of New York.

Since our last report the following special prizes have been offered: John I. Raynor, New York city, $25; Henshaw & Fenrich, New York city, $25; Henry Froment, New York city, $25; William S. Allen, New York city, $25; Traendly & Schenck, New York city, $25; Alex. J. Guttman, New York city, $25; King Construction Co., North Tonawanda, N. Y., $25; J. A. Budlong & Son. Co., Auburn, R. I., $25; John N. May, Summit, N. J., $25; Frank R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y., $25; Wm. G. Badgley, Chatham, N. J., $15; Walter F. Sheridan, New York city, $15; A. H. Langjahr, New York city, $10; L. B. Coddington, Murray Hill, N. J., $10; ex-President Robert Simpson, Clifton, N. J., $30; Society of American Florists, medals.

James Wood, president of the Horticultural Society of New York, will deliver an address upon "Ideals of Horticulture"; Geo. V. Nash, "The Rose and Its History," an illustrated lecture with colored lantern slides, and Adolph Farenwald, of Roslyn, Pa., on "Roses, the Brightest of Flowers." A valuable paper is being prepared by W. S. Sibson, upon the "Northern Pacific Coast Roses." Within a few days the Horticultural Society of New York will issue jointly with the American Rose Society, the full prize list and rules.

Joseph A. Manda has been appointed superintendent of exhibits.

The Great Central Market.

The first week of Lent, which this year included St. Valentine's day, saw large quantities of stock moved in this market. Lent cuts less and less figure as the years go by, and Lincoln's birthday, February 12, and Valentine's day, February 14, are constantly increasing in importance from a florist's point of view. The patriotic societies and the business men's associations find the Lincoln anniversary a favorable date for their dinners, requiring flowers, and many private social affairs add to the demand for stock. Flowers are rapidly gaining in favor for Valentine's remembrances, and no wonder, when one compares the excellent dollar boxes, offered by many stores, with the frilled paper affairs that the department stores and others still sell in quantity at high prices. Flowers are the valentine par excellence; it only requires calling the people's attention to make the business grow. But the Valentine's day demand was cut down by cold weather and with the wholesalers ended Sunday, February 13. Some of the shippers of carnations and violets sent in great quantities of stock February 14 and met with disappointment, the market being extremely weak for these flowers that day.

There were steadily increasing supplies in all lines all last week, but roses maintained their values fairly well until February 14, the demand increasing as much as the supply. Beauties and Richmond were in especial request. The former, which had been weakening in price because of light demand, firmed up again for a time at the end of the week. Supply remained about stationary, some increase in other crops being balanced by the one large cut of the last fortnight passing its heaviest. Richmond, which had been selling below other roses of equal quality, came into its own again, because everyone seemed to want red for Lincoln dinners and for valentines. Killarney has been short of the requirements for weeks, but now is equal to the call. Since the passing of the special demand the rose situation has become quite a little easier.

Carnations have been and are in large supply. Quality varies, the highest grade being in lightest supply, with an overabundance of the stock that does not pass critical inspection. Splits are so plentiful it is next to impossible to move them. There was a big call for red last week and the price, of course, was pushed up. Bright pink also shared in the extra demand, but for light pink and white the call did not even hold prices steady except, perhaps, where the quality was above the ordinary. While a few carnations sold for 4 cents, wholesalers were glad to take $1.50 per hundred for others and were never able to clean up on the lower grade. The weather the last few days has favored the carnation and no further shortage is to be expected this season.

The violet is the popular specialty for Valentine's day. The supply was enormous, but so was the demand and a good business was done, both at wholesale and retail. Fair prices were realized for the doubles up to February 13, but the next day the market went to pieces. Singles were in even heavier supply than doubles and there simply was no sale for them at any price February 14. Fancy sweet peas sold well, as did jonquils, daffodils and the colored tulips, up to the close of business February 13 (two houses kept open and busy all day Sunday), but after that there was too much of everything except roses, and enough of these.

Cattleyas seem equal to the call, but the price for the best continues good. There are plenty of Easter lilies and callas are more abundant than heretofore. Fine valley is in large supply, shipments coming here from other markets that are overstocked.

The greens department is quiet. There is not much call for asparagus strings. Plumosus bunches are scarce. Of other items there is a good supply.

Some of the orders intended for shipment January 12 were not received until next day, because the senders had overlooked the fact that there was but one delivery of mail. Washington's birthday, February 22, also is a holiday, with only one delivery. To be on the safe side, wire.

Various Notes.

The retailers made more effort than ever before for Valentine's day. Several spent considerable sums in advertising in the daily papers and all made more or less elaborate special window and store decorations, with the result that they nearly all report increased business. The red heart-shaped box was the staple article for violets, but the leading stores showed many elaborate boxes and did a good business with them. The table decorating, with the stores that do the bulk of this work, was heavy February 12 and 14.

Roy Wilcox and his bride, from Council Bluffs, spent several days in Chicago last week, on their way home from the east. The wedding occurred February 1.

Fred Strail, formerly in the retail business on Jackson boulevard and later with A. Lange, is now with the Bohannon Floral Co. Report has it that the Bohannon business has increased largely since removal to the University Club building.

Vaughan & Sperry say that their sales in the first eleven days of February were almost the exact sum of the sales for the whole month last year, which was before they moved to their present location.

W. H. Hilton, who has been ill for several months, a part of the time seriously so, went to Alabama February 12 for a period of recuperation.

W. E. Lynch, of E. H. Hunt's, recently visited business connections at Champaign and Springfield.

John Mangel had a fully set table with a Valentine's day decoration as a part of his window display last week.

Ed Heim, of Heim Bros., Blue Island, was in town the other day and said it will be some little time yet before roses get into full crop again; the plants have made extremely slow growth during the several weeks of severe cold weather. He says he looks for a big crop about March 15, carrying over Easter, and thinks there is a probability of a glut of roses in April, possibly a little before if the weather is bright and warm. Heim Bros. grow only roses and carnations and have cut good stock this season.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. does not intend to be caught short if a coal strike cuts off the fuel supply in April. Not only are all the storage sheds being filled to the roof, but huge piles of coal are being stacked up in the open air.

E. C. Amling says that he thinks there were at least four times, and possibly six times as many single violets this year as for any previous Valentine's day.

Frank Schramm took in the automobile show last week, sold his old machine and bought a fine new National touring car. He is cutting some specially good White Lawson carnations just now.

Bassett & Washburn say Lent has made absolutely no difference to them; business has been even better since Ash Wednesday than it was before.

A. L. Randall says his house never handled so many violets in three days as it did February 11 to 14. Frank Johnson is in Michigan this week.

H. C. Blewitt, Des Plaines, is planning to put up another large house this season. He says his sweet peas never looked so fine as now. This year he has them in solid beds, twelve inches of soil on a foot of cinders confined by plank sides, which brings the vines well up to the glass. He expects a big crop for Easter.

Lubliner & Trinz have been short handed and exceptionally busy the last few days.

Wietor Bros. plan to increase their planting of Mrs. Jardine rose next season and, of course, will find room for a big lot of White Killarney.

Kyle & Foerster report many inquiries from buyers who are only waiting for spring prices to take large quantities of stock from this market.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. received 100,000 Massachusetts ferns February 14.

Henry Van Gelder says the increase in the Percy Jones business requires more help.

At Peter Reinberg's it is stated that it is only a matter of a few days before the roses will be in full crop.

C. W. McKellar says he thinks salesmanship will count from now till Easter.

Miss Keegan, who has charge of the books for Zech & Mann, has been ill for a week and John Zech has been more than ever busy.

E. E. Pieser says the severe cold of February 12 and 13 was all that kept Valentine's day sales from going far ahead of the best previous record.

The E. F. Winterson Co. is fitting up a new office for the cut flower department in a location that will increase the store space. The seed department has disposed of most of the carload of cannas recently received.

Ned Washburn and wife will start for California, to join O. P. Bassett, February 25.

Miss Sadie Palinsky, who has charge of the office end of her father's business, was 21 years of age February 15 and there was a gathering of fifty couples, several florists among them, at the new residence W. L. Palinsky built last year at 2867 Palmer avenue, to help her celebrate the event.

Chicago and vicinity was well represented at the meeting of the State Florists' Association at Champaign this week. More than twenty went down in one party.

Emil Buettner leaves next week for a vacation in southern California.

George Asmus is walking with a cane. He says it is rheumatism, but his friends tell him it is the gout.

W. L. Palinsky and Anton Then propose the organization of an association of the plant growers for the Chicago market, to hold monthly meetings for the exchange of experiences—credit as well as cultural. All the plantsmen thus far seen welcome the suggestion, they say.

During the Chicago flower show, the Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., gave an excursion to their place, but found it was inconvenient for a great many growers to attend; therefore they will give another excursion, Tuesday, February 22, leaving the La Salle street station, Chicago, by Rock Island train, at 11:45 a. m. and arriving at their greenhouses at 1:00 p. m., where lunch will be served. A cordial invitation is extended to all interested growers to join the crowd, which is sure to be a merry one.

BOSTON.

The Market.

The advent of Lent, lessened demand and erratic weather have caused a decided slump in trade, and flowers have accumulated more than at any time during the present winter. Roses hold firmer in price than other flowers, most of the houses being off crop at present. American Beauties, especially long-stemmed ones, are scarce, but the call for them has been rather light. Killarney and White Killarney are each selling remarkably well, as also is Richmond. Some nice My Maryland is arriving, but with some growers this is not proving a satisfactory winter bloomer. Bride and Bridesmaid are the hardest varieties to move and few of these will be seen another season.

Carnations are in oversupply and prices are on the down grade, although flowers are of fine quality. Violets are abundant, 50 cents per hundred being now the top price on singles. Sweet peas are becoming plentiful. They have a wide range of prices, from 25 cents for short-stemmed flowers to $1.50 per hundred for those with 18-inch stems. A dozen different varieties are now coming in.

Bulbous stock is in heavy supply and prices are lower. Some good Emperor and Empress are now coming in, with an abundance of Golden Spur, Henry Irving, ornatus and princeps. Tulips are arriving with better stems, La Reine still selling the best, followed by Yellow Prince. A large quantity of the lilies seen are of the Formosa type, the foliage being excellent, although the average buds per stem are rather less than the other longiflorums. There is now an abundant supply of these. Lily of the valley is in ample supply and there are plenty of miscellaneous flowers, such as Dimorphotheca aurantiaca, calendulas, English primroses, ixias, wallflowers, myosotis, pansies, etc.

In choicer flowers Cattleya Trianæ is in good supply at $6 per dozen. Lælia anceps makes $3 and $4, the latter for white varieties. Cypripediums bring $8 to $10 per hundred. There are also plenty of dendrobiums. Gardenias are more abundant.

Club Meeting.

Carnation night, February 15, attracted, as usual, a big gathering, there being close to 200 present. President Duncan was in the chair and there wer many expressions of regret at his earl removal from Boston.

S. J. Goddard's practical paper, els where reproduced in the Review, gav rise to an animated discussion. Mr. God dard brought along with him samples of both cuttings and plants, to better illustrate his remarks.

There was a goodly array of flowers on the tables. Alma Ward, Mrs. C. W. Ward and two fine pink seedlings from the Cottage Gardens Co. were superbly shown. R. T. Brown, the manager at Queens, accompanied the exhibit. George E. Buxton had Bon Ami and his other seedlings in fine shape. Pink Delight, from S. J. Goddard, attracted a great deal of attention. It is in tremendous demand for next season. A. Leuthy & Co. exhibited some new azaleas. Carnations Winona, Sarah Nicholson, Shasta, May Day and Hattie Starrett, from M. A. Patten, showed up fine, the two latter receiving reports of merit. May Day, exhibited by Peter Fisher, received a report of superior merit. William Penn and seedling No. 1019, by A. Roper, were awarded reports of merit. Granite State, from Buxton, received honorable mention; Alma Ward, report of superior merit; Mrs. C. W. Ward, report of merit; Beacon, from the Cottage Gardens Co., vote of thanks; Enchantress, by Littlefield & Wyman, cultural report of merit; Pink Delight, by S. J. Goddard, report of merit; large vase of mixed carnations, also by S. J. Goddard, report of cultural merit; yellow marguerites, by S. J. Goddard, and dark Killarney roses, by Eber Holmes, reports of merit.

Fifteen new members were added to the list. Resolutions were made, approving the parcels post and opposing the free seed distribution. A resolution was also adopted approving the two-row tree plan for Commonwealth avenue. Mrs. E. M. Gill was proposed for honorary membership. The decision of the carnation and rose societies to meet in Boston in 1911 in conjunction with the national show was commented upon favorably. Peter M. Miller, for the banquet committee, reported all bills paid and a balance on hand. The committee and contributors of flowers and plants were tendered votes of thanks. E. H. Wilson, the noted plant collector and lecturer at the January meeting, was unanimously elected to honorary membership in the club.

Various Notes.

William H. Elliott is cutting a fine lot of the new rose, Mrs. Aaron Ward, which is in demand at the bon ton stores. W. R. Smith, while of a pleasing color, is not cared for by the retailers. He has an extra good lot of the old Safrano and Bon Silene. Rhea Reid grows well with him and gives excellent returns on the ledger, better than Richmond. A few Beauties are being grown, but Killarney and White Killarney are the greatest producers and in constant demand.

Ernest Borowski, of Roslindale, is one of the most progressive of the newer growers in and around Boston. He has had splendid lots of cyclamens and Lorraine begonias and has a splendid batch of Hiawatha, Lady Gay and Dorothy Perkins ramblers coming on for Easter. These are all pot grown through the summer.

Francis L. Deery, a popular salesman at Julius A. Zinn's, on Park street, surprised his many friends by joining the benedicts February 7, the happy bride being Miss Katherine Dugan, of Dorchester.

Henry W. Vose, of Hyde Park, is first in the market with fine Emperor narcissi. The same grower has extra good Golden Spur and Henry Irving, as well as hyacinths and freesias.

S. J. Goddard reports a tremendous demand for rooted cuttings of carnations. In two days he had to refuse orders for 16,000, having already booked orders for all he could supply this season. Growers nearly all agree that cuttings are unusually scarce this season.

Owing to the several halls of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society being rented for three days immediately following the dates set for the midwinter flower show, it has been decided to change the dates to February 25, 26 and 27, instead of February 26, 27 and 28. There will be some unique exhibits at this show, which promises to be the best of its kind ever held in Boston. Carnations will make an unusually large display. An orchestra will provide music each afternoon and evening and admission charges will be the same as at the successful spring show of 1909.

Peirce Bros. think so highly of Carnation Pink Delight that they are propagating it heavily and hope to bench 15,000 of it next season.

Backer & Co., of Billerica, are sending in fine bunches of their new scarlet seedling carnation, Red Prince, to Park Street Market. It has already won a host of friends. A white seedling, beautifully perfumed, from the same firm, is also showing well, as well as an excellent yellow self-seedling. These are all handled at the Park Street Market by William F. Aylward.

Visitors last week included F. Mitchell, Waterville, Me.; H. S. De Forest and M. B. Faxon, New York; Andrew Merkle, Andrew McLellan and Andrew Durward, Newport, R. I.; William Graham, Greenwich, Conn.

The two rose houses being erected for the Montgomery Co. at Hadley, Mass., are each 41x500. They are of King construction and contain many new and up-to-date features. They will be ready for glazing early in March.

P. L. Carbone had an attractive window of camellias last week. These one-time favorites are now enjoying a return of popularity.

A number of special prizes have been received for the big May orchid show. The final schedule, containing the fall premium list, will be quite an elaborate one. A number of attractive views on private estates, the Arnold Arboretum and the park system will be included. Word has just been received that a group from a prominent Ghent (Belgium) firm will be sent.

CALLAS FROM SEED.

About three years ago I had a calla plant, from the seeds of which I grew two plants. The flowers on these are small. I should like to know if the plants eventually will put forth as large blossoms as their parent. Do callas seed frequently? W. S. B.

Callas seed quite freely. Unless your seeds were taken from one of the small-flowered varieties, like Little Gem, they will, as the tubers increase in size, give you larger flowers. There is considerable variation in the size of flowers produced on callas from seed, but as a general rule the flowers equal in size those produced on the seed-bearing plants. C. W.

Lenten Flowers

We all know that Lent is no longer the serious time it used to be; there is a good demand for flowers during Lent. We offer as specialties:

Easter Lilies, for which we are recognized headquarters in Philadelphia.

Violets. Our growers produce splendid single, also fine Marie Louise, from the Hudson river and Lady Campbell violets.

Tulips. Yellow and white, also some fine pink. (N. B. Short stemmed white tulips for design work.)

Daffodils. Golden Spur is the best; large flowers, good stems and foliage; double Von Sion is coming in more freely.

Freesia. Pure white, long stems.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The first week of Lent has brought several changes in the conditions described a week ago. The heavy crop of carnations, a majority of them of splendid quality, which was then arriving, is at its height. Unusual inducements to the buyers have moved large quantities of these flowers, but there are still so many that it seems impossible to create a sufficient demand for them all, even at low prices. Most of the other flowers on the list are more plentiful than a week ago, while the demand is about the same, taking it all the way through, so that prices have receded, or better value is given, which amounts to the same thing. Beauties, white roses and Asparagus plumosus are the exceptions; these are all scarce and command good prices when obtainable; Acacia pubescens, too, is eagerly sought, the supply being shorter than the demand each day. Easter lilies are the worst feature of the list; a large supply of really fine stock is seemingly impossible to market. Freesia, double daffodils and Narcissus Von Sion are the strong features of a rather weak bulb list, with tulips lagging badly at the other end, saved only by Couronne d'Or, the always popular double orange.

St. Valentine's day brought mixed results, somewhat difficult to describe. The shipping orders, and possibly the local demand, were in excess of last season. The fact that St. Valentine's day then came during the pre-lenten rush and now preceding a lenten election day, made such a vast difference in the total demand that prices were lower and business seemed low by comparison. Violets, though used in large quantities, fell short of last year's prices, except on some fancy singles. Forget-me-nots were conspicuous by their absence, only one wholesale house being able to supply them. This is due to the strong feeling in the retail stores that forget-me-nots are not worth the price that must be obtained for them at St. Valentine's day, if the crop is to be grown at a profit. Sweet peas were freely used instead; red carnations, red roses, pink roses were Cupid's other gifts. The gardenia market has found its level, so to speak, and is in a much more satisfactory condition. The supply of cattleyas is about sufficient to meet the demand at good prices. Valley is dull. Paper Whites are brisk at low figures. Romans are used for design work chiefly. There are some excellent hardy ferns in the market.

The Aphine Test.

The public test of Aphine, the liquid insecticide, took place in the afternoon of Lincoln's birthday at Michell's new store, 518 Market street. A number of plants infected with green fly, mealy bug and scale were offered for treatment. These were all carefully sprayed by Mr. Ebel with a hand syringe, and the parasites on leaf and stem were destroyed without injury to the plants. This test was carefully watched by a number of growers, seedsmen, private gardeners and newspaper men, and all appeared impressed by the merits of Aphine as an insecticide.

There is another feature in the public test of Aphine that is of special interest. Through an error in the laboratory, some Aphine was sent out that was not what it should have been. This defective mixture Mr. Ebel agreed to make good at his own expense. These public tests are intended to show everyone that the makers are ready and anxious to guarantee Aphine, which they honestly believe is the best insecticide made. Mr. Ebel's frank, manly bearing won him warm friends in this city, who wish him success in his war on all insects which attack plant life.

Now—Then.

Henry F. Michell returned from the south a few days ago, to assume command of his large business interests before the opening of the season. When seen at his new store, Mr. Michell spoke of the bright prospects for spring. The shortage in peas and beans he thought was more feared than real; the high price of seeds that are scarce cuts down some orders and diverts others to something else, equalizing supply and demand. Mr. Michell said that his new store was so popular with some of his best customers—professional and business men who disliked the crowds of small buyers who made waiting one's turn necessary at the old store—that retaining both was being seriously considered. This is a surprise, as it was understood that the entire business would be transferred to the new store next fall. Decision will be made later.

Mr. Michell said the new greenhouses and trial grounds at Torresdale were ready. The greenhouse will be used for testing the germinating qualities of all their seeds, the grounds for testing their truthfulness to name and their quality.

Twenty years ago Henry F. Michell opened a seed store where another had failed. He began by disposing of all the old stock and replacing it with new, increasing his business little by little. Today his house is known and respected all over the land.

Various Notes.

Berger Bros. made special arrangements to get some of their fancy stock in early for St. Valentine's day, an effort that was appreciated by the buyers.

Philip Freud, of the Henry F. Michell Co. says that the orders for cold storage giganteum lilies, to be delivered at stated intervals from now until next fall, have already reached 120,000.

Charles M. Keegan has closed his store at Thirteenth and Sansom streets unexpectedly. The street believes that he is doing some decorative work at Palm Beach, Fla.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The cut flower market last week was demoralized. Prices slid down to the lowest of the year to date. After all, Lent seemed to demonstrate its importance and has to be reckoned with. Its first week saw the cutting of values nearly in half, as compared with last week's quotations, and one year ago prices were double, with carnations three or even four times as high as the figures generally asked on Saturday. This condition prevailed on the evening of St. Valentine's day, and while there will be a clearing of the supplies this week, there is no apparent hope, for a time, of any better prices.

American Beauties fell to 35 cents for the selected stock last week and few even touched the high mark when sold in quantity. There is a tremendous supply of the lower grades of roses of all kinds, except Richmond and My Maryland. These maintain their good standing, but Killarneys are arriving in squadrons and in price are on a par with Maids. One wholesaler whose forecasts are usually accurate says that Bridesmaid next year will lead Killarney in price, so universal is the growing of the Irish rose.

Carnations, even the best of them, in thousand and five thousand lots sold Saturday as low as $10 per thousand, while the day-old surplus was disposed of at half that figure, one Brooklyn speculator absorbing 20,000 of them. The weather has been too cold for the street men, so this outlet was practically closed for several days. There was little, even of the novelties, bringing over $2 per hundred. Orchids and gardenias have not changed from the prices of a week ago. Cypripediums are about through and their growing this year has been unprofitable. Valley and lilies are abundant and prices lower. Bulbous stock is much in evidence and there is a slow demand for it, tulips especially. Narcissus sells better and is used by many retailers in their window decorations, with forsythia and other harbingers of an early spring. Freesia is away down, the common varieties going as low as $3 per hundred bunches. Sweet peas also must be long-stemmed and of modern variety to pay their growers. There are plenty of violets, even the hundred specials not exceeding 60 cents. From 50 cents down would seem to be a standard quotation until Easter, now only six weeks away.

nuary 14. Chairman Sheridan reported for the dinner committee and after consultation with representatives of the Horticultural Society of New York and the American Rose Society, it was decided to invite the American Rose Society to the annual banquet March 17 and that any deficit be made good from the club's exchequer. Messrs. Rutherford, Masur and Kuebler were elected members of the club and Maurice I. Jacobs sent in his resignation. The lecture on "Carnations Past and Present," by W. H. Taplin, was interesting and appears in this issue. An interesting discussion followed, in which Mr. Scott, John Birnie and Mr. Taplin participated. A committee to draft resolutions on the death of the father of C. W. Scott was appointed as follows: J. H. Pepper, A. J. Guttman and L. Schmutz, Jr.

The entertainment committee, J. B. Nugent chairman, supplied an excellent program, literary and musical.

The competition for prizes was keen and the exhibit filled the whole center of the big room. The first prize for the best exhibit went to the Cottage Gardens Co. for Alma Ward and Mrs. C. W. Ward; second prize to Joseph Heacock for Dorothy Gordon; third prize to Cottage Gardens Co. for Alma Ward. The other exhibitors were: Nic Zweifel, Milwaukee, Wis., with Bright Spot; Wood Bros., of Fishkill, with Variegated Lawson, Beacon, White Enchantress, Lady Bountiful, Crimson Beauty and Kingston Pet; John F. Marsden, of Far Rockaway, N. Y., with Enchantress and White Perfection; the Fillow Flower Co., of Westport, Conn., with Juanita; A. N. Pierson, with Pink Delight and Sangamo; A. Demeusy, with White Enchantress; Henry Eichholz, with Prince Charming; White Bros., of Gasport, N. Y., with Pink Delight and Winsor; C. Weber and Robert Wilson, with their pink seedling, Brooklyn; S. J. Reuter, with Sangamo; vase of carnations of many varieties from Henshaw & Fenrich, and a valentine bouquet from Young & Nugent. Cultural and preliminary certificates and votes of thanks were liberally dispensed to all. Prince Charming scored 86 points.

New Jersey Floricultural Society.

The annual reception and smoker of the New Jersey Floricultural Society, the mother of the Jersey societies, took place Friday evening, February 11. Notwithstanding the blizzard, fifty enthusiasts celebrated. The new officers are: President, Albert F. Larson; vice-president, D. Kindsgrab; secretary, William Reid; treasurer, Walter Gray.

Among the visitors were: C. H. Totty, M. C. Ebel, Mr. Ragan, Mr. Tricker and the Schultz brothers, of Madison, N. J.; W. J. Stewart, of Boston; Mr. McArdle, A. F. Faulkner, J. Austin Shaw and Mr. Secker, of New York. C. H. Totty, William Duckham and W. J. Stewart were the judges of exhibits. G. W. Strange was in charge of the Lager & Hurrell show of orchids. Local entertainers supplied interesting songs, stories and dancing. The smoker was embellished with sandwiches and assorted liquid refreshments.

The treasurer's report showed a balance of over $300. The society has eighty-four members and holds ten regular meetings yearly. Last year it distributed 157 awards, thirty-seven first-class certificates, forty-three cultural certificates, sixteen preliminary certificates and fourteen votes of thanks to exhibitors.

Cultural certificates and honorable mention were awarded the exhibitors of the evening. There were orchid plants and cut blooms from Lager & Hurrell, including phalænopsis, dendrobiums, cattleyas, lælias, and odontoglossums of the best varieties. Richmond, Bride and Maid from Thomas Edison, Frank Drew gardener; Enchantress and White Perfection from G. M. Colgate, William Reid, gardener; Rob Roy, Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress and plants of cinerarias, Dutch hyacinths and Golden Spur narcissi from Max Snyder, Charles Hathaway gardener, and a new seedling amaryllis (hippeastrum), from C. H. Totty, of Madison, were some of the others. All the exhibits were superb in quality, some of the carnations being four inches in diameter.

The Rev. Dr. Lighttype, a member of the society, and an expert botanist, made the address of welcome. The event of the evening was the presentation of an immense silver loving cup to Malcolm MacRorie, the retiring president, the eloquent George Smith, of East Orange, doing the honors in a speech of rare eloquence. The gift was a surprise to the popular recipient, who made a splendid reply of appreciation and good advice.

The festivities lasted nearly until midnight and interest did not lessen until the close. Orange has ended the annals of this section, in horticultural reunions of the winter, in a blaze of glory.

The Elberon Dinner.

February 7, at Deal Beach, the second annual dinner of the Elberon Horticultural Society was given at the Deal Country Club. Notwithstanding the zero weather, sixty or more were in attendance. The affair was a great success. The tables were handsomely decorated with roses, carnations and flowering plants, furnished by Anton Bauer, Peter Murray, Peter Ewen, James Kennedy and Joseph A. Manda. The menu was excellent. The toasts were:

"The Elberon Society," by President Murray.
"Kindred Societies," by William Dowlin.
"The Morris County Gardeners' Society," by C. H. Totty and Robert Schultz.
"Ancient Horticulture," by Father Campbell.
"Civic Progress," by Mr. Hogenkalp.

Manda, W. A. Sperling, R. H. Rutherford and the Burnett brothers.

About every member of the club was called on for song or story and the festivities lasted until 4 o'clock in the morning.

Various Notes.

Between explosions, fires and auto accidents the wholesale section has had its share of late. Mr. Hunter, of J. H. Small & Sons, is convalescing and his friends are congratulating him on his narrow escape. Charles Loechner is still nursing his broken leg at the Norwegian hospital in Brooklyn, but hopes to be out by May. The explosion between Traendly & Schenck's and A. J. Guttman's gave several in the trade a close shave, and the fire in the basement of Young & Nugent's damaged the place considerably and gave the firemen an excuse for breaking in the doors of James McManus' orchid headquarters and the entrance of Traendly & Schenck's daily market.

The Greek Retail Association gave its American confreres a reception and dinner last week that totaled an expenditure by the society of over $500. These children of Mars Hill and ancient Athens never do things by halves. Their annual ball brought together over 2,000 people.

Among the green goods men, who have all had an excellent season, J. J. Fellouris reports a big stock of galax in cold storage and shipments in any quantity ready for his big country patronage.

George Edmondson, of Burnett Bros., was a visitor at the Elberon dinner last week. All the seedsmen's travelers report an exceptionally good spring business.

Elwood Brant, of the Brant, Hentz Co., of Madison, and brother of the local partner of the Brant Bros., at Utica, N. Y., was in the city Saturday, February 12. The output of the Brant, Hentz Co. is handled exclusively by Moore, Hentz & Nash, of the Coogan building.

W. J. Elliott says his first plant sale of the year will be March 15, just two days before the Florists' Club's annual dinner. Mr. Elliott was chairman of last year's dinner committee, the club's first big success in many years as to crowd and enthusiasm, nearly 200 attending, including for the first time the ladies. Mr. Elliott "did time" last week in jury duty, a rather unremunerative experience for a man who has auctioned $5,000 worth of plants in a day.

C. H. Totty, of Madison, has grown eloquent at all the dinners of the horticultural societies this year over the big Morristown show this fall, an advance agent of the floricultural prosperity, including $3,000 in premiums for the fortunate exhibitors.

Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Saltford, of Poughkeepsie, have been in the city for a week, the guests of Mr. Saltford's brother, the wholesale florist of 43 West Twenty-eighth street.

Lager & Hurrell have a plant worth a trip to Summit, N. J., to behold—a Cattleya Trianæ two and one-half feet in diameter, carrying over fifty perfect blooms.

Julius Roehrs, Sr., of Rutherford, is enjoying a southern trip away from blizzards and zero, in the balmy climate of Trinidad and South America.

W. L. Rock, of Kansas City, one of the bon ton florists of the prosperous west, enjoyed a happy visit in New York last week and returned full of ideas and enterprises that will bear fruit in Easter decorative conceptions there.

Mr. Brown, of the Belnord, is enjoying a week's rest with retailers up the Hudson. The new store is a success. The Hoffmeir Flower Shop, across the way, is handsomely fitted up and doing a big business in dinner decorations. Mrs. Hoffmeir has charge of the office. The Forster-Mansfield Mfg. Co. has some unique decorative novelty work there, including the ice-box and window arches.

Mengham & Westwood are already nicely settled in their new store at Broadway and Eighty-fifth street and are well pleased with the change from noisy Columbus avenue.

The Smart Set Floral Co. has a beautifully lighted store and is doing an excellent business. Saturday, February 12, they had a funeral order amounting to over $800, including twelve large pieces and a pall of valley and orchids.

M. A. Bowe had his greatest wedding decoration of the season last week, which the city papers described in detail. It was a carte blanche affair.

H. E. Froment's Killarney is running full time. That enormous house of L. B. Coddington's, at Summit, N. J., grows enough of them to provide a boutonniere daily for every Irishman in New York, including the policemen.

The Kervan Co. and B. Rosens handle great quantities of wild smilax weekly. Business has been excellent with all the green goods men.

Kessler Bros., the plantsmen, laid in a fine stock of blooming plants for Valentine's day and were about cleaned out Saturday evening. Their loaning of palms to the florists in the big city without greenhouse conveniences has become their specialty. They also have a unique exhibit of armadillo baskets on sale.

Bowling.

Bowling continues weekly at Astoria and Flatbush. New York will get together a representation of some kind after Easter to make its debut at Rochester in August.

Flatbush and Astoria had a dinner together and bowled a match game Thursday, February 10. Either of these teams can beat New York's score at Pittsburg. At Astoria Tuesday, February 8, the scores were:

DENVER.

The Market.

The weather has been fair and trade good, especially preceding Lent. There is a scarcity of stock and flowers of all kinds are bringing good prices. Roses have been particularly scarce and orders for these have to be placed in advance, as everything in this line is bought up as soon as it reaches the wholesale house. Carnations are in about the same state, for supply is hardly equal to the demand. American Beauty also is shy and violets have been scarce, but the increased sunlight of the last week is having its effect. Bulbous stock is coming in, but hardly at its best, daffodils and tulips being the most plentiful. All kinds of green goods have been and are scarce, especially smilax and plumosus.

Various Notes.

A well-attended meeting of the Colorado Florists' Club was held at T. M. A. hall February 10. An interesting paper was read by Lyle C. Waterbury, on perennials, which created quite a little discussion. After the business meeting a fine lunch was served.

The entertainment consisted of music, speeches and a five-round boxing match between William Wilmore and Bert Falconer—it proved a good one, but under the laws of the club no decision was rendered by the referee, A. H. Bush.

Mrs. Benson, wife of N. A. Benson, died February 7 at the family residence, 1306 South Sherman street, the funeral being held February 9, at Horan's chapel, with interment at Fairmount. The funeral car was entirely filled with flowers and floral designs, showing the respect in which the deceased was held

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

Business has dropped off noticeably during the last week, Ash Wednesday marking a perceptible decline, and it is evident that from now on, for a time at least, the lenten season is going to make itself felt in the flower trade. There are, however, a number of large social functions in sight following Easter.

While the retailers are now having a respite from the drive and hustle that they have been put to since Christmas, the growers are now bending their efforts for Eastertide and some good showings are promised. There is an ample supply of all kinds of regular stock and all in good quality. There is a slight easing off in prices on a majority of the supply.

Newport Horticultural Society.

The plan of having several papers by as many different members proved a decided success at the meeting of the Newport Horticultural Society, February 8. It drew out one of the largest crowds seen at a regular meeting for a long time and furnished a program that was most interesting and instructive. An attempt will be made to arrange similar discussions for every meeting. The evening topic was "Horticultural Exhibitions" and five papers had been written on as many phases of the subject.

President James Robertson opened the discussion by a paper on "Utility and Missions," in which he gave a thorough discussion of the matter and pointed out the beneficial results that follow a well put up and meritorious exhibition, to all concerned, grower, retailer and the public. John P. Hammond was the second speaker, his paper being entitled "Preparing for the Exhibition." He pointed out the great care and attention necessary in connection with the initial steps for the exhibition and referred to some of the ridiculous results that ofttimes attend these shows. "Staging and Arranging of Exhibits" was the subject of Bruce Butterton's paper and this was rich in suggestions as to changes and additions that might be made to the advantage of the exhibitions, and it is probable that several of them will be adopted by the society in its next appearance. "Judging" was the title of a paper read by Richard Gardiner and his long experience thoroughly qualified him for his task. He drew attention to the importance attached to the careful, conscientious and intelligent judging of the exhibits, stating that the value of the awards was not so much in the possible prize given by the society for the exhibition as in the relative merit of standing that was attained. John Forbes's paper on "How to Secure the Attendance of the Public at the Exhibitions," was also replete with suggestions, many being unique and daring, while others appealed directly to the members, and a trial will be given some of them at an early date.

After the reading of the papers the society took up the general discussion of the subject and many good thoughts were exchanged. The entertainment and social committee served a lunch and a good time was enjoyed.

Various Notes.

Eugene Appleton, of William Appleton & Sons, Providence, has returned from his honeymoon trip.

O. H. Williams has been on the sick list the last week, suffering from an attack of the grip.

Talk of establishing a flower market is again heard around town. This subject bobs up periodically and then dies as it began. Meanwhile the growers go about from store to store or dispose of their stock by telephone.

Eugene McCarron reports an unusually busy time since the first of the year. "No boom, but just a good, steady, hustling trade," he says.

Henry Clegg, gardener for R. I. Gammell, this city, reports to the police the theft of considerable copper pipe from the premises recently.

IN MICHIGAN.

Chase & Wilcox, proprietors of the Hastings Greenhouse Co., Hastings, have completed large greenhouses in that city and have started business with bright prospects for the future. Mr. Wilcox is a graduate of the Michigan Agricultural College, where he specialized in horticulture, and he will look after the plant culture, while his partner, Will Chase, will take care of the business end.

Peter Lubin has opened a florist's shop at Grand Haven, and carries potted plants, ferns, palms and cut flowers. Mr. Lubin was formerly with Hancock & Son.

Wishing to engage in another line of business, Wm. E. Pew has retired from the firm of Pew & Dawes, florists, at Muskegon. Chas. B. Dawes will continue the business in the Flatiron store, with greenhouses at Muskegon Heights as a source of supply.

W. J. Trover, florist at Elkhart, Ind., has removed his store to larger and better quarters in the building formerly occupied by H. Helfrick & Son, clothiers.

W. L. Cukerski has completed his new greenhouses at West Fulton street and Valley avenue, Grand Rapids, and is stocking them with bedding plants for the spring trade. He has ordered 60,000 shrubs from France to plant in his nursery in Walker township.

Floral Park, Hillsdale, is also landscape gardener for the Lake Shore railway, having charge of all gardens on that road between Chicago and Toledo. Fifteen years ago he had only one greenhouse, but today he has eight, covering about 30,000 square feet. Five of the houses are devoted to carnations, one to mums, one to roses and one to palms and ferns.

The Grand Rapids Produce Dealers and Credit Association has elected officers for 1910 as follows: President, F. E. Stroup; vice-presidents, H. J. Vinkemulder and J. G. Doan; treasurer, Bert A. Owen; board of managers for two years, C. L. Reed, J. F. Boyland, W. H. Fowle, C. D. Crittenden, M. J. Dark and A. W. Miller.

Lettuce, in Grand Rapids, is bringing a better price now, ranging from 12 cents to 12½ cents, as compared with 7 cents and 8 cents for some time past. A large share of it goes to Cincinnati. Toledo used to be a good market, but strong local competition has to be met now.

HEATING A MUSHROOM HOUSE.

In answer to J. D.'s inquiry about the building of a mushroom house, on page 48 of the Review of January 27, complete directions were given except with reference to heating. Please inform me as to the best means of heating the houses and the temperature required.

E. C.

The temperature for mushrooms should not be below 50 degrees and not above 60 degrees; 55 to 58 degrees is considered just right, but they are less liable to suffer from being cooler than warmer. To be cool only retards growth; to be too warm injures the crop.

Hot water is used by most growers for heating mushroom houses, but steam can be used just as well. The flow pipes are suspended from the ridge and hang just above the head. The return pipes come back just above the ground, along the edge of the beds in the aisle, sometimes one on each side of the aisle and sometimes only on one side. The number of pipes and their sizes depend on the size of the house, and also on how well it is built, and whether or not it is banked up.

Mushroom houses need only a little artificial heat. The heat of the beds is enough to keep the temperature up nearly high enough if in good, warm cellars, but in regular houses more heat is required than in a cellar. H. G.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Business, in a way, was good last week, when it is considered that the week started with a gale, with the thermometer at zero, and wound up with a snowfall variously estimated at from fourteen to twenty-two inches on Friday. The snow put out of business the people who usually clean up the poorer stock on Saturday. Otherwise there was not much cause for complaint from the wholesalers, as good stock was not any too plentiful.

Among the retailers there were several things to interfere with a good week's business. In the first place, the beginning of Lent is always the worst of it. The extremely bad weather also had its effect, and the result was that they could not make their usual Saturday clean-up.

Various Notes.

Valentine's day is becoming more of a factor in the cut flower business each year, and the retailers deserve credit for the way they advertise, both with printers' ink and their window displays, in order to bring the floral valentine into more general use. Each year they show something better, and anything they show has the old lace and paper valentine done to a frazzle.

Among those who made special window decorations were Mrs. E. A. Williams. She used only white, heart-shaped boxes, but the effect, with handsome ribbons and flowers, was beautiful and the general window arrangement was such that but few people got by without at least a look.

H. L. Blind & Bros. used hand-painted boxes, which were beautiful in themselves, but with the flowers and ribbons would gladden the heart of the coldest maiden.

Walter Breitenstein's floral valentines called forth many compliments from the people in the trade, but then we always look for something original from him.

W. A. Herbert, of Wellsville, O., has been up against a streak of hard luck. He slept too well one of the coldest nights, the steam went down and everything was frozen. Then, to make bad worse, he walked on the sled track and the small boy with his sled came down behind; result, a broken hand, which will no doubt bother him for some time.

Otto Baur, formerly with the Baur Floral Co., Erie, Pa., is now with Randolph & McClements.

E. C. Ludwig has just received a large consignment of fine palms. Mr. Ludwig reports funeral work as being the best end of the business at present.

A matter which will be of interest to many will be the replacing of the early morning train on the B. & O. railroad, which will bring the flowers into the city at 6:30 a. m., instead of 8 o'clock. This was brought about when a committee, including Fred Burki, went to Harrisburg and appeared before the state railroad commission. The railroad company at once promised to put back the early train.

Ben L. Elliott and Miss Mary Bader, daughter of John Bader, were quietly married Tuesday morning, February 8, and departed on a noon train for a honeymoon trip. Their friends, who are legion, were surprised and wish them all the good things usually called down on newly married people.

Edward Blind, of Blind Bros., was married February 14 to Miss Bessie Daum. Hoo-Hoo.

North Bridgton, Me.—Chas. L. Chadbourne is building another greenhouse and also an addition to his potting shed.

Paterson, N. J.—It is reported that Robert Smith, the Market street florist, has been compelled to discontinue business, temporarily at least, on account of his inability to pay his rent and other obligations. His total liabilities are said to be in the neighborhood of $2,500.

Montpelier, Vt.—One of the best ranges of glass found in the Green Mountain state is seen here. Emslie & Co. pride themselves on carnations and find Enchantress the best pink for general purposes. A new house is planned for the new candidates. The long continued strike among the granite cutters has seriously affected business among the live folk, but the grim reaper gets his work in just the same and helps keep up demand for flowers.

A GREAT CUCUMBER.

Theodore Roosevelt is being paid $1.00 a word for his remarkable articles on hunting in Africa. We are sure, had he run across a vine of Salzer's Green Cross Cucumber in that far away clime, he could easily have used 10,000 words, or $10,000 worth of description in extolling and setting forth the many merits of this wonderful cucumber, and then some more! Look at the illustration. We had, in a small field with ordinary cultivation, hundreds and hundreds of cucumbers larger than here illustrated, attaining this enormous size within 20 to 25 days after setting! It is the most remarkable Cucumber and surely the most beautiful cucumber mortal eye has ever seen. It's infinitely ahead in beauty and appearance and quality of any hot house cucumber—each one a picture!

President Taft's recommendation that the rate of postage on magazines be increased is proving to be about as unpopular as anything this administration has fathered—and so far the Taft administration appears to have been singularly unfortunate with the people. It is to be expected that publishers would not like a proposal to increase the postage on their output, but the way the magazine readers are deluging Congress with letters probably will be the restraining influence. Dear Sir: As you are the only Member from Illinois on the Post-office committee, I address you as my representative in that body to urge you to vote against any increase in the second-class rate.

Dreer's Superb Late Branching Asters

The finest Aster for late August and September blooming.

The plants form strong, branching bushes, 2 to 2½ feet high, bearing on long, strong stems their handsome Chrysanthemum-like flowers, which, under ordinary cultivation, average 5 inches across. The form of the flowers, together with the length of the stems, places them at the head of Asters for cutting. They come into bloom from two to three weeks after the average type, usually being at their best during September.

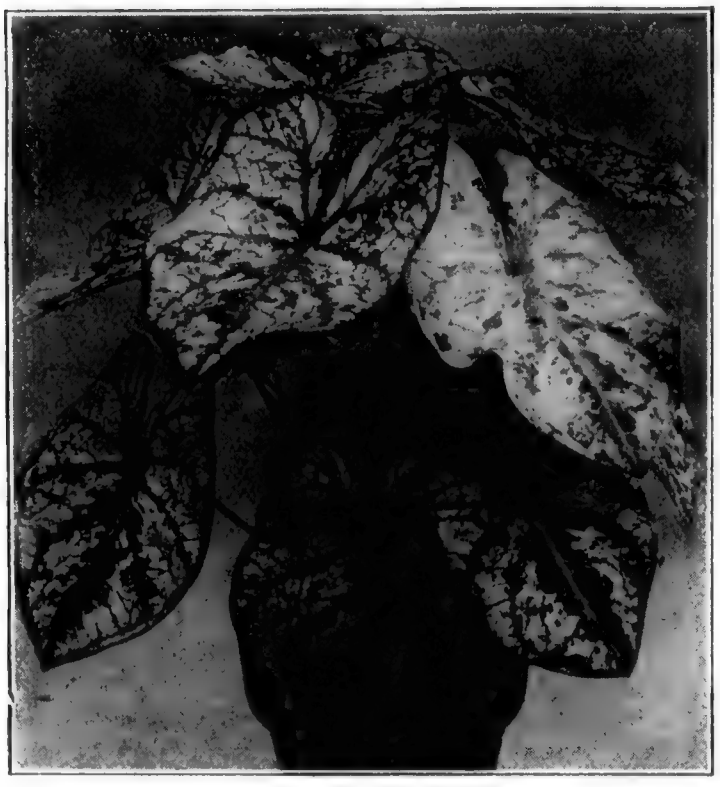
SEEDS AND THE WASTE.

The losses resulting from poor seed fall within five principal categories: (1) Seed not acclimatized or adapted to conditions, (2) seed of low producing efficiency, (3) seed of low vitality, (4) adulterated seed and weed seed, and (5) lack of trueness to type, or misbranded seed.



The importance of natural variation and differences in climate, in relation to agricultural production, has never been fully realized. As far as they are able, plants vary and adjust themselves to their environment. Under natural conditions only those survive which can modify their habits of growth so as to make a successful resistance to destructive influences and propagate their kind. The rest die. The longer a species or variety grows under a given set of conditions, the better each generation becomes adapted to grow and reproduce under those conditions. Those individuals which are less well adapted, and therefore less vigorous, continually give way to those which are better adapted, and therefore more vigorous.

When man enters in as a factor he may, and usually does in a considerable measure, interfere with these natural adjustments. He selects individuals and cultivates them for some natural peculiarity, and as a result intensifies these features; but unless he follows nature's methods and destroys the plants that are not best adapted to his conditions and requirements he soon gets a great mixture of individuals, good, bad and indifferent, and cultivates them all together, receiving poor returns for his labor, and preventing, because of the natural crossing that may take place between them and the less desirable plants, the progressive development and improvement of the better individuals.

On the other hand, if he selects for propagation the individuals that give the best results under his peculiar conditions and prevents their crossing with the less desirable sorts, he soon develops a strain of high efficiency and productiveness for those particular conditions; but, like nature, he must continually select the good and persistently destroy the bad, or eventually lose all and see the variety "run out."

Selected seed of crops grown under severe limiting conditions will as a rule give good results the first year when grown under conditions less severe. The second generation, however, begins to vary and break up, and unless careful selection is practiced the crop soon becomes very unsatisfactory. For this reason many southern farmers think that they must each year get certain kinds of seed from the north, whereas from the variations occurring in their own fields they might easily breed or select strains much better adapted to their conditions. This is true of practically every important crop.

When seed is taken from regions where limiting conditions are less severe to regions of greater severity, the crop may be killed outright, with no return, or marked variation may result the first year. A uniform strain of tobacco taken from a tropical or subtropical locality to one of the north temperate tobacco regions at once breaks up into fifteen or twenty distinct strains. By careful selection any one of these may be gradually fixed and adjusted to the new conditions if crossing is prevented. Cotton, corn and other crops behave in the same way. These variations and adjustments result not only from climatic changes, but also from soil changes, such as the nature and concentration of salts in the soil, its physical condition, and the like.

Disease and insect pests also often destroy large numbers of individuals, leaving only the more resistant plants. If these are saved resistant strains can be developed. The great value of the straggling plant here and there that escapes some great epidemic or some cold wave, drought, or unfavorable soil condition should be appreciated and its seed saved. Many valuable adaptations have been secured in this way.

The great importance of selecting and growing seed under the conditions under which the future crop must be grown is now apparent. Careful experiments and the experience of careful growers have abundantly demonstrated the truth of the facts presented. Seed breeders and growers especially must give attention to these points.

Assuming that every care has been taken to get seed well adapted to the conditions of culture, it is still important to see that the seed is of good vitality and capable of producing strong, vigorous plants. Great waste of land and labor results every year from the use of seed of low vitality. As a result of careful tests made by the Department of Agriculture of over 3,000 carefully selected ears of what was considered good standard seed corn, more than half of

We never had a dissatisfied customer with Rawson's Asters; we need no better recommendation. Rawson's Aster Seeds are fresh, plump and of unapproachable quality.

NOVELTIES FOR 1910

ASTER, AURORA. The most unique colored Aster ever introduced. Yellow, passing to old rose. The flower-petals first appearing are shaped similar to those of the "Comet" type and are a perfect yellow, but when the flower is fully expanded it takes on a tint of delicate fresh rose, which the artist calls "old rose." The plant grows fully 24 inches high in a pyramid form and produces any quantity of double blooms 3½ inches across. Pkt., 35 cts.

ASTER, CACTUS CELESTINE. A new form of petal, resembling exactly a true Cactus Dahlia. The color is a most delicate lilac of unusual beauty. Pkt., 20 cts.

ASTER, CROWN OF GOLD. A pure, delicate yellow flower, of good size and borne on stout stems, resembling in shape the Victoria Aster. Its color is original and did not exist heretofore. Pkt., 20 cts.

ASTER, RAWSON'S NEW GLORY.

(Introduced by us in 1909.)

The most perfected type of Giant Comet that can possibly be produced. The flowers invariably measure 6 inches across and are always double. In our whole field last year we could not discover a single plant which showed the least sign of disease. The long stems are graceful and not stiff. Colors are distinct and most desirable for commercial use.

ASTER, TRIUMPH OF PARIS. The nearest approach to a yellow aster. The form is a single comet with a quilled center. The petals consist of two rows of glistening white, while the quills are a clear yellow. Stems range 2 feet in height and produce the giant blooms singly. A grand aster for the florist. ⅛ oz., $1.00.

THE CREGO ASTER. This aster is the nearest approach to a chrysanthemum of any flower grown. It is unusually large in size, running 4 to 5 inches in diameter when well grown. The petals are about double the length of those in the older varieties, and are twisted and curled in such a manner as to give the blossoms an exceedingly beautiful fluffy appearance. The plants are large and vigorous, producing their blossoms on very long stems. The central stalk is very short, the branches breaking out very near the ground, are generally clean their entire length, needing little or no disbudding, making it the easiest variety to prepare for market I have ever seen. Our seed is direct from the originator.

ASTER, RAWSON'S PINK BEAUTY. Unquestionably a grand and valuable florist aster and mainly so on account of its color and massive flower. The form of flower is a perfected Victoria which never shows a center. The color is so intensely beautiful that a graphic description can never do it justice. Delicate peach-tinted pink with a glowing shade of rich pink towards the center. No other aster can boast of such a pleasing combination. The stem of this flower is fairly tall and very erect. The plant branches from the bottom. ⅛ oz., 60 cts.; oz., $4.00.

ASTER, GEISHA. This strain originated in Japan and this can easily be seen in the formation of the flower. We were so much impressed with the attention the visitors to Rawson's Dahlia Farm paid to this fantastic type that we were actually forced to catalogue it and now believe it has a great future. The plant is extremely robust and produces stout stems growing very erect and carrying their gigantic flower formed of fine needle-shaped tubed petals around a conspicuous central disc. The very open center of this flower has an immense charm which appeals to the public, and as we must first of all please them, this is a point in its favor.

STANDARD VARIETIES

DAWN OF DAY

(Novelty, 1908.) The earliest flowering Aster in existence. Fine white, perfect in form and growth, long branching stems and flowers; often three weeks ahead of Queen of the Market. It is of branching habit and very full and if freely cut will continue to bear blooms until late in fall. See last week's Review, page 8. ⅛ oz., 50c; oz., $3.00.

RAWSON'S NEW MIDSUMMER ASTER.

This is our own introduction. We have received high praise from all growers. It has most graceful formed flowers, which are borne on immense long stems full two weeks ahead of the Late Branching Aster, and the plants will continue to bear flowers as late.

The colors are true and hardly any open-centered flowers among them.

RAWSON'S DAYBREAK. This variety must not be compared with the strain offered elsewhere and a trial will convince the ever-so-critical of its superiority. ⅛ oz., 40c; oz., $2.50.

RAWSON'S PURITY. (Pure white.) Of the same type as Daybreak, differing only in color, which is a pure glistening white. Just as free-flowering and symmetrical as Daybreak and undoubtedly unsurpassed as a white bedding variety. ⅛ oz., 50c; oz., $3.00.

ASTER, RAWSON'S LATE BRANCHING. Flowers are very large in size and borne on long, stiff stems. It is one of the best and most popular varieties for late flower markets.

TWO NEW SALVIAS FOR 1910

ZURICH. The best salvia yet introduced. Plants grow very compact, show little foliage and bear heavy flower spikes, which are thickly laden with bright scarlet flowers. Flowers early in July and remains in bloom with later varieties, ⅛ oz., 75c; oz., $5.00.

SALVIA SPLENDENS, KING OF CARPETS. The best dwarf bedding Salvia on the market today, outrivaling even "Zurich." The plants branch from the bottom and to such extent that the main stem is never visible. All side branches droop completely to the ground, making the whole plant a perfect half ball of fire. The plant grows but 15 inches high and flowers even earlier than "Zurich." ⅛ oz., $1.00; oz., $6.00.

The veteran Salvia grower, Mr. F. Bedman, says: "About the Salvia, 'King of Carpets.' It has done very well considering the dry weather that we have had, and I consider it one of the grandest dwarf salvias that I ever saw."

the ears were found to be of low vitality and unfit for seed. By testing individual ears and rejecting those of low vitality, an average gain in yield of nearly fourteen per cent could be secured as a result of the better stand and better productiveness of strong plants.

The same is true of other cereals. The seed of clover, alfalfa and other forage crops and grasses often contains a considerable percentage of seed of low vitality, ranging all the way from ten to ninety per cent in samples of different grades. Farmers often buy this cheap seed thinking that they are saving money, when as a matter of fact they are paying two or three times as much for the small amount of good seed obtained as they would pay had they bought good seed in the first place at twice the rate per pound paid for the poor seed.

An analysis of sixty-one samples of low-grade clover seed imported during the year ended June 30, 1906, showed the following average composition:

Red clover seed	per cent	74.06
Other seeds	do	12.17
Dirt and broken seeds	do	13.83
Live red clover seed in sample	do	43.16
Price paid per 100 pounds		$7.61
Actual cost per 100 pounds, based on percentage of good seed		$20.39

More than seventy-five per cent of these samples contained dodder. Nearly 1,000,000 pounds of this poor seed were imported during the year mentioned.

An analysis of high-grade samples showed the following average composition:

Red clover seed	per cent	97.73
Other seeds	do	.85
Dirt and broken seeds	do	1.42
(Five kinds of weed seeds were found in the sample.)
Live red clover seed in sample	do	96.55
Price paid per 100 pounds		$15.05
Actual cost per 100 pounds, based on percentage of good seed		$15.58

Similar results were secured with seed of other forage crops and grasses.

Poor seed cannot produce good plants, and poor plants give poor returns or no returns at all. If good seed and poor seed are mixed, a poor stand is secured and the returns diminished accordingly. Small, light seed are as a rule less vigorous than heavy, plump seeds. A difference in yield per acre of about fifteen per cent was found between light and heavy cotton seed. A similar difference in yield, uniformity and value of product was found between light and heavy tobacco seed and light and heavy radish seed; but when seed is of low vitality on account of old age or from any other cause the loss from its use is much greater, often amounting to a complete failure of the crop. Seed should always be tested before planting, and seed of low vitality rejected. It pays also to separate the light from the heavy seed and use only the latter. So far as its facilities permit, the Department of Agriculture is always glad to examine and test seed for farmers and seedsmen.

Adulterated and Misbranded Seeds.

Some of this poor seed is introduced to blend with good seed so that it can be sold at a lower price. Some of the worst weeds, like dodder and Canada thistle, have been introduced and spread in this way. Some samples of imported seed have been secured containing as many as eighty different kinds of weed seeds. The loss from weeds and the cost of fighting them is great and is so well understood as to need no discussion.

There are many varieties of vegetables and flowers that have seed so nearly alike that even an expert cannot tell them apart. However, the crops they produce are at once distinguished in the markets. Not only the variety but also the locality in which it is grown is very important. The western-grown Rocky Ford muskmelon seed looks exactly like the eastern-grown seed of the Netted Gem muskmelon, from which the former was derived by culture and selection in the west. If the farmer orders Rocky Ford seed and gets Netted Gem, his crop will not bring the high price of Rocky Ford melons in the markets.

same sort of substitution is often practiced by dishonest seedsmen with many kinds of vegetable seed, thus causing the farmer and the market gardener very great losses. The grower finds when he comes to harvest his crop that it is not what he contracted to supply and not what the market demands.

TIME TO PLANT ASTERS.

When should early asters be planted inside; also late asters? How far apart should they be planted? C. S. L.

Plant early asters inside about April 1 and set the plants about eight to ten inches apart each way. Plant the latest ones about July 1. A. F. J. B.

NARCISSI AND TULIPS.

We wish to grow daffodils and tulips another year and should like to know the best varieties to grow to have them in bloom from Christmas right on to Easter, and how to handle the bulbs to get the best results. J. S. & S.

The best varieties of narcissi to grow are: Trumpet Major, French bulbs, for Christmas and through January, and then Golden Spur to follow it. The latter can be had by the middle of January, but comes better at the end of the month. These are the two best forcing narcissi. Princeps is a cheap, easily grown variety and easily forced; it is somewhat lacking in substance, but is still sold in large quantities. N. poeticus ornatus may be had in flower from January 20 until Easter, or later. N. poeticus is useful in March and April. It will not force like ornatus. For a large, white winged trumpet narcissus, there is nothing to beat Victoria. It is best during February and March. There are a number of other narcissi that are grown commercially to some extent. These include Henry Irving, Emperor, Empress, Sir Watkin and Leedsii.

La Reine is the most popular early forcing tulip. It is not good at Christmas, but after the middle of January comes finely. Yellow Prince is a good yellow and Belle Alliance is a useful scarlet. Cottage Maid, Thomas Moore, Keizerkroon, Proserpine and Rose Grisdelin are other inexpensive and useful early tulips for forcing. In doubles Couronne d'Or and Murillo are the leaders.

Place your bulbs in flats or pans as soon as possible after receiving them. The narcissi will do well on a dark cellar floor without any covering, but the tulips should have a coating of fine cinders until they are sprouted a couple of inches. For the earliest batches the tulips should be placed in a case which can be darkened, as for lily of the valley. They will stand a brisk top heat, but do not need any bottom heat. It will be necessary to grow all the early batches of tulips dark until they have sufficient length of stem. If placed directly in light, they would be too short-stemmed. In the case of narcissi it is less necessary to draw them up. The flats can be stood below the benches and placed up in full light before the flowers start to open.

You will find cultural articles on bulb forcing later in the year, giving full particulars as to varieties, compost, etc., which please consult. C. W.

DAYTON, O.—H. H. Ritter has had excellent success with a bench of Eucharis Amazonica. The flowers sold readily at $3 per dozen, retail.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Cut flower trade has been fairly active considering the weather of last week, which was quite severe on all kinds of stock, the temperature running close to the zero mark. Roses are in no better supply than when last reported; their quality has perhaps improved a little, but values have not advanced. Really good specials bring top prices, but the lower grades move much better at quoted prices than the best, for the reason that they are most in demand. Carnations are coming in large consignments, but a large percentage of them are busted, which causes them to be closed out at low prices, although good stock is in heavy demand. Violets are in oversupply and can be had at 40 cents per hundred. Daffodils are hard to move at any price, especially in the markets. Sweet peas have found a ready sale, especially pink, which bring from 75 cents to $1 per hundred. Some have 15-inch stems. Azaleas are more plentiful this year than for a number of years and can be had at any price and size, but the reds are chiefly in demand, due mostly to St. Valentine's day.

Various Notes.

Monday, February 14, is to be carnation night at the Gardeners' Club, when one of the finest displays ever shown by the members of the club will be seen. A fine display of novelties will be shown from out-of-town growers.

R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co. has shipped over 200,000 geraniums up to the present writing and is propagating them in countless numbers. There is a heavy demand for canna and dahlia roots, more so than for the two previous years.

Halliday Bros have one of the finest displays of carnations to be seen around Baltimore. They have five houses planted with all the leading varieties and have been cutting heavily since November.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1909-10: Pres., F. H. Stannard, Ottawa, Kan.; Vice-Pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-fifth annual meeting, Denver, June, 1910.

Did you ever order Amurense privet from half a dozen different places and compare what you got?

Wm. A. Peterson, proprietor of Peterson Nursery, Chicago, has just returned from a two weeks' trip to New York and other eastern cities on a tour of inspection of the Presbyterian churches, their organization, equipment and work. Mr. Peterson devotes a considerable portion of his time to religious work. February 15 he delivered an address on the subject at Vincennes, Ind., and February 20 he will speak on "Hopeful Signs in Business Life," as the regular Sunday evening service at the Sixth Presbyterian church, Chicago.

SHORTENING THE DAHLIA LIST

Now that the season is at hand when dahlia growers are beginning the work of propagating green stock for the spring trade and for field planting next year, it seems to me that this is an opportune time to consider the question of shortening the list of varieties to be grown in the future. That there are too many varieties grown is painfully evident.

There are too many varieties even if all were first-class, but, unfortunately, this is not the case. Many are not even second-class. From now on there should be a rigid selection of varieties and only those of the highest merit should be retained. New varieties, also, should measure up well before being admitted.

A grower once said to me, "You are advocating a short list, but back with us we consider the longer the list the better chance we have." I answered, "Yes, you have a better advertisement, but the usefulness ends there." A man with a moderate list of meritorious varieties will win in the long run, and the run will not be very long, either.

To illustrate: A and B are growers. A has a list of 100 strictly first-class varieties—and I really believe that 100 will take in about all the first-class dahlias. B has these same 100 varieties, but he has 200 more. So their lists stand —A, 100; B, 300. A customer orders one dozen tubers from each of these growers. A sends him twelve first-class dahlias. B sends him four first-class and eight second-class dahlias. This would be the relative proportion. Which grower will get this customer's orders in the future?

In opposition to this fair proposition it may be argued that different people have different tastes, and that what pleases one may not please another. Granted; this fact I have proven over and over again in the many years that I have dealt directly with the consumer. But these years have proven another fact, of far more importance to me, and that is that about ninety per cent of the people like what other people like, and I do not care to shape my business to suit the ten per cent.

The present popularity of the dahlia has been a fruitful source of trouble to the grower, as it has afforded an opportunity to flood the markets with a lot of varieties of questionable merit—many of them only trash. The dahlia is well able to hold its own from now on, if good varieties and fair dealing are combined.

PACIFIC COAST.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

The weather has continued to be bright and sunny, except for one day of rain, followed by high winds, which caused a decided drop in the temperature, with frosts at night again.

The business done has been quite satisfactory to all the florists. There have been many weddings and much entertaining. We used to be told that people did not die in California, but the florists always seem to be busy doing funeral work, and large designs predominate.

Flowers of all kinds are plentiful, the continued sunshine bringing out quantities of blooms of good quality. Some of the stores are selling hothouse carnations at 50 cents and 75 cents a dozen, while others are still charging $1. Spring flowers are everywhere and have good sale. Trumpet Majors are now coming in from outside in great abundance.

The Acacia Baileyana trees are in full bloom just now, and they are indeed a beautiful sight, with their yellow blooms hanging in such graceful profusion. Many of them are seen in the parkings, some streets in Hollywood having rows of them the entire length. The flowers sell in the stores at $1 a dozen. A window of these and the yellow daffodils was especially attractive.

Various Notes.

The show greenhouses at East Lake park are gay with poinsettias, azaleas and spring flowers. The superintendent says this has been the coldest winter in many years, and nothing can do well outside with a difference of 40 degrees between noon and night, as there has been many times. There are many lilies and bulbs of all kinds to be seen in the coldframes. Marguerites in bloom, all the way from three to twelve feet through, are seen everywhere in this locality.

Scotch heather plants are shown in the stores. A spineless cactus has been attracting much attention in the Angelus window.

Morris Goldenson made two palls last week, one of violets and Roman hyacinths. The larger one was nearly seven feet long.

H. Von Hofgaarden, proprietor of the Mira Mar Nursery, at Long Beach, has a sales yard with lath houses at 322 American avenue. He also has two acres on Tenth street. He sends many fine maidenhair ferns and cyclamens, of which he makes a specialty, to the Los Angeles florists. He came to California three and a half years ago, not knowing a word of our language, but in that short time he has built up a good business and has become proficient in English.

S. A. C.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

There has been a decided moderation in the weather. We have had no touches of frost for over a week and the rainy spell has ceased for the present. As a consequence flowers of all kinds are much more plentiful than they have been at any time this year. This is especially noticeable with carnations and roses and the prices of both these articles have been reduced fully one half. Violets have had a similar fall in a twenty-five per cent reduction. Daffodils are strictly in their prime at present and they can be bought at from 75 cents to $1.50 per hundred. Tulips are in heavy supply and move slowly. Valley is not plentiful, but there is quite sufficient for all demands. Narcissi are cheap, but they show the results of the continued cold weather, either in the size of the flowers or in the shortness of the stems. They cost the stores from 75 cents to $1 per hundred. Fruit blossoms and wild flowers have made quite a showing in the shop windows within the last few days and are proving to be good sellers with the flower loving public.

Easter lilies are being brought into town in fair sized quantities, but they are only of fair quality. The price to the retailers is from $2.50 to $3 per dozen. This is probably what will be asked for them during the next few weeks.

All kinds of green goods in the fern line have been scarce, but the prospects are for plenty of everything if the present good weather continues. Business is fair, with splendid prospects for a heavy Easter trade both locally and in the country.

Various Notes.

Frey's New Single and Anemone Chrysanthemums

The sensation at the National Flower Show 1908. Winners of the $50.00 Silver Cup, 2 first and 1 second Prize, Certificates of Merit of the Chrysanthemum Society of America and Minnesota State Florists' Association, 2 First Prizes at Milwaukee, 1909.

These are all exceptionally fine for commercial purposes, either for cutting or as pot plants, it being my aim to send out only such varieties as have stood a severe test in this market. The constant gain in favor of these two types has been so rapid and their value for all sorts of decorative purposes so great, that every grower will want to invest in them. It has been stated by authorities that these varieties are a great improvement over those now in commerce.

1910 NOVELTIES

Mrs. Theodore Wirth. Anemone, a most beautiful, soft pink, with light yellow center, preceding Mrs. John Pesther, a money maker.

Grace Clementina Burki. Single, pure white, large, round flower, very substantial, following Lady Lu.

Mrs. John Pesther. Single of medium size, Enchantress pink, long, slender, wiry stems, comes for Thanksgiving, extra fine.

Mrs. Katharyn H. Brenneman, successor to S. S. Brenneman, has sold her greenhouses and grounds, consisting of about four acres, to J. E. Meinhart, of Leavenworth, Kan., for $15,000. Mr. Meinhart will take possession March 1. The Brenneman greenhouses are the pioneer greenhouses of the county. Mrs. Brenneman succeeded her late husband December 26, 1908, in the business, which continued to grow under her direction until it became too heavy for her to manage. Mr. Meinhart is a practical florist, with flattering prospects before him.

ADMIRATION

This carnation we offer to the trade as being one of the finest Carnations of any color that we know of up to date. Being a beautiful shade of pink, somewhat lighter than Winona, having that beautiful satin finish, always showing up well either in natural or artificial light. Plants benched in August are now coming into full crop, carrying from 10 to 20 buds. We have been cutting since September 10th. As a money maker you will find no equal.

The size of the flower is 3 to 3½ inches, excellent form, well built up in the center, with the petals so arranged as to make it stand the general requirements of a good fancy commercial variety. A grand keeper and shipper.

The habit is ideal, upright with no surplus grass and every shoot going into flower. Its freedom and earliness make it nearly the ideal carnation. The calyx is very tough and seldom bursts. Can be handled with great success either from the field or grown inside all summer. No one has to be an expert to handle this variety. It scored 86 points at the American Carnation Society meeting at Indianapolis, January 27 to 28, 1909.

Price, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

Have you sent us an order for your stock of Carnation Dorothy Gordon? Easy to put it off—but our supply is limited, orders are piling in every day, and some of you who are planning to grow this splendid Carnation for your trade this year are going to be disappointed.

This magnificent flower made a big "hit" at the Pittsburg meeting, but that didn't surprise us any, for a great many of our friends in the trade long ago learned that for real, substantial profits

Carnation Dorothy Gordon

Stood away up at the top of the list. We know we "harp" a lot about its merits, but when you know this grand new variety as we do, you'll be enthusiastic, too. Flowers fragrant and uniform in color—a little darker than Pink Enchantress; very large—size 3 inches or more in diameter—buds of good substance and very lasting. All these features spell profits for growers of Carnation Dorothy Gordon—double profits, for the plants bear more flowers which sell for a higher price, bringing your gains up to nearly twice what you can get from other commercial sorts.

Come to Wyncote and see Dorothy Gordon growing; if you cannot do that, write or wire us now and we will reserve stock for you. But do it quickly if you want any rooted cuttings this spring. Interesting literature free.

Prices are: $10.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000.

GLEN COVE, N. Y.

The regular meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held in Pembroke hall, February 9, with over forty members present and President Duthie in the chair. Six applications for membership were received and C. H. Hyde, Roslyn, was elected an honorary member.

The schedule for the summer show was approved, the date and place to be decided later. The dahlia show will be held September 28 and the schedule for this was accepted. The Stumpp & Walter Co. offered a silver cup for the fall show, and at the last dinner George Burnett offered $25 as prizes for the same show.

Next meeting will be rose day and three prizes are offered, for the best twelve white, twelve pink and twelve other colors, respectively. Vice-President Reidenbach also offered $5 for the best two vases of sweet peas—first, $3; second, $2.

George Wilson's essay on "Carnations" was a treat for all and it certainly deserves a high place among writings on this subject.

Messrs. Marshall, MacKenzie and Johnson acted as judges and their decisions were as follows: Best twelve white carnations, V. Cleres, with White Enchantress; best twelve pink, A. Robertson, with Enchantress; best twelve mixed, V. Cleres, with Imperial, Winsor and Enchantress.

Cultural certificates were awarded as follows: W. Eccles, for vase of Winsor, also vase of Mrs. Charles Knopf; H. Gaut, for vase of sweet peas; E. Reidenbach, for two beautiful cyclamens; A. Robertson, for vase of Enchantress.

Honorable mention was awarded to F. Petroccia for Primula Kewensis and to E. Reidenbach for a vase of freesias.

At the next meeting Mr. Johnson will give an account of his travels across the sea during his last vacation.

LENOX, MASS.

One of the most interesting and instructive meetings held by the Lenox Horticultural Society for some time was presided over by President G. Foulsham on Saturday, February 5, and was largely attended. W. Maynard was elected an active member of the society.

An exhibit which called forth special praise was a magnificent vase of twenty-four flowers of a new carnation named Woodenethe, exhibited by Frank E. Whitney, Fishkill-on-Hudson, N. Y. This was unanimously awarded a first-class certificate. The variety exhibited is pure white. The flowers are borne on long, stiff stems and measure three and one-half to four inches across. This splendid new introduction has been exhibited before the New York Florists' Club and at the annual carnation convention of this year, where it was awarded a certificate of merit, having scored ninety-one points.

E. Jenkins gave an interesting lecture on the growth and pruning of trees, under the title of "Tree Surgery." He showed in a practical manner how trees are increased in value and live longer under judicious pruning. A. H. Wingett took up the discussion in a most interesting way, showing how the market value of timber could be increased by thinning, etc. Most of the members asked questions on the subject, which the lecturer answered in an able manner. He was accorded a hearty vote of thanks for his instructive lecture.

No date has yet been chosen for the society's annual dinner. The committee in charge consisted of E. Jenkins, A. H. Wingett, A. J. Loveless, A. J. Jenkins and A. McConnachie.

The annual ball, which is always looked forward to with much interest in the vicinity, was held Monday, January 24, and was a decided success, both financially and otherwise. The committee, of which F. Butler was chairman, is to be congratulated upon the success attending its efforts.

Rose and carnation night will be held Saturday, April 2. G. H. I.

WORCESTER, MASS.—The will of the late H. F. A. Lange, which was filed for probate December 1, 1909, but was contested by the widow, has now been ratified, as Mrs. Lange has withdrawn her opposition. Arthur H. and Carl C. Lange, sons of the testator, had been named as executors, and received the greater part of the $125,000 estate. The terms of the final settlement, or the amount settled on Mrs. Lange, are not reported.

SCARLET GLOW. (New) an extra good bright scarlet, a large flower and exceptional keeping qualities. It is in perfect health, and has that early and free flowering habit that characterizes a paying commercial variety. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

PINK DELIGHT. Clear waxy shell pink. The variety that won over Enchantress at the A. C. S. meeting, Indianapolis, January, 1909. It has all the good points to make it the leader and with its unequaled substance, the best keeping and shipping carnation in the light pink class.

In 1909 we had no surplus stock to offer. With our large stock this season we are in a position to take care of all orders. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

We have large stocks of White Perfection, Rose-pink Enchantress, White Enchantress, Winona, Enchantress, Aristocrat, Beacon.

Selected, healthy, well rooted cuttings, $3.00 per 100; $25.00 per 1000.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Reports regarding business vary somewhat; still, taking it as a whole, it has been most satisfactory. The bulk of the business has been for funerals, many large orders being placed in some cases. With the exception of roses, stock is coming in in good quantities and moving rapidly. St. Valentine's day created a big demand for cut flowers, not only in Detroit, but many large shipments to neighboring cities were made by the wholesalers. Bulbous stock is slow this year with all the growers. Smilax is still quite scarce and out-of-town stock is being used to help satisfy the demand.

St. Valentine's Business.

Some years ago there was but little demand for flowers as valentines, in Detroit at least. This year only a moderate sum of money was spent in this city with the florists for valentines. At Easter and Christmas all of the florists doing a retail business receive a fair share of the orders, but not so on St. Valentine's day. The book and confectionery stores have so trained the public that the most of them never think of flowers as valentines; consequently, the florist who comes right out and shows and tells the people that flowers and plants are the most acceptable valentines, gets the business.

Various Notes.

Breitmeyer's Sons have several big decorations on hand for the near future. Their St. Valentine business was most satisfactory.

W. B. Brown put in a busy St. Valentine's day, decorating Masonic Temple for the annual ball of the Oriental Lodge. The decorations were unusually elaborate and were much admired.

The Bemb Floral Co. had a special St. Valentine's rush. A. Pochelon usually has some cute little original ideas for a day like St. Valentine's and, even though his store is where it is hard to find, people always manage to locate it.

The window of E A. Fetters' store was prettily trimmed the week previous to Valentine's day. Many ways of using flowers as valentines were shown, resulting in a big increase over last year's sales.

FLORIST PETUNIAS

Every florist having a design trade has felt the difficulty of getting suitable flowers for the work during hot weather, when roses and carnations are barely presentable. After years of selection we have found three varieties of Double Petunias, No. 1, Pure White; No. 2, Clear Shining Pink; No. 3, Pure Lavender, which have made us more money for the labor expended than anything we have ever handled. The flowers are large, 4¼ to 6 inches in diameter, and as a keeper during hot weather beats anything we have ever tried, while the enormous quantity of blooms they produce makes the cost practically nothing. We find indoor culture suits them best. Price, 2-inch pot plants, $1.50 per doz.; one dozen of each of the three varieties for $4.00.

WAYSIDE NOTES.

Chas. H. Kaulbach, of Haverhill, Mass., says he has been up and down the ladder many times during his life, but even more of late. He keeps his stock of design boxes in a loft, conveniently arranged over the workroom, and the rush of funeral work has been the cause of so many extra trips.

"Let me introduce you to Bon Ami," was the welcome of E. J. Buxton, at Nashua, N. H. I do not remember looking at a finer lot of carnations than what can be seen here—thrifty stock, picked rather closely for the second crop of cuttings in the sand bed. There is a fine batch ready to fill early orders. Granite State is sidetracked for this season, but is strongly in evidence and will be a power among whites when introduced next year. Those who are not satisfied with White Perfection or desire a better—and we are all looking for the best—should plant Bon Ami.

Charles Simpkins, superintendent of Mrs. J. C. Rogers' fine estate at Peabody, Mass., takes particular pride in a specimen of Acacia longifolia, now in full bloom. He annually sends a sprig to many fellow craftsmen at this season.

John M. Ward & Co., of Peabody, plant cyclamens from seed flats onto a bench and find this answers admirably where a large number are grown. Their lilies are the envy of many other growers; a more even lot would be hard to find.

W. T. Walke, at Salem, Mass., reports an excellent plant season. At the time of my visit he was gunning for bear. His foreman was staging ramblers and Lilium giganteum that looked promising for Easter.

L. C. Midgley, of the Worcester Conservatories, Worcester, Mass., proposes many changes in this large plant, which could be appropriately termed Roseville, from the splendid roses grown, or Carnation Heights, from the healthy stock grown on a hillside. Commencing at the foot of the hill and looking either to the right or left, one's eyes rest upon a succession of up-to-date houses, filled with forcing stock of all kinds. Mr. Midgley modestly admits he was not always a florist, but good growers, like poets, are often born and not made.

G. H. Sinclair, of Holyoke, Mass., contemplates offering a prize in gold to the successful namer of his new seedling carnation, which is conceded by all who have seen it to be a grand commercial variety. Owing to the field being well supplied, though there is always room for a good carnation, he has decided not to place it on the market this season.

H. W. Field, at Northampton, Mass., never had a beter season, and he has some large orders booked for Easter. His stock looks fine.

Joseph Beach, at South Hadley Falls, Mass., has no kick coming. He says that now and then he gets lonesome, but picks up the Review and his spirits revive again. M.

Columbia City, Ind.—D. C. Noble has closed a deal whereby he purchased of Lancaster & Simpson the greenhouses formerly owned by Mr. Noble and sold by him last August to Messrs. Lancaster and Simpson, who came here from East Liverpool, O., to take charge.

Headquarters for Easter Plants

Prepare for Easter!

From whom will we purchase our Easter supply?

THE BEST EVER.

Better than ever are the plants whose gleaming
Blossoms and leaves shine bright in Aschmann's store, Flowers of the kind of which we are always dreaming,
More nearly perfect than all grown before;
Lilies with whiter sheen, azaleas richly tinted,
Ferns with their lacy fronds like bridal veils.
The araucarias' branches fruit with dollars, minted
For florists' use after the Easter trade.

This seems now to be the daily talk of every florist. "I know what I am going to do," a wise man remarked the other day. "I have been so often deceived I will be no more, but I shall send in my order direct to our friend Godfrey Aschmann. He shall be my man this Easter. He has everything full and plenty and what he advertises is no BLUFF. We can always depend on him to get what we need, and cheap, too. As much as we know, he goes himself to Europe and selects in Belgium the cream of Azaleas, Palms and Araucarias. He does all that for the sake of his customers, to please them."

An immense stock of choice Easter plants, blooming Easter week, or earlier, if desired, are now ready for immediate shipment. Come yourself or mail your order direct to headquarters.

Our reputation in growing Easter plants for the wholesale market, to which we ship all over the entire country, Canada and Mexico, from the Atlantic to the Pacific Oceans, for many years past, is sufficient guarantee to prove our ability.

Go to Headquarters for Azaleas

Azalea Indica is a specialty with us, grown for us under contract by an Azalea specialist in Belgium for the last twenty years. Have three houses full of the choicest. Only best well-known American varieties are imported, planted in the fall as soon as they arrive from Belgium into 6-in., 7 and 8-in. pots, placed in greenhouses and kept cool in the winter and are now in excellent condition, covered with buds, just right for Easter. Please bear in mind the fact (mostly unknown to some azalea consumers) that fully 30 per cent to 40 per cent of the newly imported azaleas in dormant state will lose their buds and leaves during sea voyage and during winter up to February 1, and have to be kept over for another year. We ship only good stock, full of buds and flowers, and, therefore, you can't expect an azalea at this time as big and as cheap as if you would buy them in dormant state in the fall.

What is the name of the best double pink azalea? Mme. Van der Cruyssen is the name, originated by the well-known azalea specialist Mr. Van der Cruyssen of Belgium. Millions are raised every year and shipped to every point of the globe from Belgium. We have a big stock on hand of this so well-known and favorite variety in tip-top condition. Every plant is as round as an apple, covered with buds, just right for Easter trade. All sizes in the following prices: 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each.

Azalea Indica

In large plants we have the following, full of buds: Bernard Andre Alba (pure white), Niobe (pure white) HeleneThelemann (rose, light pink), Memoire de L. Van Houtte, large flowers (double pink), Empress of India, large flowering (double variegated), Dr. Moore (double pink), Mme. Van der Cruyssen (best of all the pink), Apollo (red), De Schryveriana (double variegated), $1.50, $2.00, $2.50 and $3.00. In smaller sizes we have the following varieties, full of buds: Deutsche Perle (double white), Mme. Van der Cruyssen, Vervaeneana (double variegated), a well known standard variety, Apollo (red), Simon Mardner (double pink), De Schryveriana (double variegated), Empress of India (double variegated), Niobe (double white), all well budded. 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50. Professeur Wolters. $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. This is a well known, bright, variegated variety. When we are out of one color, we send the next similar color; also, if we are out of the size ordered, we send the next size either above or below the price mentioned.

Easter Lilies, Lilium Multiflorum, the genuine Japanese Easter Lily directly imported by us. We have a friend in Japan who looks after our interests there. He picks out for us only the good, healthy ones, and marks them while they are growing, the 10-in. bulbs, and therefore he ships to us the cream of the plants of Japan. We have lilies this year to burn; can supply, if nothing happens, every customer and others who want lilies. If you see them growing in our greenhouses you must all admit they are "crackerjacks." We sell them cheap too. Where other florists get 15c per bud, we only charge you 10c per bud, for plants in 6-in. pots, having 5, 8, 10 and more buds to the plant. Plants under 5 buds, 12c per bud, 6-in. pots.

The 9 to 10 Japanese lily bulbs were nearly a failure last fall, owing to the bad weather. While other florists and some dealers only received 20 to 30 per cent of their orders, we were one of the fortunate, receiving the full amount of our order (5000) from one grower in Japan. No joke when I tell you our lilies were never so nice and perfect as this year. Orders for lilies only positively will not be filled; if you want the lilies it will be necessary for your order to call for other stock also.

Tournesol Tulips, best double tulips, variegated, three bulbs in a pot, $1.80 per dozen pots; $14.00 per 100.

Begonia, new improved Erfordii, 5-in. pots, $2.50 per dozen. Flambeau, 5 in., $2.00 per dozen.

Primula Obconica, 5-in., $2.00 to $2.50 dozen.

Cineraria Hybrida, best plants, 5¼ to 6-in. pots, for Easter, at $2.00, $3.00, $4.00 to $5.00 per dozen.

Spiraea Gladstone. We have a house full in very fine condition, in bud now, just right for Easter, large plants, full of buds. Remember Gladstone is scarce this year, owing to the dry weather in Holland last year, but we were fortunate to have received enough to supply all of our customers; price, 6 to 7-in pots, 50c, 75c, $1.00.

Superba, Japonica, Floribunda, 6-in. pots, 25 to 50c.

Ipomoea Noctiflora, purest white moonflower, for which we have a world-wide reputation, now ready, 2½-in. pots, $5.00 per 100.

Hyacinths, four best colors. King of the Blues (dark blue), Grand Maitre (light blue), Gertrude (best pink), La Grandesse (best white), right for Easter, in cold frame, 4-in. pots, 10c to 12c.

Murillo Tulips, 3 bulbs in a 4-in. pot, $2.00 per dozen pots; all bulb stock is strictly our own importation, now in cold frame covered with litter and will bloom in three weeks after bringing them into the greenhouse.

Daffodil Von Sion, best double, three bulbs, $2.50 per dozen.

Areca Lutescens, 5-in. pots, 3 plants in a pot, 35c.

Ficus Elastica (rubbers), 5½ to 6-in. pots, 25c to 30c.

Awerpohlii, very fine, 6-in., 50c to 75c.

Wilsoni in pans, 35c.

Asparagus Sprengeri, big stock, 3-in., 7c; 4-in., 10c.

Asparagus Plumosus, large, 2½-in., 3c; 3-in. pots, $5.00 per 100; 4-in., 10c.

Kentia Belmoreana, 3 in., 10c; 4-in., 20c.

Kentia Forsteriana, 6 to 7-in. pots, 40 to 45 inches high, 75c, $1.00 $1.25 $1.50 $2.00 to $3.00 each; 4-in., 20c; 5¼ to 5½-in. pots, 20 to 25 in. high, 50c to 60c.

Cocos Weddelliana, 3-in., 15c.

Nephrolepis Todeaoides and Whitmani, 5½ to 6 in. pots, 35c, 40c, 50c 75c to $1.00.

Ferns for dishes, 2½ in., $5.00 per 100.

Hydrangea Otaksa, pot-grown, 6 to 7-in., 35c 50c, 75c, $1.00 to $1.50, full of buds, in fine condition for Easter.

All goods must travel at purchaser's risk. Cash with order, please.

Please state if you want stock shipped in or out of pots.

All bulbs are now under cover in cold frame and will bloom in two weeks from the time of bringing them in the greenhouse.

SWEET PEAS NOT FLOWERING.

Can you tell me the reason why my sweet peas are not blooming, as I planted them September 15? They are the new varieties called the orchid-flowered sweet peas. I have the following kinds: Countess Spencer, pink; Frank Dolby, lavender; and White Spencer. I planted three or four peas in a hill and they are doing finely, as they are from three to four feet high and have as high as ten runners to a plant, but have no buds. A. L. H.

You made a mistake in planting the varieties you name for winter flowering. They will bloom all right, but you may have to wait some time for them yet. For sowing from January onwards, such sorts as Frank Dolby and the Spencers are all right, but they simply will not flower in winter, when you want them. Had you sown such varieties as Christmas Pink, Snowbird, Mont Blanc, Watchung, or any of the winter flowering sorts, they would now have been giving you plenty of cut flowers. These latter varieties commence to bloom when quite short, and if you will sow them next season at the date named they will give you flowers for Christmas. C. W.

DISCOLORED PLUMOSUS.

I enclose a piece of Asparagus plumosus. What is the matter with it? It seems to have a yellowish color and begins to drop off early in its growth. Are fishworms in the soil injurious and should plumosus be sprayed every morning? M. & J.

Judging from the appearance of the sample foliage received, the soil in which it is growing is probably in a sour condition. This asparagus must have efficient drainage, lacking which the plants will undoubtedly take on a sickly hue and the foliage drop, as yours is doing. You can easily clean out the earthworms by soaking the bed with lime water. Slake one or two pieces of stone lime, add water to the required amount and, after the water has cleared, apply it. Drainage in a poor condition would soon cause the soil to become wormy.

This is not the time to replant asparagus, but I would advise you to lift the plants in May or June and make up a new bed of sod, decayed cow manure and leaves. If you want this to continue bearing a number of years, make the soil eighteen to twenty-four inches deep and place six inches of drainage at the bottom. There is no need to spray plumosus daily. Unlike smilax, it is not subject to the same injury from thrips and spider. C. W.

The Market.

Last week, with its bright days and cold nights, was an ideal one for growing, and in consequence the receipts were increased a great deal over the week previous. Especially was this the case with roses, bulbous stock and the various types of lilies. Of late these have been just about equal to demand. In spite of the heavy receipts all the week, business was brisk enough the latter part of the week to make a good average and keep everyone contented. Violets, which are extensively used on Valentine's day, did not fare as well as usual this season, especially those that came on Monday. On Saturday all violets were cleaned up by shipping orders, but the local buyers, who buy as they need, did not have the heavy call anticipated; hence there were some left over. Quite a few red carnations were also sold for the occasion.

Various Notes.

The Olympia is the name under which Peter Nohos and Louis Mannas will open a flower and candy store combined, in the new building at Twelfth and Walnut streets, February 19. Mr. Nohos has been with James Chacona for some years and is well acquainted with the boys, while Mr. Mannas has conducted a flower stand in the lobby of the Merrill building. He is no new-comer.

The name of Edwin J. Gregory should have been included in the list of new members who joined the Florists' Club, February 3.

Among the visitors last week were: B. Eschner, with M. Rice & Co., of Philadelphia, and William Nero, of Cedarburg, Wis. E. O.

ELMIRA, N. Y.—Robert King, the genial foreman at the United States Cut Flower Co.'s up-to-date plant, is a firm believer in solid beds for roses, with tile drainage. He has both styles, and is able to make good comparisons. His own-root stock looks fine. A propagating house 300 feet long, filled with healthy cuttings, is a sight for sore eyes. O. P. Bassett is highly thought of here as the scarlet carnation, and it will undoubtedly improve next season.

Greenhouse Heating.

A STRIKE of coal miners in the bituminous district of Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and West Virginia is threatened April 1, as the result of the present disagreement between the miners and operators over wage schedules. In anticipation of a strike, the railroads are said to be storing large quantities of fuel, and it is suggested as good policy for every florist to see that his bins are full.

TWO KENTUCKY HOUSES.

Would you please advise me on the piping for a hot water system in two houses, running east and west, each 21x100 feet, five feet to the eaves and eleven feet to the ridge? The houses are connected and the three walls have each thirty-two inches of glass. One house is for roses and carnations and the other for a general line of flowers for the retail trade. The boiler house will be midway of the length of the greenhouses.

M. K.

To heat a house 21x100 feet, with thirty-two inches of glass in one wall, to 60 degrees, which will be required for roses, it will be advisable to put in about 1,000 square feet of radiation. To carry this, it will be necessary to have three 2½-inch flows, one of which should be upon each side wall and the other below the ridge. The remainder of the radiation can be made up of twelve 2-inch returns, of which four can be connected with each flow pipe.

In the carnation house a similar installation could be employed, but it will only be necessary to use nine 2-inch returns, in addition to the three 2½-inch flow pipes.

If more convenient, 3-inch flow and return connections can be made with the boiler from each house, and from the highest part of the flow pipe, which should be immediately above the boiler, a smaller pipe can be carried up higher and connected with the expansion tank. After taking off the 2½-inch flow pipes, they should be carried to the farther end of the house, at a slight fall, where they can be connected with the return coils.

POOR CIRCULATION.

I should like to have your opinion about my heating system, which gives poor circulation. I have three greenhouses. Two of them, each 16x100, run north and south and are used for carnations. Each of these contains two 2-inch flows and eight 2-inch returns. Adjoining the northeast corner of the carnation houses, and running east and west, is a house that is used for mums and sweet peas. This house is 14x100 and contains two 4-inch flows and two 4-inch returns; that is, a flow and return on each side of the house, or four 4-inch pipes in all.

There are two boilers, both at the north end of the carnation houses. One of them is a Weathered No. 5; the other is a Gold's 8-section boiler, made by H. B. Smith and containing a grate 18x36. Can you tell me what is the cause of my trouble? I am located in northeastern New Jersey.

H. J. H.

The four 4-inch pipes in the mum house are hardly sufficient to maintain the temperature needed, especially if there is any glass in the side walls or if there is much wall exposed. Since the circulation may be greatly modified by the height and grading of the pipes, it is probable that the trouble is partly due to something of that kind, although there is nothing in H. J. H.'s description by which it is possible to tell where to look for the difficulty.

As each of the carnation houses contains two 2-inch flows and eight 2-inch returns, each 2-inch flow has to carry nearly 300 square feet of radiation. Better results could be secured by using 2½-inch pipes for the flows. The radiation itself is ample.

REBUILDING TWO HOUSES.

We have two houses, 26x100, three-quarter span and joined at the short span. They are located in Ohio and are heated by hot water. The piping consists of 3-inch feeds and 2-inch returns. The outside wall of the houses is of concrete blocks. Now, we want to move these houses to another location. We want to use the long rafters, which are thirteen feet ten inches long, for a rose house, and the short rafters, which are nine feet nine inches long, for a carnation house. We also want to add twenty-five feet to each house. Would it be better to join the houses together or have them separate? We also want to have glass in the sides. Would the same pipes be used for steam? The houses are new and of the best material.

What would be the best plan for building the rose house? Would the houses be just as light if joined with high gutters as they would be if separate? How high would the gutters have to be? Please give us some information for rebuilding these houses in the best and cheapest way.

R. B. & C.

Both of the methods suggested for arranging the houses have their advantages and disadvantages, but, as it will be rather more convenient to have them built side by side, that plan will generally be preferred. If the gutters are about six feet high and supported by 2-inch gas pipes, the cost for the middle wall would be very slight. The outer walls can be built of boards and matched siding, with paper between, up to the height of three feet, above which a row of sashes containing 30-inch glass should be placed. If the sashbars are given a pitch of about 30 degrees, it will be found satisfactory.

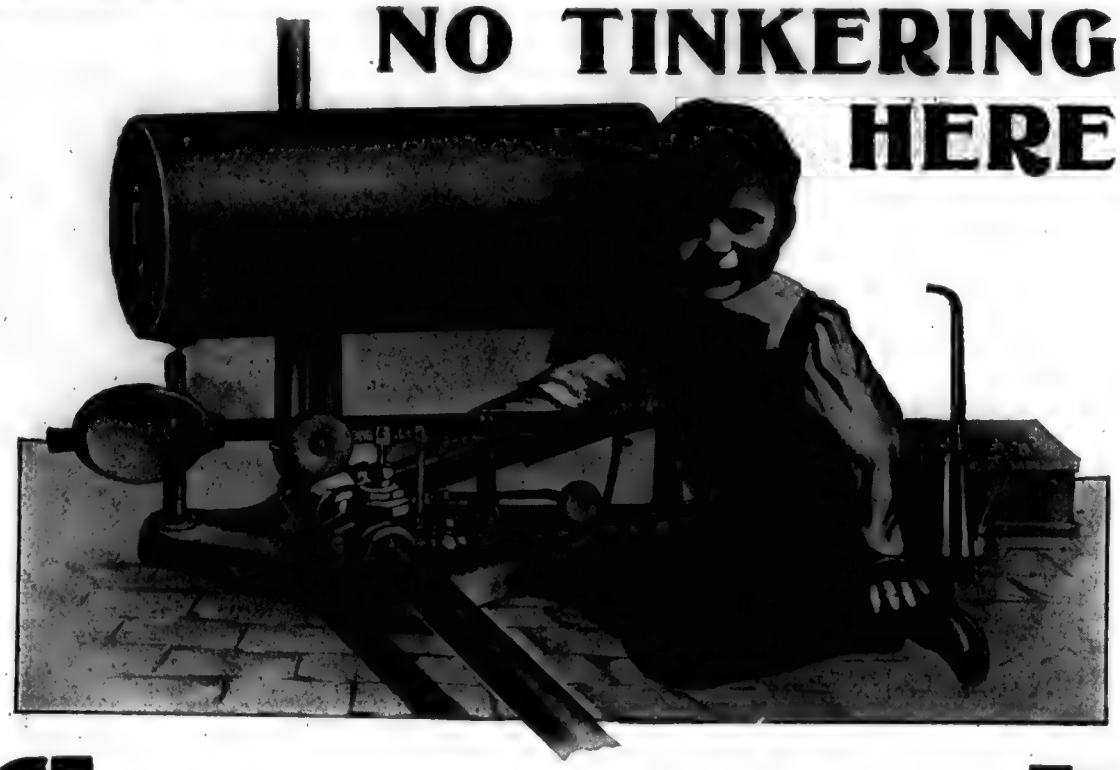
GLASS BROKEN BY FROST.

I am just now much interested in greenhouse construction and heating. An article in the Heating columns of the REVIEW of December 30, telling where the expansion tank should be placed, explained one of my troubles.



How wide should I make a house with sashbars sixteen feet long? I want to include as much ground room as possible and yet I want the roof steep enough. Last year I had over a dozen panes of glass broken in one house by the frost. The moisture collected in the lap of the glass. When the sun went down, there was a sound like that of firecrackers in every part of the house, and before I could boost the fire sufficiently to counterbalance the withdrawal of the sun's heat a dozen panes of glass were broken. I felt certain that a steeper roof would have been better. B. M. E.

Houses with rafters sixteen feet long are built anywhere from twenty-six to twenty-eight feet in width. A house with a roof at an angle of 30 degrees answers well and it is seldom advisable to make the angle more than 35 degrees.

It is not likely that the slope of the roof had much to do with the breaking of the glass, as the amount of water that will collect between the panes will be about the same at a roof slope of 45 degrees as at one of 25 degrees. Provided the house has wooden sash bars and the glass does not fit so tightly between the bars as to bind, the trouble is most likely caused by too wide laps of the glass. When this does not exceed three-sixteenths of an inch, there will be no trouble from the cracking of the glass by the ice which forms between the edges of the panes. There is no occasion for having the laps wider than this and even one-eighth of an inch will answer if the glass is carefully laid.

PITTSFIELD, MASS. — R. Engelman, whose range formerly contained 13,000 square feet of glass, is now adding three more houses—one, 30x150, for carnations; one, 15x65, for violets, and one, 16x60, for roses.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The cut flower business among the retailers last week was good, considering that Lent is now upon us. There was hardly any social work going on, but from the sales at the wholesale houses to the retailers, business must have been good all over the city. The west end florists say they did well with blooming plants and cut flowers. Monday, February 14, the trade was buying heavily in violets for St. Valentine orders, and it is estimated that over 200,000 California violets were received at the four wholesale houses. The bulk of them, from Kirkwood, averaged $3 per thousand.

Roses are coming in more freely and before another week they will again be plentiful in all varieties. Carnations are a glut and a great many went to waste last week, as the demand is not strong enough to dispose of all that come in, even at cheap prices. All bulbous stock is in plenty, especially callas and Paper Whites. Other stock cleaned up fairly well all week. In greens everything the trade needs can be had.

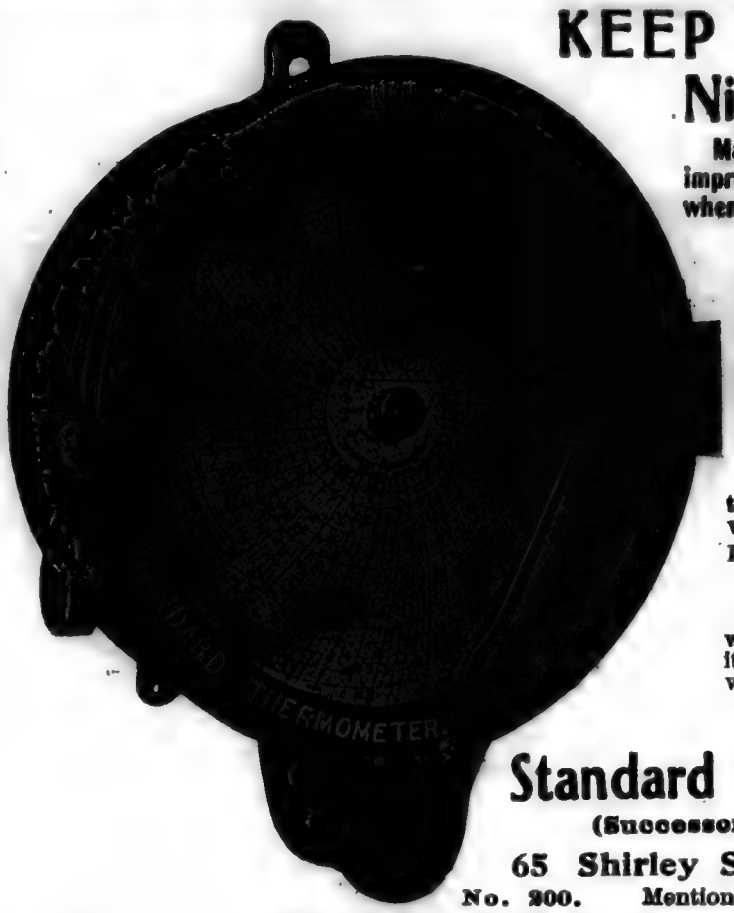
Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club held its regular monthly meeting Thursday afternoon, February 10, at 2 o'clock, with twenty-five members in attendance and President George B. Windler in the chair. The subject of C. De Wever's paper, on "Advertising Through the Florists' Club," was reported on, which afforded a great discussion by A. S. Halstead, Mr. Young, E. W. Guy, J. F. Ammann, Mr. Sanders and P. J. Fillmore. On motion, three more were added to the committee, Messrs. Young, Guy and Smith, to report at the March meeting, when the matter will have its final hearing and be disposed of. Henry Wentzel and Charles D. Hecht, growers in St. Louis county, were elected to membership. J. A. Peterson, of Cincinnati, O., sent a plant of his new begonia, Gloire de Cincinnati, for exhibition, which was much admired. The chairman appointed a committee to pass on it. They reported that the new begonia, Gloire de Cincinnati, is a grand variety and a great improvement on existing varieties of the same type. They also voted it a certificate of merit from the club. The committee consisted of F. J. Fillmore, C. Bergstermann and G. W. Grossart. E. W. Guy and Fred Ammann extended the members an invitation to attend the annual convention of the Illinois Florists' Association, February 15 and 16, at Champaign-Urbana, Ill., and a number of those present accepted. W. C. Smith gave an interesting talk on "The Troubles of a Wholesaler," and many interesting features were discussed, which greatly interested the growers and retailers. The suburban members present at the meeting were: Fred Ammann, E. W. Guy, G. W. Grossart, A. S. Halstead, Edwin Denker, F. Vennemann, John Connon, H. Wentzel, Ad. Ahner, W. A. Rowe and C. De Wever. These members take great interest in the club meetings and are regular attendants. If our city members would only do the same, what grand meetings the club could hold each month!

The next meeting of the club will take place March 10. A special program is being arranged by the president for this meeting.

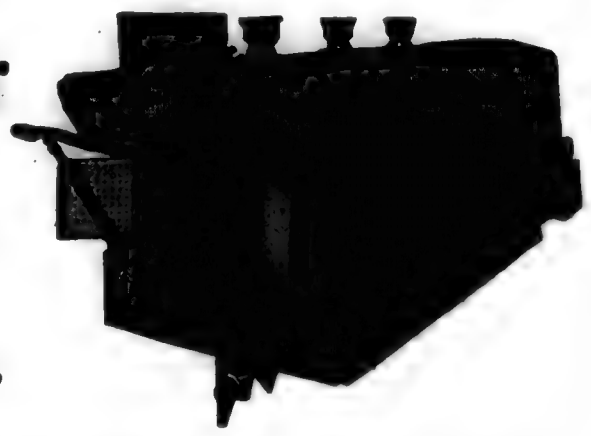
Various Notes.

E. H. Riehl, of Alton, Ill., called on the trade last week and attended the Florists' Club meeting Thursday afternoon.



James J. Karins, representing H. Dreer, Philadelphia, and B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia, were callers on the trade last week. Both gentlemen reported splendid business, before leaving for other fields.

Prof. William Trelease, director of the Missouri Botanical Garden, has been placed on the committee of six to arrange a plan of work to beautify St. Louis and try to make St. Louis the Paris of America.



Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Leach, of Taylorville, Ill., spent a few days calling on friends in the trade. They also visited the wholesale district to purchase supplies.

The park department will order between 50,000 and 100,000 California privet plants from various nurseries this year, as the blizzard which struck this city early in January and covered the branches with a coating of ice had ruinous effect on trees, shrubbery and particularly California privets. Many beautiful hedges in the fine residence district have been killed. Close to a million privet plants will be used this year.

Rufus J. Lackland, for the last twenty years president of the board of trustees of the Missouri Botanical Garden, has resigned his office and membership on the board. Mr. Lackland is 90 years old and was a personal friend of the late Henry Shaw. In his resignation Mr. Lackland stated that the infirmities

William Bouche, the landscape gardener, has prepared plans for landscape work around the Crematorium Society on Sublett avenue, with a number of sunken gardens. The plans are on the order of the famous crematory gardens in Hamburg, Germany. The plans have been accepted by the board of directors at a cost of $5,000. The work will begin this spring.

Mrs. M. M. Ayers has installed a new lighting system at her Grand Avenue store, which adds greatly to the attractiveness of her fine display of cut stock and plants in the show windows.

The St. Louis Seed Co. has issued a neat catalogue for its patrons, called "Home Garden Necessities."

R. J. Windler, on South Grand avenue, has a pretty window of blooming spring plants, especially fine pot tulips. Mr. Windler is also handling cut orchids regularly.

Frank Gorly, of Grimm & Gorly, is now buyer for that firm in the wholesale district. John Barnard, who is sick and unable to attend to business, will probably resign his position and go west for his health.

The Engelmann Botanical Club held its regular monthly meeting Monday night, February 14, in the botanical laboratory in the Central High School building. E. G. Arzberger, of the Shaw School of Botany, read a paper on "Root Tubercles on a Few Plants and Some Facts Regarding the Fungus Which Causes Them." The publication of a preliminary check list on local flora will be started without delay. H. P. Chandler presided over the meeting, which was well attended. L. P. TEWKSBURY, MASS.

Patten & Co., carnation growers, always have something good to show visitors, their establishment being extremely well kept and everything thoroughly up-to-date. Beacon is favored as a scarlet, and looked extremely well. Winsor and Winona were each a mass of flowers and buds, while Melody carried a big crop. Quite a few Viola Sinclair are grown. In variegated there are a few Bay State, but Variegated Lawson is the variety mostly depended upon. Sara Nicholson, raised here, proves prolific and is preferred to Fenn, which showed a bursting tendency. Hattie Starrett, another of Mr. Patten's seedlings, is a pleasing yellow variegated variety. In whites a few Genevieve are grown. It has a fancy flower, but is not considered sufficiently prolific. Two or three benches are filled with Shasta, a charming, heavily fringed, pure white flower, produced in great profusion. White Perfection and some White Enchantress are also grown. May Day is well liked and looks like one of the coming varieties. Pink Delight is also favored, most of the stock being cut back for propagating purposes. A bench of Cypripedium insigne carried a wealth of flowers. Another, planted with Freesia Purity, also carried a fine lot of spikes. Some of the new Asparagus Crawshawi is grown in beds. It is distinct from plumosus nanus. Bedding geraniums are grown in considerable numbers, and were being potted at the time of our visit.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Trade has been unusually brisk during the last week, owing to an abnormal amount of funeral work. Store men report business as most satisfactory, so far this month, with numerous social affairs and a brisk counter trade. Shipping trade has been excellent and the recent shipments show that stock is not overabundant anywhere in the middle west. As W. Murphy says, "We ship farther this winter than ever before, our orders regularly going to Atlanta, Ga., and as far as Texas."

Roses are still scarce, with prices ranging the same as last week, and there is no prospect of a break until stock arrives in greater quantity. Carnations hold up in prices, at from $2 to $4.

St. Valentine's day was a particularly busy one, with a brisk demand for colored carnations and violets; in fact, more could have been disposed of. Bulbous stock, such as tulips, daffodils and narcissi, are getting more plentiful, with prices averaging $3. Good freesias fetch $4; violets, 50 cents; sweet peas, 50 cents to 75 cents; lily of the valley, $3 to $4, and Harrisii and callas $10 per hundred.

Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri meet with a steady demand and are in short supply. Smilax and other greens are more plentiful.

Various Notes.

The Cincinnati Florists' Society held its regular monthly meeting February 12, but it was poorly attended, owing no doubt to the disagreeable weather. Only routine business was transacted.

Use Chambers' Flat Head Carnation Pins

This is absolutely the only mender that will pass split flowers through commission houses as first-class flowers.

"Everything I have mended with your device without a single exception have been classed and sold for No. 1 flowers." G. L. VANBIPER.

Another grower says: "Am sure I have made from $8.00 to $10.00 on every box of your pins I have used in mending my split carnations. never had any split flowers marked as 'seconds' in my returns since using them. There is nothing in the running gear of my place that has established a firmer footing than the Chambers Pin, and nothing that makes me more money."

Every grower of from 1000 to 100,000 plants needs to get for his flowers all there is in it to make his business pay. This mender is well indorsed by all the commission houses in Philadelphia, the heads of whom I have seen personally, and they have all urged me to do all I can to get all the growers to use them. Use the Chambers Flat Head Pin.

THE MASTIN AUTOMATIC WHITEWASH AND SPRAYING MACHINE IS RELIABLE, PRACTICAL AND DURABLE

The tank is made of galvanized sheet steel, and in brass.
The pump is of brass throughout, simple and powerful.
The mixing device keeps the contents of the tank well stirred up from start to finish.
When the machine is filled to within six inches of the top, a few strokes of the pump will compress enough air in the tank to produce a continuous mist-like spray for 15 minutes.
All parts are made to gauge and may be had for repairs.
Ask your dealer about our Extension Hose, Extension Rods, and the Mastin Whitewash Nozzle for Bordeaux mixture.

Sold through seedsmen, dealers in florists' and poultry supplies.

The Market.

Trade is still heavy, with stock scarce. Roses are rather off crop and there are not near enough to go around. They are rather soft, as weather conditions here have been somewhat unfavorable for cut stock. We have few bright days and this has a tendency to cut all stock short. Carnations are faring better than roses and are in rather good supply, but the demand is so heavy on them that they are cleaned up from day to day. The demand for bulbous stock has been quite heavy, owing to the shortage in other lines. Tulips are coming much better, with longer stems, and find ready sales. Jonquils, narcissi, freesias and valley are also coming in heavily and find a ready sale. Blooming plants are moving nicely. Azaleas, cyclamen and primroses are the mainstay at present. A few pans of tulips, etc., are making their appearance and it reminds us that we are not far from the spring rush.

Trade for Valentine's day was extra heavy, and it is getting to be a second Easter in the way of flowers. This shows how close flowers are clinging to the day of hearts and there is nothing more appropriate for this day than hearts and flowers. Violets were in great demand, as well as a general line of cut stock and, as usual, carnations came in for their usual heavy demand.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club did away with its regular meeting Tuesday night, February 8, and entered into an evening of entertainment in the way of music and song and then they enjoyed a nice banquet. After that was disposed of they enjoyed an hour or so in dancing and all went home feeling well repaid for the time spent. It is hoped the club will see fit to repeat the good time in the near future. There were about fifty people present. J. M.

CHAMPAIGN, ILL.—Thomas Franks & Son are building an addition to their greenhouses on South Goodwin avenue. It is said that this addition, which will contain 4,500 square feet, will be used for the culture of two new varieties of roses.

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

Trade was brisk last week and stock is good, though there is still a shortage on roses, especially white roses. The market is flooded with bulbous stock, which is all good. There is a fine prospect for Easter if the sunny weather continues, and a trip through the greenhouses is a satisfying sight to the prospective buyer.

Various Notes.

The florists' second annual ball, held at the Arc Lodge auditorium February 7, was a decided success from a social and financial standpoint. Everyone was there with his wife or sweetheart, and, with good music, an excellent floor and good spirits, an enjoyable evening was spent.

The Minneapolis Floral Co. is cutting some fine double and single daffodils, also some good Harrisii. The greenhouses are laden with fine plants for Easter and stock in general is excellent.

O. H. Carlson is cutting some fancy Richmond and Killarney at present and had a fine lot of Princess of Wales violets for Valentine's day. M. E. M.

LETHBRIDGE, CAN.—J. E. Terrill, formerly connected with Alfred M. Terrill & Co., of Calgary, has organized a business here, which is conducted under the name of the Terrill Floral Co. and is located at the corner of Ashmead and Dufferin streets.

NEWTONVILLE, MASS.—Frank Amidon's property at 41 Brooks avenue, valued at $7,000 and consisting of a residence, several greenhouses and 6,500 square feet of land, has been sold to Clementine Webster, of Lyndonville, Vt. The florists' business of Mr. Amidon will be carried on by F. Y. Orcutt.

WILKES-BARRE, PA.—G. Baumann, whose greenhouses and stock, on South Grant street, were damaged a year or two ago by some slate roofing which was blown from a neighboring building, sued the owner of the building for the amount of the loss and the case was not called in court until February 3. It is stated that the building in question was so negligently constructed as to make its owner responsible for the disaster. The case attracted much attention.

WISE WORDS

The above picture shows one of the greenhouses of the University of Illinois, furnished by the Foley Manufacturing Co., Chicago, about which greenhouse Professor Craig, of Cornell University, the great Agricultural College in the east, made the statement on the occasion of his visit to the University of Illinois, on an inspection tour of the greenhouses: "You certainly got more for your money than we got when we built our greenhouses," and what the learned professor says, the wise florist and vegetable grower have been saying for years.

If you want full value for your dollars, see FOLEY who has for sale everything necessary to build greenhouses.

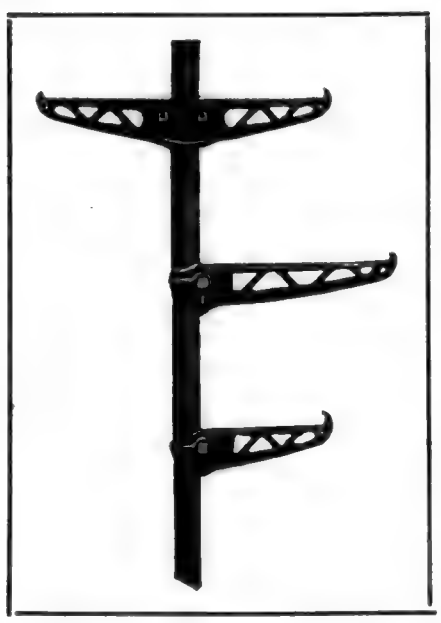
THE GREAT ERECTION SPEED OF OUR IRON FRAME HOUSE AS PROVEN BY ALWYN HARVEY & SONS

THE house is 43 feet wide and 250 feet long. Two days after the posts were set the entire frame was up and they were putting on the bars. This is what was accomplished by their own men, unskilled in the work.

In the last year our factory has made many important improvements on the iron frame work, adding much to its strength and greatly increasing its erection speed.

The Superintendent of Erection has invented a rapid method of scaffolding, that our men use when putting up a house and painting it, which is another decided step forward.



Our Sectional Iron Frame House is now a better house than ever, and easier to erect.

There is a tremendous advantage in buying a house, the materials for which are all cut, drilled and fitted at our factory and not on the job.

There are no series of delays, waiting for holes to be drilled or cutting and fitting to be done; everything goes together like clock work. When done you have the strongest, safest, lightest house built, a house with sufficient roof column supports to stand wind and storm. This is the kind of house you want. Write us.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

TRIALS OF A COUNTRY FLORIST.

I was just reading the item "Trials of a Country Florist" in the REVIEW of February 16, in which A. E. N. tells of selling only sixty carnations at a nickel apiece as a result of considerable effort, and of the numerous calls for two-dollar designs. I wonder if there are any of us country florists who have not been up against the same kind of experiences many a time.

I have been a country town florist for the last thirteen years and I want to tell you, A. E. N., that you are probably a long way farther up the ladder than you think. The fact that you sold but sixty carnations at a reduced price after advertising them does not signify either a success or failure. It simply shows that you did not strike the trade from the right angle. The next time you want to start something out of the ordinary, try it in a different way. For instance, next Carnation day, don't offer "an unlimited supply of carnations" at a reduced price. You have found out that does not seem to appeal to them. Advertise through your local papers (I am a firm believer in this method of advertising) that owing to the enormous demand for carnations on that day, it would be well for those desiring them to place their orders at their earliest convenience.

I have gone through about all the ups and downs that a florist in a small way could, and have worked 2,200 feet of miserably constructed glass up to 28,000 feet built as it should be, and increased a capital of $500 to better than $30,000, and did it on the ashes of two men's failures, so I think that anything I suggest may be considered as practical and not theoretical advice.

One thing you want to remember is this: Don't take things to heart, but look at the sunny side. Sell them two-dollar wreaths if they demand them, and do it as though you liked to. Suggest politely that they could get something very much nicer for just a little more money and tell them why. They may take the two-dollar one, but they will think it over and perhaps next time they will pay $3. When they do get up, it's your place to keep them there. We make lots of two-dollar wreaths during the spring, summer and fall months, and find it profitable and we put good stock in them, too. We make crosses and anchors at that price, too. We did refuse to make a gates ajar for $3 once, as we get $10 for the smallest, but we got the $3 and pleased the customer. We sell plenty of larger designs, of course, but we find that it is impossible to get the prices here that can be charged in a large city.

We sell carnations at 75 cents and $1 a dozen at holiday seasons when they are selling for double that in the city forty miles away.

Perhaps that looks foolish to the city florist, but lots of fellows are acting foolish for less compensation than we get. Not that I am a believer in cheap flowers, or low prices. Not a bit of it! I get all I can, but I do not try to get any more.

We sell mums for $3 a dozen that we could not buy for that price, wholesale, and we make money on them because we sell all we can produce and everybody is satisfied. We sell a bunch of twenty-five good, fresh violets for a quarter. That's too cheap, you say. Sure, it is. They are worth more. We know it. We ought to get half a dollar. Well, let's see: Out of a hundred bunches picked we sell a hundred, and that's $25. At a half we would not sell a third of them. Not theory, just fact from experience. The customer who can afford to spend a quarter may not feel like depositing a half in your till, and who is the loser?

Go ahead and sell them two-dollar wreaths, A. E. N., if you can't get any more, and remember that you can buy more coal with the $2 that you get than with the $5 that you don't get.

C. H. G.

LACONIA, N. H.—LeRoy Thomas says that this town has been having a boom in the flower business and that trade is double what it was a year ago.

CEMETERY DELIVERIES.

In a recent REVIEW I noticed a man asking about cemetery deliveries, etc. We usually have a good deal of planting to do on lots, or deliveries to make, so I obtained access to the cemetery records and traced a copy of the general plan of all the plots, and also one of each section, with private lots numbered. I have these pasted in a large book. I also copied the names of the lot-owners, with section and lot numbers, and we now have no difficulty in finding a desired lot. EDWARD BELL.

WHAT WOULD YOU DO?

What would you do if a man entered your place with a box of flowers, bought somewhere else, and asked you to make up said flowers into a funeral piece? I had an experience of this kind a short time ago, and my refusal caused a storm of indignation in some quarters.

J. A. R.

One florist thinks that in such a case it possibly might be the best plan to tell the party that he should apply to the one who sold the flowers to get them made up, but that if this cannot be done the flowers will be made up at the same charge as would be made for the design if the maker-up supplied the stock. Hotels and restaurants regularly are required to cook and serve food supplied by guests, such as fish, game or eggs, and they always charge for serving the price of similar articles on the bill of fare.

THE CREDIT SYSTEM.

Monthly Collections.

We notice in the REVIEW of February 10, page 7, what D. B. says regarding "The Credit System." This is a delicate subject, especially for the retail florist. The more business he does, the more bad bills he will get on his books, do what he may to avoid them. At the same time, it is well to be independent in dealing with those who are slow to pay or who never pay. However, what will do in one locality will not always do in another.

We adopted a system, when we began business ten years ago, of making a personal collection of all unpaid bills on the first day of each month. While we did not always get every dollar due us, we usually got the largest part of it. In this way, too, we became personally acquainted with our customers. They also learned to look for us and have the money ready. Our experience also taught us the important lesson that some of our customers, especially those who paid most promptly, bought more flowers under this system than if they had been obliged to come to the greenhouses and pay the cash.

Of course, we realize that it is not always easy for a florist to leave his growing crops and go out for a whole day, but if he can possibly make arrangements to do so, he will be more than repaid in ten years' time, not only in dollars and cents, but in health and disposition. C. P. HAYWARD.

From the Wholesale Viewpoint.

"In the REVIEW of February 10 a subscriber ventured the opinion that the trade's credit system is 'rotten,' and asked to hear from others on the subject. I fully agree that the system would stand a great deal of improvement," said a wholesale florist. "The correspondent was talking about the retail line only, but might just as well have included the wholesale end of the business. Some of the credits extended by wholesalers are not only ridiculous but work a positive harm to the trade at large. They foster the competition of irresponsible parties, whose activities make it more difficult for the solid, substantial people in the business to maintain themselves. For instance, only a few days ago a buyer came to us and wanted to know if we would not extend him the same credit others do. He showed a December statement from one wholesale house running a little over $2,200. We told him we would look him up, and this is what the commercial agency reported: The man stated to them that he had invested in fixtures in three different towns, a total of $450; in the savings bank, $600; making altogether $1,050. He said he was owing for flowers on monthly account, of $50, making his net worth $1,000. On this ridiculous statement this man is able to get in one house alone $2,200 credit, more than twice as much as he says he is worth. A further feature of the case is that this man is doing a strictly cash business in all three of his stores.

"In no other line of business would anything like this be considered. Other lines give sixty to ninety days' credit, but at the end of that time a good part of the stock, or similar stock, is on hand, and to get $2,200 credit would require at least several thousands of investment for fixtures.

"We feel that we have done our part individually to get the credit system on a business basis, but we find little encouragement. It seems to us that it would be to the interest of everyone to pay more attention to credits; let the wholesalers set an example for others, not only by being more conservative in extending credit, but by making closer collections and paying their own bills promptly."

PACKING FOR SHIPMENT.

Cuttings.

Good packing when shipping cuttings or young plants is just as essential as when shipping cut blooms. Your cuttings may be ever so good when you take them out of the sand, but if they do not reach your customers in good condition, why take the trouble and care to grow good stock?

A good way of packing cuttings in cold weather is as follows: Have your wrapping paper cut into sheets about 10x16. Lay a strip of damp sphagnum in the middle of the sheet, running halfway across from the side nearest you. Each sheet should hold twenty-five cuttings. Roll into a bundle and, when all the cuttings are turned in, fold in the lower end and continue rolling until the end of the sheet is reached, tying securely. The bundle should be rolled firmly, so as not to allow any sand which may have clung to the cuttings to injure the roots.

Line the boxes with several thicknesses of newspaper. Cover the bottom with either excelsior or dry sphagnum. In laying in the bundles begin at one end, laying the root end at the end of the box, and press them firmly, so as to keep them from shifting. Lay the roots of the following row on top of the first row and so on until you reach the end of the box, where, by reversing the bundles, you will be able to utilize the space in your box to better advantage.

When the order is packed and there is still a little space left, fill in with excelsior so as to make the contents firm. All boxes should be watched closely to see that they are packed tightly, for the express companies do not care whether they are plants or canned peaches.

Although the box is lined on the inside, it is necessary to wrap it again on the outside in case of severe weather.

The destination should be written on the box as well as on the tag, for sometimes the tag becomes mutilated before reaching your customer. Every firm should have a tag with name and address, also the instructions necessary in regard to perishable plants.

Young Plants.

When packing young plants, the same rule should be followed. Wrap each plant separately instead of several together, as this will prevent breakage and they can be packed to better advantage. If your shipment has to go only a short distance, use dry sphagnum, but if they are to be shipped several hundred miles and required to be in the box several days, then you had better use a little damp sphagnum, but be sure not to put it near the foliage.

The boxes may be lined the same as for the cuttings, and the plants may be packed the same way. Be sure to pack tightly. There should be no chance for the plants to shove together in case the box is stood on end, as is so often done. It is always better not to use too large a box, for a medium sized box will always carry through better. A good thing to do for proper handling is to put handles on the end, and then the expressmen have no occasion for rolling or dropping them.

Another good way to pack young plants is to place them upright in the bottom of the box. Line the box as before. Press the plants tightly together, and about every fifth row nail in a cleat to hold the plants firmly. Instead of nailing on a solid lid, nail on slats, so that the expressmen will be able to see that the box is not packed solidly. Be sure of handles. This is a good method for mild weather, for you cannot line the box except on the inside.

ROSES ON SOLID BEDS.

Can Bride, Bridesmaid and My Maryland roses be grown as profitably in a solid bed as on raised benches? How should the solid bed be made? For the benefit of the small grower who has to buy all of his soil, will you please state how much shredded cattle manure to the yard of soil should be used for rose growing?

A. H.

These roses, with the possible exception of My Maryland, can be grown with equal profit either on solid or table benches. My Maryland, however, has shown a tendency to go to rest in the solid benches.

Solid benches are built on many plans. The most popular ones are made with cement sides, one and one-half inches thick and from ten to twelve inches deep. The bottom of the bench is then filled with rubble to a depth of five inches; on top of that are placed two inches of finer material, such as cinders or gravel, and on top of this the compost.

The compost should consist of four parts of good fibrous loam, taken from the surface of old pasture land, and one part of decomposed cow manure. When this manure has been shredded it is likely to be more concentrated, and should be used more sparingly, or at the rate of one part of manure to five of soil.

A bench prepared in this way and judiciously fed by mulching, top-dressing and liquid feeding, will carry the plants profitably for years.

ROSE PLANTS FROM BENCHES.

In reference to roses from benches, or bench plants, how are they generally regarded by the trade? I notice that some of the best houses sell them, and yet they are often referred to as trash by writers in the trade papers. I cut back a lot of Killarney, My Maryland, Kaiserin and Richmond from benches, planted them in the field last season and had excellent results.

M. G.

Some varieties of roses, such as Kaiserin, Richmond and Killarney, when given proper treatment previous to removing from the bench, make good bedding roses in some localities. Proper treatment consists in preparing the plants by gradually withholding water for a week or two and running the house at a reduced temperature. Then they are pruned judiciously, planted in good, rich soil and given one good watering. Keep the surface always well stirred. To have the best success, these operations should be performed early in the season, in April or May.

Rose growers try to create a market for this class of stock, as it is like finding money when they can dispose of it; otherwise they have to throw it away. When referred to as trash, it may be because some parties have failed, by being late in planting, as this class of roses is usually offered for sale as late as July and August. RIBES.

CATTLEYA LABIATA.

Cattleya labiata has been illustrated on a number of previous occasions in the REVIEW. Originally introduced as far back as 1818, it had become scarce, until its re-introduction some twenty years ago in quantity, and it seems hard to imagine what a gap there would be were it now taken from us. It is so free flowering, so vigorous growing and of such comparatively easy growth that no one with a greenhouse need be afraid to essay its culture. Cases of newly imported plants are now offered at such low prices that they are within the reach of everyone. Several years ago we were told that C. labiata would be expensive in a short time, as supplies were being exhausted, but it was never offered cheaper or in larger quantities than in 1909 and the demand continues as great as ever.

One of the illustrations shows a nicely flowered plant of a good type, grown in a 7-inch pot. The other shows a distinct form flowered by A. H. Wingett, the well known superintendent for Charles Lanier, Lenox, Mass., a few months ago. The sepals and petals are pale in color; the lower two, behind the lip, hang down in such a manner as to suggest a single broad petal. These have heavy blotches of bright magenta on their interior parts, in the same way as C. Trianæ Backhousiana. This is one of the most interesting of the many forms of C. labiata I have seen. W. N. C.

ASTERS.

What time should asters be planted in a coldframe to get them in bloom in good season? We are 100 miles north of Boston, near the seashore. Which will give the best results, coldframe or hotbed culture? What is supposed to be the best of the long-stemmed, large flowering asters? I have always used Semple's Branching and bought my seedlings ready to set out. Usually about one-half are Semple's; the other half will give one good flower, and not first-class ones at that, and the rest will get smaller and shorter in stem, until the last are about the size of nickels. I do not know if it is the fault of the seed or the man who grows them for me.

What should be done to the ground, first-class hay ground, to get it in condition to grow seedlings, bulbs, etc., this year? It has never been plowed up. I would like to plant this year on it if possible, but did not have it in time to do anything to it last year. B. M. R.

For an early crop, sow aster seed in a hotbed early in March. Use such varieties as Queen of the Market and Hohenzollern. The first named is reliable. Later sowings can be made in a coldframe or outdoors as late as June. Good late varieties are Semple's, Vick's Branching and Giant Comet. Try the two first named for your trade. It will pay you to raise your own seedlings. Buy seed from a thoroughly reliable dealer; cheap seed is dear at any price. Provided that you have well-manured land, you should average twenty flowers per plant, although we have had as many as forty on Vick's Branching and Queen of the Market.

Your hay land should grow fine asters and bulbs. It would have been better plowed and left rough over winter, but I would recommend plowing as soon as frost leaves the ground. Then give a good coating of barnyard manure and harrow it in well. Later use a smoothing harrow and you will get it in good shape before planting-out time. Be sure to cultivate the ground constantly among asters and all other growing crops. Cultivation is far better than artificial watering. W. C.

THE GODFREY CALLA.

Through the REVIEW we would like to know all about the Godfrey calla. Is it better than the common calla? If so, in what way? Will it produce as much or more per square foot of bench room? How do the blooms compare as to size? When should it be planted and how? What size plants? What soil, light and heat does it want? Is it enough better than the old calla to discard the old for it? We would be pleased to have all the questions answered, and any other information regarding this calla. T. N.

Perhaps some REVIEW readers who have handled it can furnish the needed information.—Ed.

FERN FRONDS TURNING BROWN.

I am sending you leaves of my ferns. Can you tell me why the leaves turn brown? They commence at the roots and turn brown all the way down. The plants look healthy. I sometimes think perhaps I water them too much, but the soil is always dry on the top before I water plants. C. H.

Poor drainage, causing soil stagnation, dryness at the root, or a too arid atmosphere, are causes of the fronds dying in this manner. Sometimes, also, if they are much potbound, the same dying off will occur. You cannot prevent some of the older fronds from going off in this manner, but provided your drainage is good the plants can scarcely be overwatered. If much matted with roots, try the effects of some weak liquid manure, or some soot water to tone up the plants. Use this once a week. C. W.

MILLEPEDS IN FERN HOUSE.

I have lately been troubled with millepeds, or thousand-legged worms. They have a hard shell and are about one inch long. I wrote to the state zoölogist, but he could not tell me what to do with them. I sprayed the benches, both above and below, with nicotine solution, but that, of course, only killed them when it came in contact with them. I also used Slug Shot, but with no better result. The pests seem to harbor around the adiantum plants, which we grow on raised benches. I am now thinking of trying tobacco dust and salt. It is not practicable for us to use hydrocyanic acid gas. If you can suggest any remedy, I shall be greatly obliged. E. W.

The best remedy I have tried for millepeds is fumigation with Nico-fume paper, but whether the fumigation will be strong enough to injure the young fronds of the adiantums or not, is an open question. I have used this paper in a fern house in the proportion of twelve sheets of the paper to a house 20x100 feet, without injury to the plants, the house in question being filled with assorted small ferns. W. H. T.

THE SPORE CASES ON FERNS.

Enclosed you will find a frond of maidenhair fern. I notice little brown scales on the edges of the under side of each leaflet. Are these a species of brown scale, or are they little seeds? They are so uniform that they seem to be a natural growth rather than a disease. I got a lot of these ferns from Pennsylvania and am afraid to put them in my fern house until I know what is the matter. If this is a disease, will dipping the foliage in a weak solution of tobacco water once or twice get rid of it? To make this solution, I boiled the leaves of plug tobacco and then diluted the liquid.

I have seen this same scale on native ferns from the woods, but I notice that all the ferns I get from a certain old, reliable wholesale grower are free from it. The maidenhair ferns are in fine condition with the exception of this scale. S. F. C.

There is nothing the matter with the maidenhair frond in question, the brown spots or scales being only the sori, or spore cases. If S. F. C. will carefully lift one of these sori with the point of a knife and then place it under a magnifying glass, the spores or seeds may be readily seen, though those upon the specimen sent are not yet ripe. W. H. Taplin.

PROPAGATING.

It is a good plan to take advantage of the many nice runners now appearing on the double violets and root them in sandy loam, which we prefer to clear sand. Avoid propagating from any which have been affected by spot, or which are of a weakly appearance. Careful selection of stock materially improves violets, as, indeed, it does every other class of plants, and you can greatly improve your plants for another year by rejecting all but the most vigorous stock for propagating purposes. On the singles, runners are also now becoming more abundant. A great many growers wait until their plants are done blooming, then tear the plants to pieces for propagating purposes, and, truth to tell, we have found that this plan gives just as good results as where runners were carefully rooted in sand two months earlier.

MARIE LOUISE VIOLETS.

What is the trouble with our Marie Louise violets? We set them out in solid benches September 10 in a soil composed of the top of an old pasture, with about one-third well rotted cow and horse manure. In the center bed of the same house we grow sweet peas, which are doing well. The average night temperature is 48 degrees. The violets did well at first, but for the last month we have not been able to cut an average of over one bloom to twenty-five plants. The plants seem to be healthy and quite full of buds, but they do not mature. We keep the runners off. We have not fed them, because the plants do not seem to need it, nor are they bothered with insects, so far as we can see. W. C. F. C.

You are growing your violets altogether too warm. The temperature you name, 48 degrees at night, suits sweet peas well, especially when flowering, but it is too high for violets. The best violets, both double and single, we have grown were given a night temperature of 40 degrees, and while doubles will stand a slightly warmer house than singles, we would not care to have it rise over 45 degrees at any time. In soil prepared as yours was, the plants should not yet require any feeding. The fact of their doing poorly is undoubtedly due to too warm treatment. C. W.

DARK DOUBLE VIOLET.

Can you give me information as to the name of the dark double violets, which are now being grown so largely? I have grown Marie Louise, but cannot get the dark color. W. F. S.

Marie Louise is still more largely grown in Poughkeepsie and other violet centers than any other dark double violet. Another fine dark variety is Farquhar, introduced from Boston fifteen to twenty years ago. When well grown, as it is to be seen in the Rhinebeck district, there is no other double violet to compare with Marie Louise. Of the lighter colored varieties, Lady Hume Campbell is the most generally reliable. W. C.

MULCHING GLADIOLI.

I grow gladioli outdoors for the market, and our sandy soil in this part of Michigan gets rather hot during the summer. This was especially so during the last season, when we had but little rain. I planted them far enough apart for cultivation and I cultivated well; yet the spikes did not grow to perfection. For the coming season I have been thinking of planting them about twenty inches between the rows and not cultivating them, but mulching them, instead, with straw or leaves. Do you think the latter method would be all right? How would a small irrigating system do, to sprinkle in the morning over the mulching? W. E.

Regarding the mulching of gladioli, this can be done with good results where the soil is unusually sandy, but if the soil contains considerable loam I would prefer to keep the top of the soil pulverized, which is in itself a mulch. Straw, leaves or litter of any kind may be used and water applied once or twice a week at evening.

In small plantings for cuttings, I would advise that the rows be from eighteen to twenty inches apart, giving just room enough to pass between the rows for cutting. I would not advise application of water to any extent until the spikes begin to show bud. Arthur Cowee.

Beloit, Wis.—John Rindfleisch is ready to begin work in the erection of additions which will cost approximately $6,000. The new buildings will comprise four greenhouses, each 25x100 feet, besides an office, potting room and boiler room, whose combined area will be 20x120 feet.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Lily of the Valley.

There is a good call for pots and pans of lily of the valley for Easter, and these, if nicely grown, are among the most attractive plants a retailer can offer. To sell well, it is necessary that the foliage should be ample and of a dark green color; stalks with yellowish leaves attached are not wanted. To secure the best foliage you can start the pips now in full light, in a night temperature of 55 to 60 degrees. In five weeks these will be in flower and, while they will be somewhat dwarfer than the darkened, case-grown plants, will carry beautiful leaves and have a substance practically equal to the outdoor grown article. If you have a warm case in which you can start the pips, the flowering period can be materially advanced; three weeks, or four at the outside, will suffice. Expose the plants to light earlier than if you were growing for cut flowers only, and let the foliage be as ample as possible. As a general rule, 6-inch pots are found the most suitable size, and it of course makes no difference what sort of soil is used, as the pips make no new roots while being forced.

Hybrid Prepetual Roses.

The demand for hybrid perpetual roses is not what it used to be before the advent of the numerous ramblers; still, nicely flowered pots are a desirable addition to any retailer's stock in trade. It is less easy to time these than almost any other plants. Two or three successive hot days will sometimes ruin the plants for sales purposes, unless they are removed to cool quarters in season. The peerless white variety, Frau Karl Druschki, has sold well during Easter week for a year or two, and anyone who has this sort on time should have no trouble in disposing of them again. It is better not to try any hard forcing tactics on the hybrid perpetuals; better allow the plants to come along in a night temperature of 50 to 52 degrees than 58 to 60 degrees. Avoid any cold drafts, which would mean mildew in a more or less aggravated form. Use sulphur on the heating pipes on its first appearance and blow some over the affected plants themselves. If small-sized bulbs are showing in the hybrid perpetuals from March 7 to 10, they will be on time. A spell of dark weather may, of course, necessitate some extra heat for them.

Lorraine Begonias.

The early Lorraine begonia cuttings, as well as many of the leaves, are now well rooted and little plants are pushing from the bases of the leaves. Pot as soon as they are decently rooted, in 2-inch pots, using a compost comprising leaf-mold, sand and screened loam. Pot somewhat loosely and grow warm for a week or two, after which time they can be gradually exposed to cooler, airier and more sunny treatment. Some nice cuttings are now procurable on plants cut down soon after Christmas. Those in a bed with some bottom heat will root in a month or five weeks. As plants pass out of flower, prune them back a little and then give them a rest for a week or two, keeping them cooler and drier at the root, after which a warm house will soon cause a nice crop of suitable cuttings to start. If your sand is at all close, add some finely broken charcoal to it, in order that water may pass away freely.

Seed Sowing.

February is a good month in which to sow many flower seeds. It is an advantage to start many varieties before the solar heat gets stronger. In a more uniform temperature, such as we usually get in February, germination is more likely to be good than later in the season. If Primula obconica is not yet sown and strong plants are desired by next Christmas, sow the seed in pans now. Primula Sinensis can also be sown, although, of course, plants in 5-inch pots can be grown from seed sown a couple of months hence. Gloxinias, achimines, gesneras, tuberous and fibrous rooted begonias should all be sown now. In each case we prefer to use sterilized soil and to water the soil before sowing the seeds, dusting a little fine sand over them after watering, then covering with sheets of glass and paper until germination takes place.

Salvia splendens in variety can be propagated from either cuttings or seeds. The latter method gives far more vigorous plants and, except in the case of some special plants which it may be desired to perpetuate, seedlings are far more to be desired. Salvias grow rapidly and can be sown as late as April and still give nice flowering plants for May sales. Some other annuals to start this month are: Verbenas, Vinca rosea, V. alba, heliotropes, browallias, cannas, asparagus in variety, musas, Lobelia Emperor William, L. gracilis, torenias, asters (successional batch) and petunias. It is too early to sow ten weeks' stocks for bedding, zinnias, castor oil plants, cosmos and other rapid growing varieties.

Many perennials can advantageously be started now. These include delphiniums, kniphofias, aquilegias, lupines, campanulas, veronicas and other varieties. Pentstemons and Canterbury bells should be sown now. The former will bloom well all summer and fall and the latter make strong plants to lift in the fall for potting.

For any vacant benches you may have now, or are soon likely to have, batches of such annuals as antirrhinums and ten weeks' stocks will be found extremely useful.

Dahlias.

Everything points to an active call for dahlias the coming season. Already some of the large growers are practically cleaned out of the more desirable sorts. The lists of named dahlias continue to grow at a rather alarming rate. The average trade grower cares nothing for hundreds of varieties, and if the big growers would boil down their lists to one-tenth their present size, it would be better for them and vastly better for their customers. In the case of varieties which are not overplentiful and of which a few extra plants are desired, it is now well to give some attention to them, and if they are placed in heat and cuttings taken with a heel as they become of sufficient size, quite a nice little stock can be worked up before planting-out time arrives. These cuttings are more popular in Europe than here. The main trouble is that they sometimes appear to be toothsome chewing for cutworms or snails, and once cut off, there being no tuber, the plant is lost. Barring this possible danger, they make at least as fine plants as those started from root divisions.

It is too early to start the general lot of dahlias for spring sales, but take advantage of any spare hours, which will be less and less each week now, to look over the tubers and remove any decaying ones.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

CHRYSANTHEMUM RUST.

Will you please tell us what to do for a brownish rust that is on our chrysanthemum stock plants and feverfews?

E. & B.

I presume the rust mentioned by E. & B. is the genuine chrysanthemum rust, which affects the chrysanthemum and its kindred species. The best thing I know of for this is sulphide of potassium, used in the proportion of one ounce to two gallons of water. This can either be sprayed on the plants or the cuttings can be dipped in it before they are placed in the sand. Plants so treated will, as soon as the spring sun is strong enough to move them, quickly grow out of the rust. I have never had any bad effects on the plants from the use of potassium, but a good grower who had used this preparation gave me a warning to keep it away from the paint on the bars or sides, as it will turn the paint a dirty brown.

CHAS. H. TOTTY.

NOTES FROM GREAT BRITAIN.

W. Wells, chrysanthemum specialist, Merstham, England, has issued a revised edition of his book, "The Culture of the Chrysanthemum." It is freely illustrated and contains several views of chrysanthemums grown and photographed in America. These illustrate a chapter devoted to "Chrysanthemums in America," in which the writer states that "the enthusiasm of the Americans for chrysanthemums steadily grows and before long America will become a formidable rival to Great Britain—even if it may not be so regarded at the present time.''

In his introductory notes the following paragraphs are found:

''During a visit I paid to America in November, 1909, I was able to make arrangements with C. H. Totty, of Madison, N. J., to act as my agent in the United States for all the varieties of chrysanthemums distributed from Merstham.

''Mr. Totty is a man who combines great business capacity with sound, practical knowledge of horticulture. Like most of the foremost growers whom I met in the States, he is an Englishman, having been born in Shropshire. He owns extensive nurseries at Madison, where one may see the finest glass houses, the most modern appliances and the latest labor-saving devices to be found anywhere—and that is saying a good deal when one is speaking of America. The produce raised by Mr. Totty finds a ready market in New York, about thirty miles away. He has gone in enthusiastically for chrysanthemums, and has built up a reputation as a successful grower, not only of commercial kinds, but also of exhibition varieties. A near neighbor of Mr. Totty is W. Duckham, who manages the estate of Mrs. D. Willis James, of Madison. Chrysanthemum lovers in America are under a debt to Mr. Duckham, who, for years past, has spared neither trouble nor expense to introduce the latest and best novelties. Some of the most popular varieties to be seen at the principal exhibitions in the United States at the present day have become known through Mr. Duckham's enthusiasm. Like his friend, Mr. Totty, he first saw the light in the old country, being a native of Plymouth. He left England for America nearly twenty years ago, and through his wide experience of gardening, sound judgment and go-ahead methods he occupies a front-rank place in the horticultural world of the States.''

Bee.

RUST ON UNROOTED CUTTINGS.

I have read with great interest for a year or two the replies of A. F. J. B. to carnation growers who ask him questions about their troubles, and I am going to ask him what I can do with a batch of Winsor and Victory cuttings that are now in the sand. They were nice and clean when I got them from another grower, but now, after they have been in the sand for a week, rust is coming on them quite badly. I do not like to throw them away, as I have about 10,000 of them and they cost $100. I have grown carnations for ten years, but never before had the rust to amount to much. This is my first attempt with Winsor and Victory. Can I use a dip of some kind when I put the next lot in the sand? G. A. R.

There is practically nothing you can do for a cutting that has become affected with rust before it is rooted. The remedies advocated for rust could not be used on unrooted cuttings, as they produce conditions under which no carnation cutting could be expected to survive unless it were rooted. Keeping the foliage dry is the secret of preventing rust, and when rust makes its appearance it is customary to apply dustings of lime or sulphur, which take the moisture out of the atmosphere, producing a condition which is abnormal to a degree.

The cutting, until it is rooted, must have an atmosphere which is bracing, and that means at least moderately charged with moisture. The cutting is not able to draw moisture from below as well as a rooted plant, and until it is in a condition to do so you must aid it in drawing moisture from other sources. Too much spraying is usually the cause of rust in the cutting bench, or perhaps there are other sources which are producing similar atmospheric conditions. I have always advocated as little spraying as possible as long as the cuttings can be held up fresh by other means.

I would advise pulling out all cuttings affected with the rust, to prevent its spreading to those unaffected. Do not try any dipping of the unrooted cuttings. There is nothing we know of that will kill rust without also killing the cutting. Your only remedy lies in the prevention, as suggested above.

SALT SOLUTION FOR SPIDER.

In the Review of January 20 I note the following direction: ''To destroy red spider, use salt water and wash it off, but only on bright days.'' I should like to know how strong the salt solution should be made. How much salt is used to each gallon of water? Is the salt water applied with force, or simply sprinkled on from a watering can? How long after the salt water has been applied should the washing-off be done? Do you wash it off with the hose, just as we syringe? J. T.

We use about a 2-inch potful of salt to three gallons of water. This we spray on the plants with our compressed air sprayer. We use a medium fine nozzle, which produces a fine spray and with which we are able to cover every part of the plant without saturating everything.

A few hours after it is applied we use the hose to wash it off. Produce a sharp spray, such as you use in syringing, and reach every part of the plant if possible. This is not so much to wash off the salt, as the salt would do no damage if it stayed on, but it is to wash off all the red spider, many of which will be half dead and more easily dislodged than could be done ordinarily.

If you have spider on your plants you should make haste to get rid of them before warm weather comes. You will find it a mighty hard problem to get rid of them after April 1. A. F. J. B.

BLOOMS FROM OUTDOOR STOCK.

Kindly give the method of culture of carnations for blooms in summer from outdoor stock, buying rooted cuttings or plants, and planting out in the open. Can they be grown for blooms with any degree of success in the open during summer and fall from early spring planted stock? Would it be well to shade with slats, and should they be given much water? What is the best method of fertilizing? What varieties are best for this punrpose? I am located in northern Georgia. T. P. H.

Carnations can be grown quite profitably for summer blooming, especially where there is trouble in getting good asters. In many localities it seems that the soil is so impregnated with the aster blight that it is impossible to get a good stand of asters any more. In such cases carnations can be made to take their place to a great extent, although they can hardly be grown so cheaply.

For blooming outdoors you want cuttings struck quite early. Then push them along by shifting and topping as needed, until by planting-out time you will have them in 3-inch to 3½-inch pots and carrying several good shoots to each plant. Plant these out in beds, allowing about eight inches each way between the plants. As soon as the plants begin to grow and rains become more infrequent, give them a good, heavy mulch of rotted stable manure. Then water whenever necessary to keep the soil fairly moist and be sure that you soak them thoroughly each time you water them. A good soaking once each week will be better than a light watering each day, as the latter method would be likely to start spot disease or stem-rot. In our climate I would not advise any shading whatever, but in your latitude you will likely need some and the form of shading you suggest would likely prove most satisfactory.

By this method you can begin cutting by August and continue cutting until frost cuts them down, which in your locality would be quite late, giving you a long period of blooming.

As to varieties, the selection would not be large. All the Enchantress varieties do well outside. May is fine for that purpose. Crimson Glow is good in its color, and so is G. H. Crane for scarlet.

CARNATIONS WITH SWEET PEAS

What would be a good pink and a good white carnation to grow in sweet pea houses which are run at 50 degrees at night? C. S. L.

Most varieties of carnations will thrive in a temperature of 50 degrees. In fact, we run all our carnation houses at 50 to 52 degrees and we grow sweet peas in the same houses with splendid success.

If you have a house which runs below 50 degrees rather than above that figure, then I would suggest that you do not plant the following sorts in that house: Beacon, White Perfection, Winsor, Mrs. Lawson, or any other sort which splits considerably. A. F. J. B.

STIGMONOSE.

You will find enclosed a bud and spray from the carnations in both of my houses. I am finding a great many like the enclosed. Will you tell me what the trouble is and what is the best remedy?

M. M. B.

The specimens forwarded are badly affected with stigmonose, and for any plants which are as bad as the samples there is no hope. There are no remedies which can be applied for this disease, as you cannot reach it externally. The only remedy lies in elimination through selection of cuttings, coupled with good culture. Propagate only healthy looking plants, and by keeping this selecting up a few years you can bring your stock up to a normal state of health. Too much water and too much feeding will aggravate the trouble, so let your culture be moderate. It should be of a plant-building rather than of a forcing nature.

If you can find no healthy plants, you would better buy new stock from someone who has healthy plants.

A. F. J. B.

FAIRY RING.

Under separate cover I am sending you some blasted buds and stems of Perfection carnations. If possible, please tell me what is the trouble and what I shall do. I have been running them at 52 degrees at night. They did well up to about a month ago, but since then they have been like the ones enclosed. Other carnations in the same house are all right. R. E. G.

The specimens forwarded seemed badly affected with fairy ring and you will have to adopt heroic measures to prevent its spreading all over your house. Buds such as you forwarded will never develop a good bloom, so you might as well go through the bed and cut out every bud that shows the disease at all. Also cut out all shoots that have those dry tips and burn them.

Then dust the plants with Grape Dust, or with lime and sulphur mixed in equal parts. Also spray with Bordeaux mixture. Give all the ventilation you can and water only at the roots for a while. Your temperature has been right for this variety. A. F. J. B.

HYDROCYANIC ACID GAS.

I note the following account in the REVIEW of January 13, as to how A. T. Lorch & Co. fumigate their carnation houses: "In fumigating, for some years we have been using hydrocyanic acid gas exclusively, and find the C. P. grades are the only ones to use. We have used the commercial grade, but got poor results. For a house 22x300 we use one-half gallon earthen glazed crocks, which we space every twenty-five feet in both center walks. In these we place one and one-half inches of water and one and one-half ounces sulphuric acid C. P. The cyanide comes in crystal form, which we first pulverize, then place two ounces in a tissue paper poke, one for each crock, which two men take to the far end of the house. Then they start to return, each in his respective walk containing the crocks, and drop one in each crock as they pass it. In this way they get none of the deadly fumes, and can get out quickly. Of course, it is understood that the house is tightly closed. The best time to do this work is in the evening of a calm day. Great care must be taken with the following varieties, which will burn readily if the fumes used are too strong: Beacon, Perfection and Afterglow."

I should like to know how often this fumigation is used. Please give any other details, also, that can be added.

J. T.

I wish to state that it is better for a beginner who wants to use hydrocyanic acid gas to go a little slowly and not try it too strong at first. He should find out what results are obtained by using it lightly at first and then he can judge for himself if it should be used a little stronger or not. A great deal depends on the condition the greenhouse building is in. If it is a tight house, I advise not to use it any stronger than stated by me in the paragraph which J. T. has quoted from the REVIEW of January 13.

It is also hard to say how often the gas should be used. My advice is: As soon as you see any sign of insects, go for them the first calm day that comes along. It is also better to use, instead of the tissue paper pokes, small glasses which will hold about two ounces of cyanide. Place these in a flat, one for each crock, and proceed down the walk containing the crocks with the water and acid in them, emptying a glass into each crock as you pass along.

Do not forget to remove that valuable member, the greenhouse cat, or any other living creature. Should you overlook this, you can gamble that the cat will pass over to the happy hunting grounds and will not catch any more mice for you. And by all means get out as quickly as possible yourself, and stay out at least half an hour or more.

A. T. LORCH.

OUTDOOR CARNATION BLOOMS.

I am thinking of planting some carnations outdoors this summer for the cut flowers. Do you think I will get enough flowers to pay for my trouble in taking care of them, and can they be grown successfully outside? What varieties in a pure white and a light pink, say Enchantress shade, would give me the most blooms, grown outside? I want to use the flowers mostly for funeral work. I am located in southern Illinois.

T. E. H.

There is no reason why you should not be able to cut enough blooms from carnations in the field to make them pay quite well, providing you handle them properly.

Pot up early cuttings and push them along in pots until planting time, at which time you can have them in at least 3-inch pots and topped twice. These, if planted out and left to come into bloom, should give you a fine lot of flowers. Plant in beds instead of single rows. Set the plants about eight inches each way. Mulch them with some old, loose stable manure, to hold in the moisture, and water when needed.

All the Enchantress varieties should prove satisfactory. We have found May a splendid one for this purpose.

A BROOKLYN FIRM.

Time was when Brooklyn looked to the New York market for its cut flower supplies, but now the City of Churches has a flourishing wholesale section of its own. The accompanying illustration is reproduced from a photograph of the front of the new store of Bonnet & Blake, 130 Livingston street, and a few words as to the careers of the members of the firm may be of interest.

C. Bonnet was born in 1869 at Newark, N. J. He has been connected with the florists' business in some capacity since 1890, first with J. Zschorna, in the retail department, and afterwards for twelve years with the veteran, J. V. Phillips, on Fulton street, Brooklyn. After two years with Hicks & Crawbuck in the wholesale business, Mr. Bonnet formed a partnership with G. H. Blake. Mr. Blake was born in Michigan, also in 1869. Moving early to Rochester, he was in the employ of Salter Bros. until 1890, when he engaged as rose propagator with John N. May, of Summit, N. J. Later he was one of the firm of Blake & Dobbs, of Auburn, N. Y. Selling his interest there, he purchased a half interest in the business of the late J. M. Lyons, rose grower of Madison, N. J. After selling his interests here he entered the wholesale field, and for the last six years has been by two months the junior member of the firm.

AT FRAMINGHAM, MASS.

A Call at William Nicholson's.

Carnations are the leading specialty at the Pleasant Hill Conservatories, Framingham, and William Nicholson, Jr., acted as an escort on the occasion of a recent visit, William Nicholson, Sr., being away at the time, attending to business in Pittsburg. All varieties here are looking uncommonly well, better than ever before. White Enchantress is well liked, and is the principal white grown. It carries a splendid crop. Some White Perfection and Lady Bountiful are also grown. Harry Fenn carried an immense crop. It begins to show occasional signs of running out, and as a bread-and-butter variety it will be difficult to replace. Viola Sinclair was not doing well, and will be dropped. Mrs. Patten is still grown as a variegated and, as grown here, is very prolific.

Winona is well liked and was in heavy crop. Winsor is also extremely popular and is always in crop. Enchantress is still grown in considerable numbers and looked well. Beacon and Victory, as scarlets, both carried heavy crops; each does well here. Small batches of Sangamo, Superba, Niagara and other new varieties were under trial. Some promising seedlings were also noted. Afterglow is grown as a dark pink; it also shows some signs of running out.

A large batch of Freesia Purity carried exceptionally fine spikes, with large flowers. Marguerites, both yellow and white, are grown in quantity. These will not come in heavy crop until April and May. Many thousands of shamrocks are grown and these were ready for pots and pans. Mignonette of an extra fine strain carried some immense spikes, probably not excelled by any in New England.

Goddard's Carnations.

S. J. Goddard's range has been augmented by a fine King Construction house since our last visit. This was not planted until October, but the plants look well and are throwing a fine crop. The other houses, planted earlier, were all in heavy crop. Fenn is the leading crimson, but some Ruby is grown and well liked, the bursting characteristics so noticeable in other places being less conspicuous here. White Perfection is the leading white. Lady Bountiful is still grown, also White Enchantress. Small lots of Bon Ami and Granite State, G. E. Buxton's new seedlings, were on trial and doing well. Both Beacon and Victory are grown as scarlets, the former looking a little the better.

Helen Goddard, raised here, still does well, and there is no prettier flower of its color today. Winsor is found to be indispensable. Loris, a cerise seedling of H. H. Rogers, of South Sudbury, was under trial. Pink Delight is, however, the star variety here. It has been a continuous cropper and the color makes it sell on sight at higher prices than Enchantress. The latter, however, is still grown. Pink Delight makes few cuttings, and these are found difficult to root. This will probably have a tendency to keep its price up.

Butterworth's Orchids.

Orchids are the specialty at J. T. Butterworth's, and of these he is constantly increasing his collection. Cattleya Trianæ was in good crop when we called. The flowers are sold as fast as they open, Boston having acquired something of an orchid mania of late. Some good types of C. Trianæ were noted. Lælia anceps, including some good white varieties, was in season, while a portion of the Cypripedium insigne crop was still uncut. A batch of Miltonia vexillaria looked well. Odontoglossum crispum, both semi-established and newly imported, were promising. A collection of insigne cypripediums, including Sanderæ, Laura Kimball, Harefield Hall and others, were coming into flower, also Dendrobium Wardianum and nobile. A batch of Phalænopsis Schilleriana and Vanda cærulea were in splendid health. Of Cattleya Mossiæ, gigas and other summer varieties there were some grand specimens, which should carry off some honors at the big orchid show in Boston next May.

Lily of the valley is a specialty here and is always to be had of fine quality. Dutch bulb stock is largely forced, Tulip La Reine and Narcissus Trumpet Major and Golden Spur being mostly in evidence. In the carnation houses, Beacon, Fair Maid, Enchantress, Queen and Winsor are the leading varieties grown.

Charles L. Washburn, President Illinois State Florists' Association.

THE ILLINOIS ASSOCIATION.

With a man at its head of such large interests as those of C. L. Washburn, the Illinois State Florists' Association appears to be prepared for a good season's work. The association will ask the state legislature to make up to it the sum withheld when the last biennial appropriation was made. The asking then was for $35,000, which the legislature cut down to $16,000. This time the association will ask for $54,000, the same asking as last session except that the deduction is added.

Charles L. Washburn is a member of practically all the trade societies, but has fought shy of office in any of them, although frequently urged to permit the use of his name. He laughingly asserts that he was not aware of what was going on at Champaign the day he was elected president of the Illinois State Florists' Association, but since the election was unanimous and he has much interest in the work for floriculture now being conducted at the state experiment station, he will put into the administration of affairs the same energy he applies to all his business activities.

Mr. Washburn will be 52 years of age February 27. The early years of his life were devoted to lumbering, some years having been spent in logging in the woods, and later in the wholesale and retail lumber trade. It was in 1884 that Mr. Washburn married Kate Bassett, the only child of O. P. Bassett, with whom in 1893 he formed a partnership under the firm name of Bassett & Washburn. They then started building greenhouses on a large scale at Hinsdale, growing cut flowers for the Chicago market. This was one of the pioneers of the large establishments in the Chicago territory and soon was famous over a wide range of country. They blazed the way for a large number of improvements in greenhouse building, cultural and marketing methods which are now taken as a matter of course by the trade. The firm of Bassett & Washburn commenced to sell their cut flowers under their own name in 1895 and has continued to do so uninterruptedly ever since. The specialty of the firm is the shipping trade. Although it has not been generally known, Mr. Washburn bought out Mr. Bassett's interest in the firm some four years ago, the agreement being that the business should continue under the old firm name. Mrs. Washburn died in 1902. She left one child, Edgar B. Washburn, who since his graduation from the University of Wisconsin has been associated in the business with his father.

President Washburn has announced that he will reappoint as members of the advisory board for the state experimental station, J. C. Vaughan, of Chicago, and W. N. Rudd, of Morgan Park. The other members of the board are the president, the secretary and the treasurer of the association.

One of the things which Mr. Washburn hopes to see accomplished during his term of office is the establishing of some uniform grades for cut flowers. For this purpose his predecessor appointed a committee consisting of C. L. Washburn, H. E. Smith and C. M. Dickinson. The president being ex-officio member of all committees, Mr. Washburn intends to appoint some one else in his own place on the committee. If it is possible for the association to secure the adoption of some standard grades for cut stock, especially roses, it will enable both buyers and wholesalers to deal with greater certainty.

WHY NOT PEORIA NEXT?

The selection of Charles Loveridge as vice-president of the Illinois State Florists' Association leads to the suggestion of Peoria as the scene of the next convention, in February, 1911. Peoria is the second city in Illinois—quite a metropolis by comparison with the meeting place of 1910—with excellent hotels and other accommodations. The determination of the next place of meeting rests with the executive committee of the association and, since the organization has now set the fashion of entertaining itself, there is no need to wait for an invitation.

The accompanying illustration is from a snapshot of Vice-President Loveridge in one of his houses of White Perfection, made December 30, 1909.

HARTFORD, CONN.—Vincent H. Olmsted, foreman for John Coombs, was injured recently while decorating the Thomaston Opera House. He was severely cut about the face. The ladder on which he was working fell with him and struck and broke a chandelier and he was cut by the broken glass.

DAHLIAS AND GLADIOLI.

We are specialists in sweet peas, asters, pansies, etc., but have never done anything with dahlias and gladioli and are thinking of growing some of these, both for the bulbs and the cut flowers. We shall be grateful if you will inform us if wholesale and retail florists buy cut dahlias or gladioli in mixed colors. We know, of course, that in asters and sweet peas they do not. Is it as practical to grow dahlias from seed as from bulbs or from roots? Will you kindly name a few of the best dahlias and gladioli for either the retail or wholesale cut flower market?

S. F. G.

Neither wholesale nor retail florists will care to handle either gladioli or dahlias in mixed colors. No matter what flowers you grow for market, they must be bunched in separate colors, or they are practically unsalable. Dahlias are easily raised from seed and will flower the first season, but you will get every imaginable color and type from seed—good, bad and indifferent, the two latter classes usually predominating. It is probable that few would be of such colors as the market called for. In the case of gladioli, it takes longer to flower bulbs raised from seed and it is only specialists, who grow them in big quantities and who go in for cross fertilizing, who trouble to raise them in this way.

If you want to grow dahlias and gladioli, try the tubers or bulbs from reliable specialists. Restrict yourself to a few varieties and grow these in quantity. Dahlia catalogues contain ten times too many varieties and these are confusing to anyone lacking a knowledge of them. Gladioli are less numerous. Some excellent varieties of the latter are rather too high priced to plant for supplying cut flowers, but it will pay you to work a good stock up for bulbs. For cutting, the mixtures of white, scarlet, pink and crimson are often planted; white and pink are probably the best sellers, scarlet following.

The following gladioli in named sorts are suitable for your purposes: America, the most popular of all market sorts; Augusta, May, Shakespeare, Ceres, Brenchleyensis and Mrs. Francis King. In dahlias the following cactus varieties can be confidently recommended: Countess of Lonsdale, Clara G. Stredwick, Harbor Light, Keynes' White, Kriemhilde, Strahlein Krone and H. J. Jones; in decoratives Catherine Duer, Mme. Van den Dael, Souvenir de Gustave Douzon, Henry Patrick and Nymphæa; in peony flowered, Glory of Baarn, Queen Wilhelmina, Baron G. de Grancy and Bertha Von Suttner; in double shows, Grand Duke Alexis, A. D. Livoni, John Walker and Mrs. Langtry. The dainty little pompons are fine for cutting. A few good sorts are: Vulcan, White Lady, Catherine, Guiding Star and Little Herman.

AUTOMOBILE DELIVERY.

The accompanying illustration is of an automobile used by the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia, for the past three months for delivering orders. It is a two-cylinder, twenty horse-power car, with a maximum speed of thirty-eight miles an hour. A governor set for twenty miles an hour is used to reduce the speed to the law requirements, within the city limits, the governor set for this speed being proof that the law is not exceeded. The vehicle was made by the Autocar Co., of Ardmore, Pa. It has sliding gear, valve transmission and solid tires. It will carry 2,000 pounds, a capacity double that of an ordinary delivery wagon. Five cases of wild smilax can be put on one load. There is an adjustable shelf that can be put in position or removed at will.

When asked about the value of the car from a business point of view, Mr. Pennock said that it is a convenience in delivering flowers quickly to distant points, but that it has not yet proved an economy. He attached importance to keeping the car moving, saying that when idle for any length of time during the day it represents a loss to the business, just as does unused floor space in the store. HANGING BASKETS.

Will you give us some idea as to the time to start hanging baskets, with suggestions as to the best plants for the purpose?

M. & J.

Wire baskets from ten to eighteen inches in diameter are the best to use; popular sizes are twelve to fourteen inches across. It is best not to fill these until two or three weeks before you need them. In order to help keep moisture in them, place a layer of rough sphagnum or wood moss next the wire. This also helps to keep the soil from washing out. The soil should be tolerably rich; two-thirds loam and one-third rotted cow manure is about right.

You do not state whether you want baskets of green or flowering plants. For the latter, some useful varieties to use are: Ivy-leaved geraniums, Lobelia gracilis, Aubutilon vexillarium, Begonia Vesuvius, and for the centers of the baskets tuberous rooted begonias and those of the fibrous section, such as Erfordii and Vernon, fuchsias, petunias, lantanas and verbenas.

Among green plants, Boston sword ferns make good center plants. Other ferns may also be used. Asparagus Sprengeri makes a splendid basket plant when grown by itself. English ivy, variegated and green vinca, glechoma, Kenilworth ivy and maurandias are also fine for this purpose. It is better not to mix foliage and flowering plants. All the baskets will be better if protected from the sun's direct rays and require copious supplies of water. Liquid manure, in addition, will greatly assist them when the baskets are crowded with roots.

W. C.

ASPARAGUS VS. CARNATIONS.

Does it pay better to grow asparagus than carnations? If so, what is the best way to grow it, in strings or bunches? When is the best time to plant it? How long will it be when fit to cut and ship?

J. B.

I would certainly think that it will pay you much better to grow carnations than asparagus. In growing the latter there is a considerable wait after planting before you can cut a string. Then it requires much more fire heat than carnations. The strings are usually sold in lengths of six to eight feet and bunches contain twenty-five sprays each. If, as I assume, you are a comparatively small grower, my advice would be to leave the asparagus to the big specialists and stick to carnations. You will find the latter are more of the bread-and-butter type than the asparagus.

If you refer, however, to Asparagus Sprengeri, it will pay you better than carnations, especially if your house is not an up-to-date one. The Sprengeri will do well in even a dark, almost sunless house.

ASTERS ON CORN LAND.

I have a lot, 70x100, in northeastern Illinois, which was planted to corn last year. Would you advise me to plant it to asters this year? How much seed will I need and how should they be planted?

W. J. K.

Asters should do well on the land you speak of. Plow it, manure it liberally, and thoroughly harrow it in April. If barnyard manure cannot conveniently be procured, use a good commercial fertilizer, at the rate of 600 to 800 pounds per acre. Run the rows thirty inches apart for such strong kinds as Vick's Branching, Crego and Semple's. Comet and Queen of the Market can go a little closer. Assuming that you allow thirty inches between the rows and nine inches between the plants, you will require about 2,600 plants. One ounce of good seed should give you as many plants as you require and allow for some extras. Of course, you can plant the rows closer than here indicated, but it is assumed that you wish to use a horse or hand cultivator through the growing season, in which case thirty inches is none too much.

COLORING FLOWERS.

In coloring flowers for St. Patrick's day, too little attention is given to the flowers used. The following suggestions might be helpful to some of the readers of the REVIEW:

Do not use flowers which have been standing in water, if you can help it. Get some that are freshly cut.

A flower grown during bright, sunny weather, when all the conditions are perfect for rapid growth, will absorb color faster and better than one grown under dull, cloudy conditions. The same idea holds true concerning those cut in the morning and others cut in the afternoon. Those cut in the early morning are practically dormant, while those cut in the afternoon have been forced into activity by the sun and are in a better condition to absorb the coloring.

In a warm, dry atmosphere more moisture evaporates from the flowers, so the solution is drawn up and colors the flowers more quickly.

If you wish to harden the flowers in a cool room, do it after they are colored, but never before. C. R. CRANSTON.

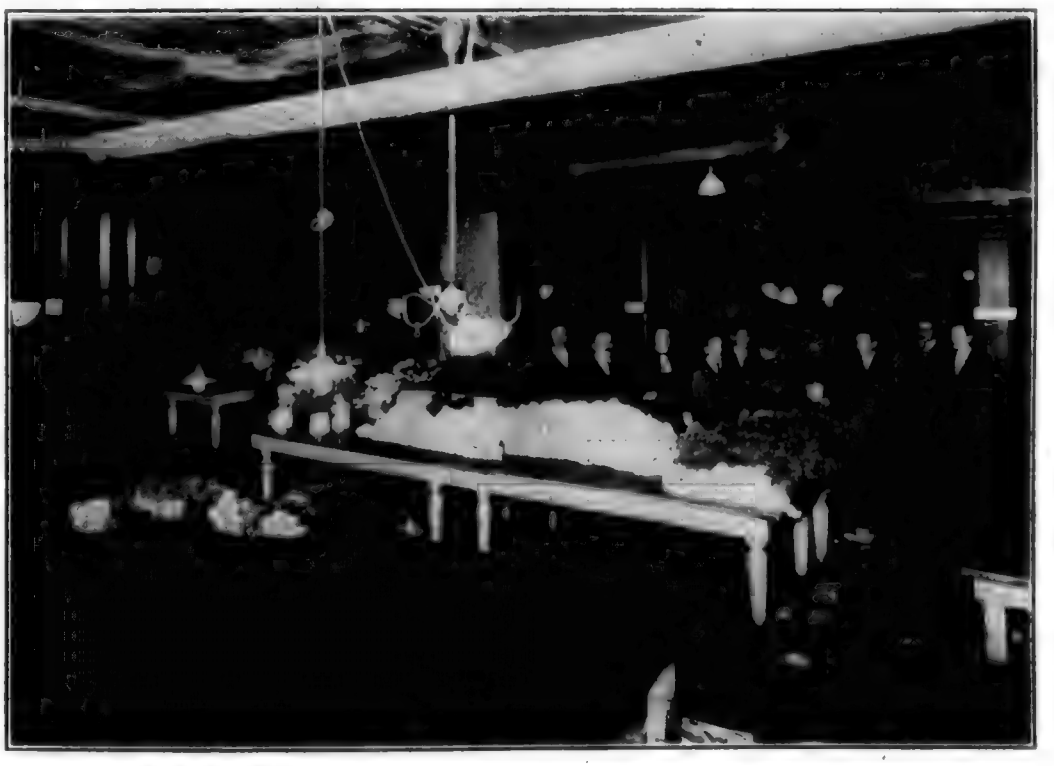
STARTING CANNAS.

Will you please tell me what is the best way to start cannas? I cut the eyes the size for 3-inch pots, put them in flats with sphagnum moss and sand and placed them on the steam pipes with an empty flat under them. Although the eyes are all sound and plump, a large per cent rot. C. B.

Clear a piece of bench in a warm house, under which heating pipes run, and place a layer of moss containing a little sand on the boards. Cut your cannas so that they will have one good eye each and lay them on this moss. Scatter a little fine moss among them and damp them over. Give no more water for several days and apply it sparingly until the roots are pushing out. The cause of your roots rotting has undoubtedly been an excess of moisture. If you have a moist, warm house, the roots will need only light damping over until growth starts. W. N. C.

OBITUARY.

Edwin J. Hill.



Edwin J. Hill, of 40 Hull street, Ansonia, Conn., died Sunday, February 13, after a brief illness. A week previously, while on a business trip to New Haven, he was taken with a chill, which developed into pneumonia, and his condition soon became such that hope of recovery was practically abandoned. He was 39 years old and was the son of the late Morris A. Hill, who started the first florists' establishment in Ansonia. The elder Mr. Hill died a number of years ago, Edwin succeeding to the business. A few years later Mr. Hill vacated the old greenhouses on North Main street, which were afterwards occupied by the Ansonia Floral Co., and built a small range of houses on Hull street. He was married to Miss Jennie Potter, of Ansonia, who survives him. Two children, Charles and Merrill Hill, are also left, besides his mother, Mrs. Phoebe Hill, of New York. Among the other survivors are two brothers, George Hill, of Waterbury, Conn., and Albert Hill, of New York; and one sister, Mrs. Elsie Betts, of Bridgeport.

Mr. Hill was a member of the Eagle Hose and Hook and Ladder Co.; Naugatuck lodge, I. O. O. F., and F. D. Grinnell lodge, N. E. O. P., all of Ansonia. The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon from Immanuel Episcopal church, burial being at Pine Grove cemetery, Ansonia. Delegations attended from the various organizations of which the deceased was a member, and the funeral was a large one. There were many flowers, testifying to the respect and esteem in which Mr. Hill was held.

James Buxton.

James Buxton, formerly a florist in Buffalo, N. Y., was accidentally killed last week. Mr. Buxton started in the business when the florists of Buffalo could have been counted on one hand. He was then employed by W. J. Palmer, when the Palmer greenhouses were still within the limits of the city. After leaving Mr. Palmer, he started in business for himself on Richmond avenue, where he remained until his property became too valuable for greenhouse space. After selling out, he retired from the florists' trade and was engaged in the wholesale business for Philip Becker, where he met his death in a peculiar way, and the news was particularly sad to those who knew him. Going to the open door of an elevator shaft, he shouted a message to someone on the floor above. As he held his head in the shaft, the elevator came down and struck his head, killing him instantly. He was a member of the Florists' Club for years and the pallbearers were all members of the club. The funeral was held Friday, February 18.

THE Massachusetts Horticultural Society was incorporated in 1829.

DAHLIAS AND GLADIOLI.

We are specialists in sweet peas, asters, pansies, etc., but have never done anything with dahlias and gladioli and are thinking of growing some of these, both for the bulbs and the cut flowers. We shall be grateful if you will inform us if wholesale and retail florists buy cut dahlias or gladioli in mixed colors. We know, of course, that in asters and sweet peas they do not. Is it as practical to grow dahlias from seed as from bulbs or from roots? Will you kindly name a few of the best dahlias and gladioli for either the retail or wholesale cut flower market?

S. F. G.

Neither wholesale nor retail florists will care to handle either gladioli or dahlias in mixed colors. No matter what flowers you grow for market, they must be bunched in separate colors, or they are practically unsalable. Dahlias are easily raised from seed and will flower the first season, but you will get every imaginable color and type from seed good, bad and indifferent, the two latter classes usually predominating. It is probable that few would be of such colors as the market called for. In the case of gladioli, it takes longer to flower bulbs raised from seed and it is only specialists, who grow them in big quantities and who go in for cross fertilizing, who trouble to raise them in this way.

If you want to grow dahlias and gladioli, try the tubers or bulbs from reliable specialists. Restrict yourself to a few varieties and grow these in quantity. Dahlia catalogues contain ten times too many varieties and these are confusing to anyone lacking a knowledge of them. Gladioli are less numerous. Some excellent varieties of the latter are rather too high priced to plant for supplying cut flowers, but it will pay you to work a good stock up for bulbs. For cutting, the mixtures of white, scarlet, pink and crimson are often planted; white and pink are probably the best sellers, scarlet following.

The following gladioli in named sorts are suitable for your purposes: America, the most popular of all market sorts; Augusta, May, Shakespeare, Ceres, Brenchleyensis and Mrs. Francis King. In dahlias the following cactus varieties can be confidently recommended: Countess of Lonsdale, Clara G. Stredwick, Harbor Light, Keynes' White, Kriemhilde, Strahlein Krone and H. J. Jones; in decoratives Catherine Duer, Mme. Van den Dael, Souvenir de Gustave Douzon, Henry Patrick and Nymphæa; in peony flowered, Glory of Baarn, Queen Wilhelmina, Baron G. de Graney and Bertha Von Suttner; in double shows, Grand Duke Alexis, A. D. Livoni, John Walker and Mrs. Langtry. The dainty little pompons are fine for cutting. A few good sorts are: Vulcan, White Lady, Catherine, Guiding Star and Little Herman.

AUTOMOBILE DELIVERY.

The accompanying illustration is of an automobile used by the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia, for the past three months for delivering orders. SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress March 4, '01

Officers for 1910: President, F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; vice-president, F. W. Vick, Rochester, N. Y.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg, Pa.

Annual convention, Rochester, N. Y., August 16 to 19, 1910.

RESULTS.
We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

Apparently the ground hog must have seen his shadow.

The more the trade comes to know Primula Kewensis the more people there are who grow it. It has a place of its own at a certain season of the year.

There will be no publicity of corporations' tax returns; the administration found public sentiment too strong and devised a way of beating the devil around their own bush.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending the Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

The complete premium list for the spring exhibition of the American Rose Society, to be held at New York March 16 to 18, has been issued. It contains a long list of special prizes, all of which have received publication in previous issues of the Review. Intending exhibitors can obtain copies of the premium list and rules by addressing the secretary, Benj. Hammond, Fishkill, N. Y.

Everyone speaks well of J. A. Peterson's new begonia, Glory of Cincinnati. At the recent meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association it received the only certificate of merit recommended by the judges, and the plantsmen all were taken with it. Mr. Peterson carries in his pocket a big bundle of nice letters about it, written him by some of the leading florists of the country.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Department of Registration.

Public notice is hereby given that J. A. Peterson, of Westwood, Cincinnati, O., offers for registration the begonia described below. Any person objecting to the registration, or to the use of the proposed name, is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

Raiser's description: Parentage, Socotrana x a sport of Lorraine type; foliage, large, round, resembling the foliage of B. Socotrana, but smaller; height, one to one and one-half feet; color, deep, soft, satiny pink; the individual flowers are about two inches across; flowering period, from October to April, being at its best during latter part of December; propagation by leaf cuttings, or by splitting up the foliage, as with the Rex varieties; soil, a light, sandy loam and leafmold, with a little well-rotted cow manure; its lasting quality is especially recommended.

Name: Glory of Cincinnati.

Corrections.

The name, Alice of Ingleside, was omitted from the registration, January 12, 1910, of the rose offered by Southwick Cary Briggs, of Washington, D. C.

In the change of registration, January 20, 1910, by S. Cockburn & Sons, of Woodlawn, New York, the name of the chrysanthemum should have been Mrs. Jane Cockburn, instead of Mrs. Jane Cochran.

The Great Central Market.

The weather in the closing days of last week was too cold for the best interests of the cut flower business and the general report is that the market would have stagnated had it not been for a fair amount of shipping trade. This week opened on Sunday with an extremely good run of business. Monday also brought an active demand, the observance of Washington's birthday adding largely to the usual Monday requirements. Later, demand slackened and the market lapsed into its usual midweek lassitude.

It is a matter of general comment that the quality of much of the stock in the market is not what it should be at this date. Neither Beauties nor roses, generally speaking, are up to the standard; many carnations are soft, and there is an unusually large number of splits; the Rhinebeck violets also are poor, some of them being so poor that it is difficult to find any buyer who will handle them. The wholesalers are receiving more or less complaint from out of town on the quality of the stock shipped, even where much care was used in selection. The complaints are specially numerous with regard to carnations.

Beauty crops have increased only slightly, but the demand is extremely light and the moderate receipts are fully up to the market's requirements; indeed, prices have retrograded much farther than production has advanced. While there is an abundance of roses, Killarney appears to be slower in coming into crop than other roses. Of Bride there are large supplies and the stock averages fully as good as any other in the market, but prices are depressed because there is now nothing to make any special demand for white roses. The shorter Richmond also are moving slowly and prices generally on roses are down to a point where any buyer can take hold with freedom.

Carnations are coming in heavily, but the average quality of the stock is so poor that the best grade of goods still is bringing fair prices, where there is a large quantity that is jobbed off at extremely low rates, even with some loss on splits. Now and then there has been a part of a day on which it was not easy to find all the white carnations that were needed, but this condition has been speedily corrected when the word went out to the greenhouses. Enchantress is more abundant than any other color. Good bright pink is in demand.

The supplies of bulbous stock are the heaviest of the season. Tulips are coming in much more rapidly than heretofore and daffodils and jonquils are in large supply. There also are increased receipts of Paper Whites, and Romans are in good supply. The result is that bulb stock is selling at lower prices than at any time so far in 1910. Daffodils and jonquils are not worth more than half as much as they were a month or six weeks ago, though the quality is much finer than the early crop. Valley continues in good supply, but the demand has

KILLARNEY

We have advertised the fact that our Killarneys are of superior quality

Here is just a word of confirmation quoted from the report of the exhibition of the Illinois State Florists' Association last week.

From the judges' report: "Special mention of the excellence of the Killarney and White Killarney exhibited by Wendland & Keimel," who are one of our growers. From the Review's report: "Not only was the quantity of stock large but the quality of much of it was of superior excellence. Perhaps the exhibit that attracted the most attention was that of Wendland & Keimel, Elmhurst, who staged a superb vase of Killarney and one of White Killarney.',

SWEET PEAS

Fancy, long-stemmed Peas ready in quantity. The colors are white, pink and lavender, with a few fancy colors. This stock makes a hit wherever used—it is the same that we handled in such quantity last season and which we shipped all over the country. Begin now, with the start of the crop—you can do a big business with these Peas for many weeks.

Roses

We can fill all orders with fine Richmond, Maid or Bride, good heads on any length of stem.

Beauties

We have been filling all Beauty orders right along and can report crops on the increase. Write or wire.

Carnations

Our Carnations are the best in the market and the quantity sufficient to take care of the largest orders. We want to hear from large users of Carnations who have not previously bought of us. We can make it interesting for all such—not the cheapest, but the best Carnations on this market, and the largest supply.

Violets

We handle the cream of the crops of Hudson River Double Violets and ship them in large quantities all over the middle west. If YOU haven't tried our Violets, order some today. Also large supplies of fancy singles.

Bulb Stock

Easter Lilies

We are cutting now an average of 1000 Lilies per day. Very choice stock, large flowers, long stems and fine foliage. They are the best flowers in the market and are in great demand during this severe shortage of Beauties and Roses. We are selling them at $15.00 per 100 or $2.00 per doz. Buy direct of the grower and get fresh stock.

American Beauties, Roses, Fancy Carnations, Tulips, Daffodils, Valley, Easter Lilies and Greens.

also slackened. Easter lilies are not as abundant as they were and occasionally it has been difficult to fill orders. Moderate quantities of callas seem to suffice for the demand. Orchids, gardenias and white lilac are available for all orders on which a few hours' notice is given.

There is little change in the violet situation. Receipts are not quite so heavy and quality not quite so good, and prices have traveled in the same direction as quality. While it seems possible to sell most of the doubles, if the price is made low enough, the singles do not go as well, though the quality is fully as good. Violet growers will find little incentive toward increased production in the returns of the last few weeks and things seem to be getting worse instead of better.

The situation in green goods shows no change. Asparagus bunches still are comparatively scarce, with extremely light demand for asparagus strings and an abundant supply of everything else. It is reported that some of the wholesalers have met with disappointment in the matter of the ferns in storage, and the apparent anxiety of some of the original sources of supply to unload their stock gives rise to the belief that ferns are spoiling in first hands. An advance in price for good stock is therefore anticipated, although prices now are lower than ordinary at this season.

Various Notes.

The prospect for lilies for Easter is already occupying attention. The general report is that the stock is nowhere near along as it should be and that the supply will be only a fraction of what it usually is. The growers all say that on looking around they find the other fellow will only get in a part of his stock, that some of it is weeks behind, but each grower adds that he expects to flower all his own bulbs on time.

Ed. Roehrs and R. Muller, of the Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J., were in town several days last week and report has it that they sold a lot of orchid plants to local cut flower growers.

Anton Then, Jr., is out after an illness of thirteen weeks with typhoid fever.

Peter Reinberg's campaign for reëlection to the city council is progressing quietly. Thus far the republicans have not placed any one in the field against him.

Weiland & Risch say business is better than usual in Lent.

At J. A. Budlong's comment is made on the light call for Beauties. They assert that the number of wholesalers buying of them speaks plainly of the quality of the stock, but say the demand has not cleaned up their moderately heavy cut for some days; everything else seems to be selling better than Beauties at the moment.

John Zech says he thinks the growers will find a means of flowering a fair proportion of their lilies for Easter, so that everybody can get some.

Alois Frey, of Crown Point, is preparing to send out a set of five of his new seedling single and pompon chrysanthemums. The set which he sent out in 1909 sold extremely well and he has already booked a considerable number of orders for the 1910 set.

Frank Garland, at Des Plaines, says that he is behind with his propagating this year, not having secured as yet all the carnation cuttings he will require for his own use.

The entertainment committee of the Florists' Club announces that ladies' night will occur March 3, with dinner at the Union hotel at 8 p. m. This is the regular meeting night. There will be a fine musical entertainment.

August Poehlmann says that Poehlmann Bros. Co. has 22,000 lily plants at Morton Grove, looking about as well as he could ask.

Wendland & Keimel, at Des Plaines, started February 15 on the erection of three new houses 27x200. Next season they will have 9,000 White Killarney, 18,000 Killarney and one house which may be used either for Richmond or My Maryland.

Emil Buettner will this season add four new houses to his range of 140,000 feet at Park Ridge and also rebuild one of the older houses. He plans to plant 5,000 more White Killarney in the additional space.

Bassett & Washburn have had a big cut of Formosa Easter lilies and while the market was well supplied put a quantity of the greenest in cold storage. Last week when lilies became suddenly scarce they took them out, in splendid condition, and got better prices than the average Easter affords.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

There is not much to say of the business done last week in either retail or wholesale circles. The cut flower trade was greatly curtailed by the cold weather and big snowstorm which lasted two days last week. Monday, Valentine's day, the business was good from all reports, but the rest of the week the bottom dropped out entirely among the retailers. The wholesalers also had their troubles in disposing of their large consignments, which they were receiving daily. Everything is plentiful and we might say that carnations, violets and sweet peas are a glut and are being sold at low prices in thousand lots. There were more California violets in the market last week than ever before in any one week.

Roses are becoming more plentiful each day and these, too, will be piling up soon for want of demand. Bulbous stock is as yet not overstocked, still plenty of these are in the market, especially callas and Harrisii. All white stock is in best demand. Smilax and other greens are in fair demand.

Various Notes.

C. Stocke, late foreman for the Michel Plant & Bulb Co., has taken a position with the city forester. In this department all hands have been busy trimming city trees.

Walter Retzer, who left the employ of the Plant Seed Co. recently, is now located in Brownsville, Tex., where he has purchased a farm.

Fred H. Weber reports that he had a most satisfactory Valentine trade and says he disposed of 10,000 California violets on that day.

Ostertag Bros. did a great deal of decorative work at Armory hall last week for the automobile show. They report a big Valentine's day business.

William Winter, of Kirkwood, is cutting an extra fine lot of carnations and California violets. These are being handled by Henry G. Berning.

Carl Beyer and John Connon, who were on the sick list last week, are out again and attending to business as usual.

George B. Windler will, as usual, have a fine lot of extra fine blooming plants for Easter. Mr. Windler has just returned from a pleasant trip to Champaign-Urbana, Ill.

All the downtown florists did a big business with violets for St. Valentine's day and some novel window displays were seen. The Riessen Floral Co., Otto Sander, Grimm & Gorly and the Foster Floral Co. say their business almost doubled that of other years. C. Young & Sons Co. and Miss Teresa Badaracco also had extra business on St. Valentine's day.

The present quarters of the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. at 1316 Pine street are becoming too small. The crowded conditions and their increasing business warrants them in soon looking for much larger accommodations.

The florists along Grand avenue had the benefit of the crowds attending the automobile show at the Armory hall. Their gaily decorated windows were great attractions and brought them considerable business.

The following members of the Florists' Club attended the annual convention of the Illinois State Florists' Association at Champaign-Urbana last week: President George B. Windler, F. W. Bruenig, J. F. Ammann, E. W. Guy, A. Fehr, H. Blixen and Henry Johann. E. H. Michel also attended. All have returned home much pleased with their trip and in meeting so many friends in the trade.

The St. Louis Horticultural Society's executive board held a meeting at the Missouri Athletic Club Tuesday, February 15. Eight members of the board were present and it was decided not to hold a spring flower show this year. Mr. Nicholson presided over the meeting.

The Ladies' Florists' Home Circle met for their monthly meeting at the Washington hotel, Monday, February 14, over which Mrs. John Steidle presided. There were eleven members present. The chair called on Mrs. J. J. Beneke for something interesting, which she produced in the shape of a game of flowers. All answers had to be the name of a flower, for which she offered a first and second prize. Miss M. Meinhardt won the first prize and Mrs. John L. Koenig, second. The next meeting of the circle will take place March 14, when Miss M. Meinhardt will take her turn with something interesting for the members. The secretary reported the following ladies present: Mrs. John Steidle, Mrs. Otto G. Koenig, Mrs. John L. Koenig, Miss M. Meinhardt, Miss T. Meinhardt, Mrs. Theo. Miller, Mrs. Schitzle, Mrs. H. G. Berning, Mrs. F. C. Weber, Mrs. F. H. Meinhardt and Mrs. J. J. Beneke. The usual lunch was served after the meeting.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

The automobile show at Music hall made quite a stir in cut flowers this week; bunches of American Beauties, Richmond and many violets were carried by the smart set. Thomas Hardesty had the hall decoration and many flattering comments were passed upon his artistic work. Over 100 cases of southern smilax were used. Reports regarding Washington's birthday showed an increase in orders for violets and red carnations. Roses, which have been scarce for a month, came in more freely and the commission houses had about enough to fill orders. Prices range about the same as in the previous week. Carnations are coming in more abundantly, but so far none has gone to waste; there has been an equal demand for all good grades and prices maintained a good average of $2 to $3 per hundred. Bulbous material is quite plentiful and prices are naturally lower. Many sales have been reported at prices as low as $2 per hundred for Paper Whites, daffodils and jonquils. Good grades of violets have realized 50 cents per hundred, but owing to the immense quantity of stock coming in, it will be a hard matter to maintain this price. Callas and Harrisii lilies are more plentiful, at $10 per hundred. Asparagus, smilax and other greens have a good demand. Lily of the valley is not quite so much sought after, as there is a lull in weddings during Lent.

One of the worst snowstorms we have experienced in the last fifteen years came on Thursday, February 17. Over fifteen inches of snow fell during the day and the thermometer dropped to 8 degrees below zero that night, but, up to the present, we have heard of no serious mishap to growers. Weather conditions the first part of this week are ideal for growing stock, it being clear and cold.

Various Notes.

Alex Ostendorf, the genial shipping clerk at McCullough's, was presented by his wife with a live valentine; it's a boy.

H. SCHWARZ.

It is said that the writer of the Cincinnati column was too optimistic in his report on the business for Valentine's day, especially with regard to violets; it is now reported that the wholesalers were unable to clean out and that at least one of them was quite badly stuck after telephoning to about every florist in town offering violets at sacrifice prices. The natural inference is that the retailers also had at least as many as they could sell.

GRAND FORKS, N. DAK.—N. P. Lindberg, of Rugby, N. Dak., has built a new greenhouse here and will make this his headquarters in the future. Mr. Lindberg says that business is good.

They are not the ordinary kind. You will find them different in quality from other carnations offered at that price. Quality is a fact to those who compare. If you seek quality, don't attempt to carry comparison in the eye, but place them side by side. It is the only safe way, for wherever unreasonably low prices are given by skimping quality, you are the loser in the end. Our stock of carnations is mostly of the better varieties.

PHILADELPHIA.

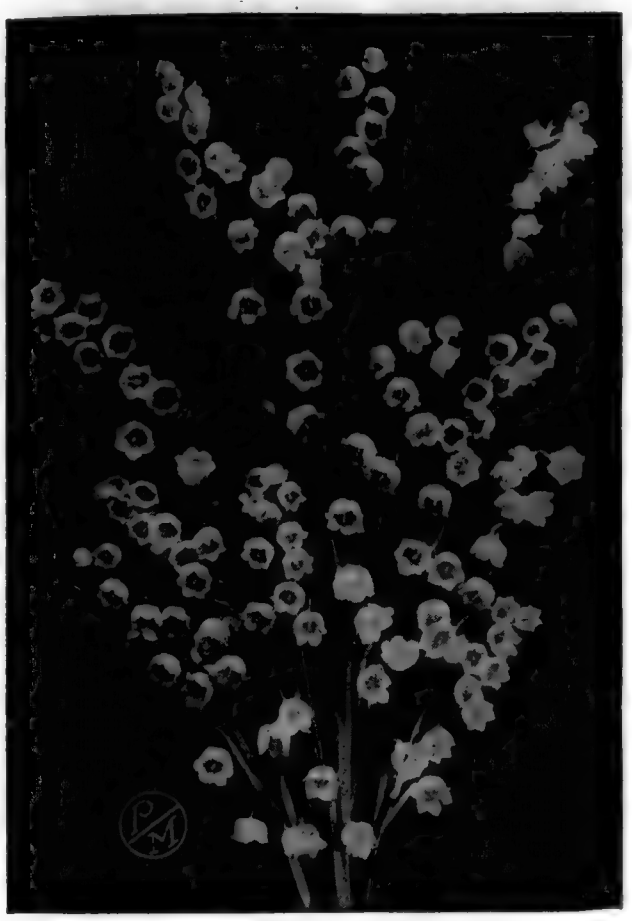
The Rising Eastern Market.

"It is Lent now." That is the way George Craig describes the situation and I could not put it better. Add to this that the street car men went on strike after Mr. Craig spoke and you will understand why the local business lacks snap. The wholesale houses that cater to the shipping demand are busier than those which depend entirely on this city, for the orders from out of town are coming in well, helping to give tone to a rather dull market.

The immense crop of carnations has worried the wholesalers. They have done their best, but it has been a difficult matter to sell carnations, even at the low prices quoted today. White have been a little more in demand than the colors, with red at the other end. The crop of carnations has been something remarkable, so large as to raise serious apprehensions as to where the carnations the market must have during the next few weeks will be found. The daffodils have been almost as plentiful in a smaller way as carnations; it seemed as though the growers failed to allow for lessened demand during Lent, the heavy crop arriving just about the time that it did last year, only Lent came two weeks earlier this season. The daffodils have been fine. Golden Spur still leads the singles.

The other flowers on the list have been more evenly balanced between supply and demand, excepting Easter lilies and callas, for which there is little call. Killarney is the only rose that is much more plentiful and Killarney is selling so well that prices have been but little affected. There is no special change to note beyond the fact that it takes a better flower to bring the same money than it did two weeks ago.

A Pretty Store.



The interior arrangements of the remodeled flower shop of Robert Crawford, Jr., are most pleasing. The general effect is very much the same as before, white and gold mirrors giving an air of brightness that adds to the floral effect. The conservatory in the rear is high, admitting light in spite of the surrounding buildings. Back of the conservatory, across a passageway, is the cooling room, with storeroom adjacent. The total floor space under Mr. Crawford's new arrangements is, he tells me, 100 square feet more than formerly. The electrical arrangements are modern; there are switches for each set of electroliers, while those hung in the conservatory are swinging, to avoid the possibility of breakage when high plants are carried out. Mr. Crawford is enthusiastic over the ventures of his two sons, one in the new flower shop in West Philadelphia, the other in his carnation plant at Secane.

Conservatism.

Edward Reid discussed some of the business problems of the day in the flower world with a clear insight into existing conditions that merits careful attention. Mr. Reid thinks that enthusiasm is universal among florists. It helps them bear the hard knocks, but it leads them into serious errors. Few of the growers, he thinks, know exactly where they stand; after two or three good months they decide to build more greenhouses, without considering that there are few months as good as those in the winter. Then, too, little thought is given to the skill and care required to produce flowers that pay; increase of glass may not mean increase of income; it often means the reverse. Spare no effort to get more flowers and better flowers from your glass, but go slow in building, is Mr. Reid's idea. And, above all, keep an exact account of revenue and expense, including a percentage for wear and tear on the greenhouses.

Radish Icicle.

Walter P. Stokes believes that French grown radish seed is preferable to the seed grown in this country, because in France the seedlings are always transplanted once, whereas in California they are allowed to sprout and grow and seed unmoved. As an instance of the superiority of the French radish, Mr. Stokes quoted the letters of a customer who bought his Icicle radish seed two years ago and last year bought again. This year he wrote: "Please send me the fine radish seed that you sent me two years ago, not the seed you sent me last year; it was not so good." "Now," Mr. Stokes said, "I sent the French seed two years ago; last year the French crop was a failure and I sent California seed in its place; this year we have the French seed again, and it is well worth the small extra cost of a few cents per pound."

Various Notes.

J. Wolff Moore has his new store at 1639 North Broad street in operation. A conservatory, divided from the store by a passageway, will be completed, it is hoped, before Easter. Mrs. Moore's taste adds that touch necessary to produce a pleasing effect.

Victor Dorval and four friends from New York honored us with a visit last week.

Arthur F. MacIver, late with Charles M. Keegan, is now with J. J. Habermehl's Sons at the Bellevue-Stratford.

David Anderson, Garrettsford, Pa., will build two greenhouses, each 25x150, and has given the order to the King Construction Co.

A guest of the Hotel Walton became deranged a few days ago. The final catastrophe was evidenced by his ordering $150 worth of cut flowers from a local florist to adorn his sick room, two days later complaining of their freshness. His gratitude to a friend who had him removed to a sanitarium was expressed in an offer to send the friend's wife $100 worth of cut flowers.

John Ratcliffe, Ratcliffe & Tanner, Richmond, Va., was here last week.

A. Blanc is now with Edward Reid.

Elmer Heatherington toils in pastures that are no longer strewn with flowers.

Frank Palmer is right-hand man for W. W. Crawford in his new West Philadelphia shop. The conservatory is complete, adding a fine effect.

The spring show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society will be held in Horticultural hall the third week in March, in conjunction with the convention of the National Gardeners' Association.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The week opens with rain and heavy fogs, after many days of clear, cold weather that has added enormously to the cut flower shipments. There is enough of everything and to spare and the remaining days of Lent probably must pass before any encouraging life can be infused into the situation. Lent itself does not seem to affect the gayety of the four hundred; dinners and receptions are numerous and will be while the winter lasts. Great gatherings of the country's most eminent men celebrated in banquets here the birthday of Lincoln, and other groups the natal day of the father of his country. These depleted the Beauty surplus at any rate, though the flood of other roses seems interminable. Especially may this be said of Maid and Killarney. The street men are again in evidence whenever the weather permits and last week were handling great quantities of valley, violets and carnations, somewhat relieving the situation.

The market has never been so overwhelmed with carnations and, while the quality is perfect, prices at this date have never been so low. The buyer is now the autocrat and what he offers is seldom refused. Lilies are down to about half last week's figure, 6 cents buying the best of them February 19. Gardenias and orchids share in the general depression and violets, the best of them, never rise above 50 cents, while the overflow goes at any price one can get for them. The prices on bulbous stock, especially tulips, are unquotable and only the long-stemmed new varieties of sweet peas seem to be desired. It is hard to conceive of any uplift to the market before Easter and in the meantime everybody seems to be cheerfully making the best of it and waiting hopefully for the good time coming.

I showed a fine vase at the dahlia novelty show at Hanover and everybody admired the pretty flowers. The form of the flower is just fit for our taste, the lovely lilac-rosy color with a light hue of blue insinuates in the daylight and under artificial light the effect is indescribable. Very long and wire-like stems carry the flower well above the foliage, and I am quite sure that Ruth Forbes will soon be praised by every dahlia friend, the first useful cactus dahlia from America, and I dare say, raiser and introducer can be proud."

TORONTO.

The Market.

Business is good in nearly all lines. Funeral work is plentiful, nearly everyone getting a good share. Carnations are plentiful and good. Roses are scarce, but violets, hyacinths, tulips, daffodils and freesias are in good supply and sell well. Cattleyas are about equal to the demand. Plants are the only things that seem to hang, and quite a number of primulas and cinerarias are to be seen in the grocery stores at prices on which there can be no profit to either the grower or retailer.

Carnation Exhibition.

The annual carnation exhibition, under the auspices of the Toronto Agricultural Society and the Toronto Florists' and Gardeners' Association, was held February 18 and brought out a fine lot of well grown stock. There was only one prize offered, a gold medal for the best vase of carnations, any variety, and it was won by the Joseph Heacock Co., Wyncote, Pa., with a fine vase of Dorothy Gordon, which arrived in grand shape and it certainly appears to be a good thing. Dorothy Gordon was the only new one to reach Toronto the day of the exhibition. Mary Tolman, from Hunt Bros., got here Saturday, February 19, about 10 a. m., and Toreador about 5 p. m. Both were in excellent condition and look to be good ones. The former was shown in Dunlop's window on Yonge street and probably received more attention and notice there than it would have had at the show. Toreador was to be seen at Dillemuth's on King street, and it certainly appeared to advantage.

The Dale Estate, Brampton, made a fine show with large vases of Enchantress, White Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress, A. Carnegie, Perfection, Winsor, and also some fine roses in Bride, Maid, Richmond and Killarney; also some grand valley and violets and four vases of Narcissus Victoria, the latter being much admired.

T. Manton had a group of orchids and ferns that were a great attraction; some fine plants of Dendrobium formosum giganteum and D. Wardianum and also some cattleyas, with a splendid show of blooms.

W. Fendley, of Brampton, had some fine carnations, valley and violets, the latter being his specialty.

Dunlop's, Toronto, had some splendid carnations.

The Allan gardens had a group of primulas, cinerarias, begonias, azaleas, genistas and foliage plants in a fine arrangement.

Wm. Jay & Son showed a fine group of ferns and dracænas, all well grown.

J. McVittie, gardener for Sir Henry Pellatt, had a group of cinerarias, obconicas, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, and some cattleyas and foliage plants that were worthy of the special award of merit which was given to them.

Various Notes.

The florists in North Toronto are greatly interested in a strike of natural gas up there. Tom Manton is thinking of boring a well close by his greenhouses, as they have a good flow at one about 400 yards away. He is already counting how much he will save next winter on coal and how much warmer he will keep the houses.

Dillemuth, the King street florist, is planning extensive garden operations at his summer residence on the island. He expects to be able to supply both his stores with asters and other outdoor summer flowers from there.

Dunlop has one house of Lilium longiflorum that would be hard to beat. Roses also look fine here.

W. E. MacKay, Dundas street, has some good marguerite plants that will be right for Easter. Lilies also are in good shape here.

D. Cooper reports lots of funeral work. He is planning to build a greenhouse in the rear of his store on Dundas street.

The Steele-Briggs Seed Co. is busy with gardeners' orders and reports a large increase in sales in this line.

MAC.

BOSTON.

The Market.

A somewhat improved tone characterized last week's market and flowers sold out much better. While the tendency in some cases was towards slightly lower prices, this is not to be wondered at with increasing supplies, and the arrival of Lent. Roses continue to sell well and there has been no surplus of them. Killarney and White Killarney continue to be the great sellers. Carnations are a little lower in price, but, all things considered, are cleaning up well. Violets are becoming more abundant each week; fancy singles make 75 cents per hundred, but the general average is 30 cents to 50 cents. The singles are of exceptional quality now. Narcissus of the various Trumpet varieties are in oversupply. Hyacinths do not move well and tulips are also in heavy supply. Few Paper Whites and Roman hyacinths now remain.

There are plenty of excellent lilies. Those of the Formosum type are selling well. The speciosums move more slowly. Lily of the valley sold well last week, but is now quieter. Bachelor's buttons, calendulas, myosotis, English primroses and other miscellaneous flowers are in considerable demand. Some fine antirrhinums are coming in. Freesia is still seen, but is becoming of poor quality. Marguerites are rather more plentiful, but sell well and there is a fair call for green stock. Cattleyas are less plentiful, but Cœlogyne cristata, dendrobiums and cypripediums are in quite good supply. An increasing call for flowering plants is noted. Of these cyclamen, prunus, lilacs, Baby Rambler roses, ericas, genistas and acacias are most in evidence, with plenty of tulips and narcissi in pans.

Dinner to J. W. Duncan.

About fifty friends of J. W. Duncan met at the Parker House, Saturday evening, February 19, and tendered him a complimentary farewell banquet. Those present included many of the leading florists, gardeners, seedsmen, park and cemetery superintendents near Boston; F. C. Green and T. McCarthy coming from Providence, R. I., and George Gordon, under whom Mr. Duncan first found employment in America, came from Beverly Cove.

J. K. M. L. Farquhar acted as toastmaster, and addresses eulogistic of the guest of the evening, regretting his departure from Boston and wishing him every success in his new and broader field at Spokane, Wash., were made by many of those present, including T. McCarthy, Andrew Christensen, F. C. Green, Robert Cameron, K. Finlayson, D. Finlayson, Peter Fisher, William Sim, James Scorgie, H. Wilson Ross, James Wheeler, T. H. Westwood, E. J. Rogean, R. W. Curtis, W. N. Craig, George Gordon, James Farquhar, David Weir, T. J. Grey, Peter M. Miller, M. A. Patten, A. Leuthy, George M. Anderson and J. T. Butterworth. The latter, who is of a poetical turn of mind, gave impromptu some choice verses appropriate to the occasion.

Mr. Duncan feelingly and appropriately thanked those present for the honor conferred upon him and expressed the hope that he would be able to see some of them at Spokane in the near future. The committee having charge of the banquet, which was arranged for on short notice, were Robert Cameron, J. K. M. L. Farquhar, P. M. Miller and Thomas Pegler. The last named gentleman was called by telegraph to New York owing to the serious illness of a near relative and was unable to be present.

Mr. Duncan leaves for Spokane February 24. Mrs. Duncan and daughter will follow about the end of April.

LOUIS ELSASS, Chillicothe, Ohio

Club Clippings.

In the discussion on S. J. Goddard's paper at the club meeting February 15, the lecturer said he tried to keep all his carnation houses at 52 degrees at night, 58 degrees on dull days and 65 degrees on bright days. Asked as to the best six varieties of their respective colors, he said he would select Winsor, Pink Delight, Helen Goddard, Beacon, Fenn and White Perfection. He considered July the best month to plant the houses, although he had fine Beacons planted in June. Peter Fisher had found that cuttings kept sweeter and longer in a brick than a wooden propagating bench.

The club will hold a field day with W. W. Edgar Co., Waverley, March 19, to see the firm's display of Easter plants.

Owing to the lecture hall of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society being rented for the week of the regular meeting in March, the regular monthly meeting will be held March 22, in lieu of March 15.

One of the most eloquent lectures delivered before the Massachusetts Horticultural Society for years, was given February 19 by Glen C. Seavey, of Springfield, Mass., on "The New Agriculture for New England." The lecturer emphasized the necessity for teaching more of the principles of agriculture in the schools. Mr. Seavey said that at present 85.72 per cent of the population of Massachusetts lives in towns or cities with 5,000 or more inhabitants, but a big change is now under way and real estate dealers have a steadily increasing call for New England farms from western people, many from beyond the Mississippi river.

An animated discussion followed the lecture. Robert Cameron paid his respects to the so-called landscape architects and instanced some of their work for rejuvenating the dying elms around Harvard college. He described the ideal country minister as one who could preach on Sunday, attend a prayer meeting through the week and work a farm successfully during the balance of the week. If the mellow-headed preachers understood more agriculture they would have better congregations, and better feelings all around would exist between them and their parishioners.

Prior to Mr. Seavey's lecture a resolution approving the two-row tree plan for Commonwealth avenue, on a motion by J. K. M. L. Farquhar, was adopted by the meeting. It is to be hoped that the original plan of Frederick Law Olmsted, Sr., and C. S. Sargent will be carried out to completion and that the so-called landscape architects, who are demanding a permanent four-row plan from an artistic point of view, will be relegated to the rear.

Various Notes.

Everything points to a splendid exhibition in Horticultural hall, February 25 to 27, and some choice displays of amaryllis, orchids and other plants will be seen. No one should miss seeing this show, which will take the place of the regular spring show. Carnations promise to be shown in unusually large numbers.

At the club meeting February 15, Robert Main, of Gloversville, N. Y., showed a white seedling carnation, a cross between Boston Market and Genevieve Lord, which the committee thought sufficiently well of to grant a report of merit.

H. W. Peirce, of Peirce Bros., left by steamer February 19, for a trip to Savannah, Ga.

Kidder Bros., of Lincoln, handle quantities of superb Princess of Wales violets, which are finely bunched and easily fetch top market prices.

W. E. Lenk, of Halifax Gardens Co., Halifax, Mass., was in town February 19. His firm, at present, chiefly is growing cucumbers, tomatoes and lettuce in their large area of glass, but they are contemplating planting large quantities of carnations and chrysanthemums next season.

T. F. Galvin at present is handling a fine lot of well flowered Baby Rambler roses, also nice lots of Prunus triloba and lilacs, among other plants.

D. F. Roy, the manager of the Converse estate at Marion, Mass., is at Palm Beach, Fla., with Mrs. Roy on a three weeks' visit.

The Harvard Botanical Gardens are hoping to erect a new and commodious palm house during the present season. Such a house is much needed and we have no doubt the funds for the erection of it will be readily secured.

The H. E. Fiske Seed Co. is handling a fine assortment of bulbs in variety at present, in addition to many other flowering plants.

Sidney Hoffman is showing some splendid specimen azaleas and genistas in his big Massachusetts avenue store. Mr. Hoffman is doing a large and increasing business, due to his carrying first-class goods.

J. F. Flood will take possession of his recent purchase of the David Fisher estate in Woburn, July 1.

The genial Patrick Welch has been on the sick list with the grip, but we are glad to announce he is much better.

William T. Walke, of Salem, has a grand lot of lilies, rambler roses and other Easter stock, which promise to be the finest he has yet grown.

A. Leuthy will be one of the competitive exhibitors at the midwinter show in Horticultural hall this week. Mr.

M. Thau had a vase of his new red carnation, Lord Baltimore. It seems to have a lead over Harlowarden and is a heavy bloomer.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

M. Crawford, of Cuyahoga Falls, O., has been visiting a son at Oak Park, Ill., a suburb of Chicago.

The Aggeler & Musser Seed Co., Los Angeles, Cal., has issued a special circular, "All About Broom Corn."

The Ewing Seed Co., Nashville, Tenn., is a new concern that is placing contracts for 1910 crops. W. B. Ewing is manager.

According to a leading seedsman, it is not always the early catalogue that catches the order; sometimes it is the book that lies on top of the pile.

The heads of certain flourishing seed houses have found that better results are obtained by concentrating their efforts in a limited territory than by reaching out for the trade of the whole United States.

George Gibbs, Clearbrook, Wash., reports having dug 33,000 young hyacinths grown on an area of only 294 square feet. The bulb growers in the state of Washington have had a wet, mild winter. Frost was all out of the ground February 8 and narcissi peeping through the beds.

The Illinois State Board of Agriculture has figured out that the timothy seed crop of the state for the wear 1909 was 80,066 bushels, valued at $147,278. The largest crop was in 1877, 483,571 bushels, having a value of $604,464, while the most valuable crop was in 1881, with $1,108,980 for 400,124 bushels.

Neither the month nor the year to date have made any new records in the mail order seed trade; things are about normal. A good many people buy seeds at about a certain date each year, regardless of weather conditions, so that the cold has not cut down the mail order business to any great extent, but it takes a January thaw to make the orders run above the average.

SLUIS & GROOT, Enkhuizen, Holland, are sending the trade in America a set of large lithographs of their specialties.

THE Grand Junction Seed Co., of Grand Junction, Colo., has been incorporated with $10,000 capital stock, by Whit Rozelle, Luther N. White and H. M. Cannon.

IT is the truck growers of the southwest who are responsible for the condition of the onion set market; a little later things will be livelier, on both 1909 and 1910 crops.

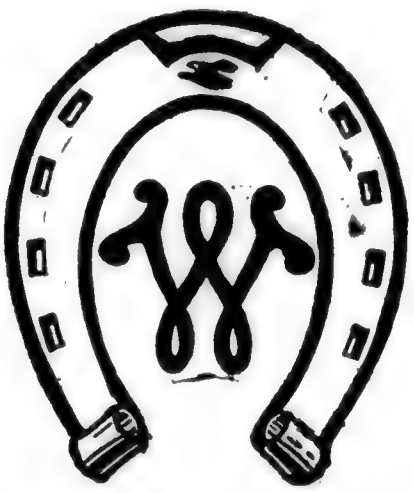
AT Nappanee, Ind., which is in one of the large onion-growing districts, the growers have introduced the custom of holding an annual onion day festival. At the last event of the kind C. A. Doswell, the florist of the town, won first prize on a show case decoration, representing onions in the field.

J. KEUR, of C. Keur & Sons, Hillegom, Holland, after a two months' trip extending as far west as Denver, says the bulb business this year is better than ever; more bulbs are being forced every year, and the use of bulbs for bedding purposes is increasing. Mr. Keur says the new tariff helps the sale of good bulbs, because now the duty on the department stores' mixture is about fifty per cent, while the rate on good florists' sorts amounts to only six to eight per cent at the specific rate of $1 per thousand. At Boston recently Mr. Keur and customers there raised the point at the custom house that hyacinth bulbs should be admitted at 50 cents per thousand under the provision for bulbs not specified. The contention was that the clause, "Hyacinths, astilbe, dielytra, lily of the valley clumps, $2.50 per thousand," should be interpreted literally; that is, as applying to hyacinth clumps, or, in other words, to the mother bulb with the clump of offsets. The contention may get up to the board of general appraisers, but it is doubtful if it can be made to stick.

THE PIETERS-WHEELER SEED CO.

Articles of incorporation have been filed with the secretary of state of California for the incorporation of the Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co., which will take over the seed growing business of A. J. Pieters, at Hollister, Cal. The stock was subscribed in the entirety by the following, who are also directors:

President—A. J. Pieters.
Vice-President—H. M. Pieters.
Secretary—L. W. Wheeler.



Mr. Wheeler is well known in the seed trade, having been for some time manager of Vaughan's Seed Store, New York, and for the past three years identified with California seed growing interests, having been with the Braslan Seed Growers' Co. and having represented A. J. Pieters during the past season.

IMPORTS.

The imports of seeds through the port of New York for the week ending February 12 were as follows:

Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.	Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.
Annatto	175	$2,238	Lycopodium	10	$ 747
Caraway	15	361	Mustard	500	3,978
Cardamom	11	267	Poppy	1,312	6,873
Castor	447	1,832	Rape	115	944
Fennel	74	567	Sugar beet.	300	2,006
Grass	811	6,250	Other	...	3,353

In the same period the imports of bulbs, trees and plants were valued at $1,992; peas, $3,601, and beans, $16,566.

HORSESHOE BRAND PRODUCTS

Do not read Ads. to contradict; nor to believe and take for granted; nor to find talk and discourse; but to weigh and consider. Some are to be glanced at, because they never change, others to be read (with passing interest), but not seriously, and some few to be read wholly and with diligence and attention.

There Are Reasons

why Horseshoe Brand Japan Bulbs are of superior quality. First of all they are produced from the healthiest seed bulbs in the world. They are planted and cultivated by experienced hands under expert supervision; not simply to obtain a bulb of exportable size, but to produce a bulb of superior quality as well. The way to convince yourself is to try them, and we would like to supply Lily Growers with at least a part of their needs for fall delivery this year. Order now if possible.

Announcement

To Our Friends and Patrons:

It has been brought to our attention that certain unscrupulous fellows, representing a certain concern, are spreading false and malicious reports to the effect that we are practically out of business, that we no longer travel, that we are on our "last legs," and that as a business concern, we are about to give up "our ghost."

We wish to announce most emphatically that all these rumors are absolutely false, that we are in the business to stay, that our progress, since the day we started up to the present time, has surpassed our own expectations, that the fellows using such contemptible means, in order "to catch" a few orders, are but short-sighted pygmies, unable to realize the ultimate harm they are causing to themselves and to their own interests.

Verily—"One cannot fool the people all the time."

Nor do we need to deny the malicious reports concerning our credit and business standing. Our creditors both here and abroad will bear us out when we say that our credit is second to none on this or on the European Continent.

We brand these rumors as deliberate and malicious falsehoods, calculated to undermine our business interests. Men employing such means are certainly unworthy of the name "MAN."

Respectfully yours,

SKIDELSKY & IRWIN CO.

WESTERN SEED CORN.

The experiment stations of the western states are warning farmers that the corn for seed is of uncertain quality this season. It is stated that "heavy loss from imperfect seed threatens the next Nebraska corn crop. This loss is variously estimated from $10,000,000 to $15,000,000. Grain men and agriculturists are generally aware of the situation and urge that the farmers make tests of their seed and take special precaution that the fields shall be planted with fertile and productive seed. The immediate source of danger to the crop lies in the effect that the weather conditions have had upon the grain of the state from which the seed for the spring planting will be chosen. The presence of much moisture through a wet fall and hard winter freezes is believed to have rendered sterile a large percentage of the seed, making it totally unfit for planting purposes, or at least so weakening it that the plants reproduced will prove unproductive. The remedy lies in germination tests of each ear to be used for seed. The seed growers of the state are now making, or have completed, tests by which the sterile grain is eliminated. That but a small percentage of the state's grain is produced from the stocks of the seed growers signifies the importance of this same work by the farmer who grows his own seed."

Tests of the corn of the state of Iowa have just been completed at Ames Agricultural college, with the result that Prof. P. G. Holden has declared that the seed is the worst that the state has ever had. The results of the Iowa test are shown in tabular form:

Cauliflower Seed

Wiboltt's Earliest Snowball, No. 34, at $9.00 per lb.; 5 lbs. at $8.00 per lb.

Wiboltt's Extra Early Dwarf Erfurt, at $8.00 per lb.; 5 lbs. at $7.00 per lb.

Wiboltt's Danish Giant, "Dry Weather," at $9.00 per lb.; 5 lbs. at $8.00 per lb.

Section of State.	Percentages—Bad.	Weak.	Strong.
Northern	27	12	61
North Central	18	14	68
South Central	21	16	63
Southern	14	15	71

It is stated that the average of Iowa corn is probably much below that shown in the table, as the seed tested was from the best in each locality. It is assumed that if these conditions exist in Iowa they are duplicated in some degree in eastern Nebraska at least. The seed corn of western Nebraska, because of the drier climate, is likely to have escaped something of the damage that was sustained in the damper eastern section.

NOTES FROM GREAT BRITAIN.

Seed merchants' catalogues for 191[illegible] are now scattered broadcast over the land. In general appearance they differ but little from those of previous years. Many of the leading houses have put plain or embossed gold lettering on the covers, and in lithographed designs the sweet pea still reigns supreme. This has been a favorite for several years and seed merchants show no desire to make a change, as the flower lends itself readily to the purpose and is popular with the public. of sweet peas remain firm and the prices of all culinary peas are advanced.

Still another sweet pea society is likely to be organized. Scotchmen all along have been warm supporters of the National Society. Now, however, they are moving with a view to forming a sweet pea society for Scotland, and with well known enthusiasts like Cuthbertson, Malcolm and Grieve at the helm, there is every prospect of success being achieved.

Edinburgh is the headquarters of two of the leading horticultural societies in Scotland, namely, the Royal Caledonian Horticultural Society and the Scottish Horticultural Association. For some time many of their supporters have been of the opinion that amalgamation would be helpful to horticulture, and conferences on the subject are now being held. Matthew Todd, one of the oldest and best known florists in Edinburgh, has been a member of the council of the Scottish Horticultural Association for thirty years and now desires to retire.

Joseph B. Fuller.

DEATH OF JOSEPH B. FULLER.

Joseph B. Fuller, the veteran seedsman and botanist in the employ of James Vick's Sons, died February 16. Chas. H. Vick's statement, that "the trade has thus lost one of its most esteemed representatives," will be heartily concurred in by hosts of others.

Mr. Fuller was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., October 31, 1827. When he was only 3 years old his family moved to Rochester, traveling by way of the Erie canal and stopping, on their arrival, at the old Rochester house, at the corner of Exchange and Spring streets.

At the age of 14 he was apprenticed to the late Henry O'Reilly, to learn the printers' trade. Later he was with the Genesee Farmer, published by the late James Vick and edited by the late Patrick Barry. Being for years in close relationship with Mr. Vick in the printing office, and the two being drawn together by a mutual love of flowers, he was easily persuaded to engage in the seed business. In 1863 he entered the employ of Mr. Vick, and continued almost uninterruptedly with the Vick firm from that time, until failing health about a year ago necessitated his giving up active work.

Mr. Fuller's influence in the development of the business was scarcely second to that of Mr. Vick. His whole life was bound up in the work and his whole energy devoted to it. For years he had pursued the study of botany, and his extensive knowledge of plants was of great advantage. His knowledge of stocks was extensive and thorough; his judgment and accuracy were without equal; his honesty was unimpeachable. To his perfect integrity and absolute reliability the success of the Vick seed business was in no small degree due. He was a thorough seedsman, farseeing, conscientious and accurate.

During a trip to Europe, in 1888, Mr. Fuller was invited by Carter, Dunnett & Beale to inspect their trials of peas. His opinion was asked as to the quality of one particular variety. His reply was: "It's a daisy." This bit of American slang evidently impressed the famous English seedsmen, for a few years later this variety was introduced as Carter's Daisy, and fully justified Mr. Fuller's opinion of its good qualities.

His genial manner made him hosts of friends in the trade. Many a long chat over cigars did he and the veteran seedsman, William Meggatt, have in the old Vick Seed House on East avenue, in the eighties. Indeed, Mr. Fuller's geniality was one of his most prominent characteristics. He had a good story apropos to every occasion. His reminiscences of the early days of Rochester, and of the volunteer fire department of which he was a member, were particularly enjoyable. He was a member of Valley Lodge, No. 109, A. F. and A. M., since 1853, and Hamilton Chapter, No. 62, R. A. M.

He was also a member of the Rochester Academy of Science, giving devoted attention to the work of the Botanical Section of this society. In 1896, when the academy published a list of the plants of Monroe county, it was difficult to find a compositor sufficiently familiar with botanical terms to set up the list in a satisfactory manner. Mr. Fuller came to the rescue, and, though it was years since he had stood at the case, he set all the type for this work of more than 150 pages, a remarkable achievement for a man of his years, as well as from a typographical standpoint. He was an undoubted authority on all botanical questions, and nowhere will his loss be more felt than in the Botanical Section.

With his fellow-workers in the seed business he was always pleasant, kind, patient and forbearing, with the old-time courtesy of manner so seldom seen nowadays. In his death they feel that "a good man has fallen."

AGAINST FREE SEEDS.

The following resolutions were unanimously adopted at the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, February 15, 1910:

A resolve in favor of the repeal of the laws authorizing the free distribution of seeds by the government.

Whereas, after careful and painstaking investigation of the subject by men who were well qualified for that work, it appears that the need for the free distribution of seeds by the government no longer exists; that such free distribution is at present attended by so many abuses that few whom the act was intended to benefit do, in fact, receive any benefit therefrom; and

Whereas, enormous quantities of seeds are annually sent by congressmen through the mails, under the franking privilege, thereby adding greatly to the expense of the post-office department without contributing anything towards its support; and many of those to whom seeds are sent are not engaged in agriculture or gardening in any way or form; and in all these ways the government is put to great expense, and the aggregate benefits received by all, do not warrant the expenses incurred. Now, therefore, be it

Resolved that we, the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, in regular meeting assembled, do hereby favor the repeal of all laws providing for the free distribution of seeds by government; that we, individually, will urge the congressmen from our respective districts to use their influence to procure the repeal of such laws;

And be it further Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the records of this meeting, and that a copy be forwarded by the secretary of this club to the senators and representatives of this commonwealth in Washington, D. C.

ADULTERATED SEEDS.

Under date of February 16 the Secretary of Agriculture made the publication as required by law of the names of those from whom the Department had procured adulterated seeds. The list is materially shorter than in previous years and does not contain the name of a single one of the big seed houses of national reputation; the published parties mostly are those doing a local business and are probably more sinned against than sinning; they merely neglected to have the purchases tested, so did not know what they were selling, though nineteen of the forty firms have been caught before. The Secretary's circular comments on the situation as follows:

"During the calendar year 1909 seeds of red clover, alfalfa, orchard grass, and Kentucky bluegrass were obtained in the open market in accordance with the following paragraph in the act of Congress making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture:

The Secretary of Agriculture is hereby directed to obtain in the open market samples of seeds of grass, clover, or alfalfa, test the same, and if any such seeds are found to be adulterated or misbranded, or any seeds of Canada bluegrass (Poa compressa) are obtained under any other name than Canada bluegrass or Poa compressa, to publish the results of the tests, together with the names of the persons by whom the seeds were offered for sale.

"In carrying out the provisions of this act, 1,814 samples of seed were secured and analyzed under the direction of Mr. Edgar Brown, Botanist in Charge of the Seed Laboratory, and publication is here made of the analyses of the sixty-nine samples found to be adulterated or misbranded, together with the

We never had a dissatisfied customer with Rawson's Asters; we need no better recommendation. Rawson's Aster Seeds are fresh, plump and of unapproachable quality.

NOVELTIES FOR 1910

ASTER, AURORA. The most unique colored Aster ever introduced. Yellow, passing to old rose. The flower-petals first appearing are shaped similar to those of the "Comet" type and are a perfect yellow, but when the flower is fully expanded it takes on a tint of delicate fresh rose, which the artist calls "old rose." The plant grows fully 24 inches high in a pyramid form, and produces any quantity of double blooms 3½ inches across. Pkt., 35 cts.

ASTER, CACTUS CELESTINE. A new form of petal, resembling exactly a true Cactus Dahlia. The color is a most delicate lilac of unusual beauty. Pkt., 20 cts.

ASTER, CROWN OF GOLD. A pure, delicate yellow flower, of good size and borne on stout stems, resembling in shape the Victoria Aster. Its color is original and did not exist heretofore. Pkt., 20 cts.

ASTER, RAWSON'S NEW GLORY.

(Introduced by us in 1909.)

The most perfected type of Giant Comet that can possibly be produced. The flowers invariably measure 6 inches across and are always double. In our whole field last year we could not discover a single plant which showed the least sign of disease. The long stems are graceful and not stiff. Colors are distinct and most desirable for commercial use.

	⅛ oz.	¼ oz.	oz.
Pure White	$0.60	$1.00	$3.50
Delicate Lavender	.60	1.00	3.50
Shrimp Pink	.60	1.00	3.50
Finest Mixed	.50	.80	3.00

ASTER, TRIUMPH OF PARIS. The nearest approach to a yellow aster. The form is a single comet with a quilled center. The petals consist of two rows of glistening white, while the quills are a clear yellow. Stems range 2 feet in height and produce the giant blooms singly. A grand aster for the florist. ⅛ oz., $1.00.

THE CREGO ASTER. This aster is the nearest approach to a chrysanthemum of any flower grown. It is unusually large in size, running 4 to 5 inches in diameter when well grown. The petals are about double the length of those in the older varieties, and are twisted and curled in such a manner as to give the blossoms an exceedingly beautiful fluffy appearance. The plants are large and vigorous, producing their blossoms on very long stems. The central stalk is very short, the branches breaking out very near the ground, are generally clean their entire length, needing little or no disbudding, making it the easiest variety to prepare for market I have ever seen. Our seed is direct from the originator.

Colors: Pure White	$1.00	$3.50	$6.00
Shell Pink. (Exact shade of Enchantress Carnation)	1.00	3.50	6.00
Dark Pink	1.00	3.50	6.00

ASTER, RAWSON'S PINK BEAUTY. Unquestionably a grand and valuable florist aster and mainly so on account of its color and massive flower. The form of flower is a perfected Victoria which never shows a center. The color is so intensely beautiful that a graphic description can never do it justice. Delicate peach-tinted pink with a glowing shade of rich pink towards the center. No other aster can boast of such a pleasing combination. The stem of this flower is fairly tall and very erect. The plant branches from the bottom. ⅛ oz., 60 cts.; oz., $4.00.

ASTER, GEISHA. This strain originated in Japan and this can easily be seen in the formation of the flower. We were so much impressed with the attention the visitors to Rawson's Dahlia Farm paid to this fantastic type that we were actually forced to catalogue it and now believe it has a great future. The plant is extremely robust and produces stout stems growing very erect and carrying their gigantic flower formed of fine needle-shaped tubed petals around a conspicuous central disc. The very open center of this flower has an immense charm which appeals to the public, and as we must first of all please them, this is a point in its favor.

STANDARD VARIETIES

DAWN OF DAY

(Novelty, 1908.) The earliest flowering Aster in existence. Fine white, perfect in form and growth, long branching stems and flowers; often three weeks ahead of Queen of the Market. It is of branching habit and very full and if freely cut will continue to bear blooms until late in fall. See last week's Review, page 8. ⅛ oz., 50c; oz., $3.00.

RAWSON'S NEW MIDSUMMER ASTER.

This is our own introduction. We have received high praise from all growers. It has most graceful formed flowers, which are borne on immense long stems full two weeks ahead of the Late Branching Aster, and the plants will continue to bear flowers as late.

The colors are true and hardly any open-centered flowers among them.

RAWSON'S DAYBREAK. This variety must not be compared with the strain offered elsewhere and a trial will convince the ever-so-critical of its superiority. ⅛ oz., 40c; oz., $2.50.

RAWSON'S PURITY. (Pure white.) Of the same type as Daybreak, differing only in color, which is a pure glistening white. Just as free-flowering and symmetrical as Daybreak and undoubtedly unsurpassed as a white bedding variety. ⅛ oz., 50c; oz., $3.00.

ASTER, RAWSON'S LATE BRANCHING. Flowers are very large in size and borne on long, stiff stems. It is one of the best and most popular varieties for late flower markets.

TWO NEW SALVIAS FOR 1910

ZURICH. The best salvia yet introduced. Plants grow very compact, show little foliage and bear heavy flower spikes, which are thickly laden with bright scarlet flowers. Flowers early in July and remains in bloom with later varieties, ⅛ oz., 75c; oz., $5.00.

SALVIA SPLENDENS. KING OF CARPETS. The best dwarf bedding Salvia on the market today, outrivaling even "Zurich." The plants branch from the bottom and to such extent that the main stem is never visible. All side branches droop completely to the ground, making the whole plant a perfect half ball of fire. The plant grows but 15 inches high and flowers even earlier than "Zurich." ⅛ oz., $1.00; oz., $6.00.

The veteran Salvia grower, Mr. F. Bedman, says: "About the Salvia, 'King of Carpets.' It has done very well considering the dry weather that we have had, and I consider it one of the grandest dwarf salvias that I ever saw."

names of the seedsmen by whom they were offered for sale.

"Of the 359 samples of alfalfa seed secured, 107 contained dodder. No lots were found to be either adulterated or misbranded.

"Of the 630 samples of red clover seed obtained, fifty-four, or less than ten per cent, were found to contain dodder, as contrasted with more than fifty per cent last year. The fact that a comparatively small number of samples of red clover were found to contain dodder this year is no doubt chiefly due to the low price of clover seed in the spring of 1909, little low-grade seed being imported from European sources. No samples of red clover seed were found to be adulterated or misbranded.

"Of the 379 samples obtained as orchard grass seed, fifty-five were found to be adulterated with seed of meadow fescue or rye-grass, or both. This is practically the same number of adulterated samples of orchard grass seed that was found in the calendar year 1908, showing that there has been little change in the amount of adulterated orchard grass seed on the market.

"Of the 446 samples of seed obtained as Kentucky bluegrass, fourteen were found to be wholly or in part seed of Canada bluegrass. This shows a decided decrease in the amount of adulterated seed of Kentucky bluegrass on the market as compared with last year, when thirty-nine samples were found. This decrease is no doubt partly due to the fact that there was less difference in price between Canada bluegrass and Kentucky bluegrass seed this year than in former years. Germination tests of this seed showed a variation from zero to ninety per cent, with an average of sixty-two per cent.

"On the whole, the results of this work for the year are very encouraging. No adulterant was found in the seeds of the two staple forage crops, red clover and alfalfa; there was a decided reduction in the number of samples of adulterated Kentucky bluegrass seed, and no increase occurred in the number of samples of adulterated orchard grass seed. The percentage of samples of red clover seed which contained dodder was only one-fifth of what it was a year ago. Of the forty firms whose names are published in this circular as selling adulterated seed, only nineteen have been previously published for the same reason, indicating that the result of publication has been to deter dealers from continuing the sale of adulterated seeds. Of the nineteen names in this circular which have previously appeared, only eight have appeared more than once.

"As has been formerly stated in these publications, this Department will examine and report promptly as to the presence of adulterants and dodder in any samples of seed submitted for that purpose. According to the location of the sender, these may be submitted to the Seed Laboratory, at Washington, D. C., or to any of the following laboratories maintained through the coöperation of this Department: Branch Seed Testing Laboratory, Agricultural Experiment Station, Columbia, Mo.; Branch Seed Testing Laboratory, Agricultural Experiment Station, Lincoln, Neb.; Branch Seed Testing Laboratory, Oregon Agricultural College, Corvallis, Ore."

DETROIT.

The Market.

Market conditions remain about the same as reported last week. Business was, perhaps, not quite so brisk, causing a little piling up of stock. Carnations especially are becoming somewhat of a glut. Tulips in yellow and pink also are too plentiful. Roses are in good demand and by no means abundant. Many out of town shipments of roses arrive daily at the various stores, to take care of the demand.

Club Meeting.

A fairly well attended meeting of the Detroit Florists' Club was held Monday evening, February 21. The special event of the evening was a paper entitled "Cyclamen Culture," by Christ Winterich, of Defiance, O. The subject was covered in a most thorough manner, including every little detail in the successful culture of cyclamen, from the careful selection of the seed bearing plants to the packing of the large plants full of flowers for long distance shipment. After reading his paper, Mr. Winterich was the target for a fire of questions, each of which he answered in a most able manner.

A new start was given the fall flower show when a goodly sum was guaranteed by the members present. A special meeting was called, to be held Wednesday evening, February 23, at the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, to further the plans for the show.

Various Notes.

B. Schroeter has been having a steady run of funeral work, which has more than kept all hands busy. Mr. Schroeter is contemplating the purchase of a large delivery auto.

E. A. Fetters' window was again prettily trimmed this week, in honor of Washington's birthday. Mr. Fetters spends perhaps more time in trimming his window than most Detroit florists, but this is one way of advertising where the results can be traced.

Breitmeyer's have an immense store and more window space than the average store and they always manage to have them well filled with a nice lot of well grown plants. Their store is always kept most attractive, with beautiful vases filled with choice flowers.

The Detroit Cut Flower Supply House is handling a nice lot of carnations.

STRAWBERRY FOR FORCING.

What is the best variety of strawberry for forcing? F. E.

I have found Marshall to be much the best all-around variety for forcing in Massachusetts. Nick Ohmer does well, also Sample, but neither will compare with Marshall in size, color or flavor. I am this year trying Golden Gate, which seems promising. If restricted to one variety, I would certainly grow Marshall. W. N. C.

DISEASED LETTUCE.

I am mailing you today a package of three lettuce plants and I should like to have you tell me the cause of the disease and the remedy, if there is any. It is spreading over my house fast. There never was any of the disease until last month. The first crop I raised this winter on the same ground was fine, with plants weighing from four to twelve ounces. The samples enclosed are the worst I could find. W. K. S.

The samples of lettuce are badly attacked by a species of fungus. All fungous diseases must start from spores, which correspond to the germs of diseases of animals. These spores seem to be ever present and waiting for an opportunity to take hold and spread all over a crop. A fungus is really a plant-like growth, which lives on the leaves of plants instead of in the soil. Conditions which are just right for the plants are not so for the fungus, and it is when the plants do not have the ideal conditions that these spores of fungous diseases germinate into life and rapidly spread over a crop.

The principal causes of the spread of such diseases are insufficient ventilation and too much moisture on the foliage and on the surface of the soil. If the plants are packed closely the conditions are usually worse, because the circulation of air among them is hindered and they remain dark and wet much of the time, giving the diseases an opportunity to become active. One of the best preventives is plenty of fresh air, not admitting a strong, cold draft, but keeping the temperature of the houses even and at the proper figures. It is necessary, also, to give close attention to watering, being careful not to water too often, but watering well when you do water, thoroughly wetting the soil, so it will not need it again for several days. Frequent light waterings keep the surface and the foliage wet most of the time. Watering should be done in the forenoon and the houses should be ventilated each day, if only a trifle, and kept open as much of the day as possible, considering the temperature.

Too high a temperature also makes plants weak and soft, and thus an easy prey for disease.

Your plants, however, look as if they had received good care, except that possibly they had too much water sprinkled over the leaves. Try keeping them drier and keeping the ventilators open more of the time. Pull out the unsalable plants and destroy them. Scrape off the top soil where they were removed. Watch the temperature and keep it even and about the same each day. A night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees, with the day temperature 10 to 15 degrees higher when the sun is shining, is about right. On cloudy days the temperature should not be much higher than at night. A mixture of air-slaked lime and sulphur is excellent to use for dusting over the surface of the soil to kill off and keep down the disease, but it is better not to get much on the foliage of plants when they are of good size. ONIONS FROM FIELD-SOWN SEED.

Kindly inform me whether Prizetaker onion seed, sown directly in the field here, in northern Illinois, would produce good, marketable onions. H. B.

Yes, good onions for market can be so grown, provided the ground is suitable for onion growing. The Prizetaker is similar in all ways to the other Globe sorts, and will usually do well where the soil and conditions of weather would make a good crop of such varieties. There is thought to be a considerable gain in size and in earliness of maturity in Prizetaker onions, if the seed is sown in beds early in spring and they are transplanted later. The gain, however, does not always compensate for the extra expense entailed, and in the north the usual custom is to sow the seeds where the crop is to be made.

The Prizetaker is not as good a keeper as the other Globe varieties and is not as safe stock to plant if the idea is to hold the onions over winter. For fall sales, however, the Prizetaker is a good onion.

Club Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the Twin City Florists' and Gardeners' Club, held February 15, was decidedly interesting. After receiving the reports of the flower show committees, it was decided to hold the first annual show in Minneapolis next fall. The guarantors, mostly Minneapolis growers and retailers, will have active management of the show, but a committee appointed by the club will prepare the premium list.

J. P. Jorgenson, of Minneapolis, read an instructive paper on "Rose Grafting," illustrating it with specimens.

L. Boeglin exhibited some choice Cineraria stellata and C. stellata hybrida multiflora.

A. Currie, Jr., of Milwaukee, was present and addressed the meeting.

Mr. Van Zonnwold, of Sassenheim, Holland, was also present and offered $25 as a special prize at the coming flower show.

Various Notes.

Holm & Olson are planning to erect five new houses in the spring. Work will be commenced as soon as possible. This range will be used principally for mums. O. J. Olson is in Chicago.

The second annual dance of the Twin City Florists' and Gardeners' Club, held at Minneapolis, February 7, was an enjoyable affair, participated in by 250 belonging to the trade. The Minneapolis boys, who arranged the affair, are to be congratulated on the magnificent success of the affair.

G. A. Clausen, of Albert Lea, was a caller Saturday, February 19.

The St. Paul and Minneapolis bowlers will meet in the latter city Thursday evening, February 24, So far the teams are even on games, although St. Paul is nearly 200 ahead on total pins in the series. Now is the opportunity for sweet revenge by the Minneapolis brethren.

CHESTER, PA.—M. E. Pierce recently celebrated his seventy-second birthday, or it might be more accurate to say that his friends celebrated it for him. They secretly met in one of his greenhouses and arranged seventy-two candles as part of a floral design surmounting a huge cake, and the illumination so startled Mr. Pierce that he at first thought the building was on fire.

ROCHESTER, MINN.—J. H. Shelton has been pushing the valentine-birthday business for years, sending a bouquet each year to several of his customers whose birthdays were February 14.

OMAHA, NEB.—Lewis Henderson reports that the general business has been good since the holidays, with fine weather and the stock coming in abundantly and selling well. St. Valentine's day was a busy one for the florists. Mr. Henderson says that Cupid seems to have discovered that flowers are most appealing to the hearts of his victims and the florists have profited thereby. The social part of the Omaha Florists' Club has been somewhat at a standstill; however, they are preparing for a social gathering in the near future.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1909-10: Pres., F. H. Stannard, Ottawa, Kan.; Vice-pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-fifth annual meeting, Denver, June, 1910.

CHERRY isn't as scarce as it has been some seasons.

W. A. PETERSON is the only landscape man of the campus commission of the Northwestern University.

ORLANDO HARRISON, of Berlin, Md., says the nurseryman is the hardest worked man you will find; hardest worked both physically and mentally.

NOT a few nurserymen, for one reason or another, have become orchardists as well, usually to their advantage financially as well as educationally.

CHARLES F. SCOTT, of Kansas, is chairman of the congressional committee on agriculture that has before it the bill for the inspection of foreign-grown nursery stock.

ANY florist who will plant some of the best modern lilacs in his home grounds will find that the plants in bloom will bring a most gratifying number of orders.

THE Illinois Outdoor Improvement Association has issued a pamphlet by Jens Jensen, Chicago, entitled "Improving a Small Country Place," reprinted from one of the general magazines.

ALL the wholesale nurserymen are anticipating a first-class clean-up this spring, and are asking good prices for many items, but there appears to be an excellent supply of stock in the storage houses.

APPLE orcharding in the west and northwest promises to increase rapidly for years. Until the supply of fruit reduces the price to much less than it now is in the city markets, hundreds of thousands of trees will be called for each season.

J. R. MAYHEW, the well known nurseryman at Waxahachie, Tex., thinks that guaranteeing nursery stock to live is wrong, both in principle and practice; he says the custom is responsible for a large part of the troubles that beset the trade and become a serious matter after such an extremely dry spring as that of last year.

Will you give me the botanical name for the hedge plant, specimen of which is sent under separate cover?

MINNEAPOLIS.

There has not been much doing in the line of receptions, etc., since Lent began. Small sales are the vogue, including simple flowers for the home or a bunch of violets to wear, with an occasional small dinner decoration. These, with funeral work, occasion but little demand. The bright weather has brought out a fine lot of stock and helped along the Easter stock, so that there cannot be much drawback between now and the time the sales will begin.

The club meeting February 15 brought the final returns of the appropriations for the flower show, to be held next November. Minneapolis brought in $15,000, an amount away ahead of that guaranteed by St. Paul. The show, therefore, will be held in this city, and promises to be enthusiastically taken hold of.

The Market.

Climatic conditions have materially changed since the last report—spring is evidenced on all sides, lengthening of the days affords more sunshine and produces amazing results in the stock.

Tulips and daffodils are becoming more plentiful and sell well, either cut or in pans. On account of St. Valentine's day the demand for the red varieties exceeded the supply. Violets seem to be in particular favor, judging from advance orders. Genistas are coming in fine shape and some attractive windows are to be seen. The Chinese New Year created a demand for azaleas and Roman hyacinths—no other flower is considered by the quaint people. A special effort is always made to have a batch in flower for that occasion.

Carnations are of fine quality, with a brisk demand. Pink Delight has many redeeming qualities and may be the successor to the famous Enchantress. Roses are in fine form and color, as well as of great demand, with a daily clean-up.

February has been a banner month so far, especially in funeral work. The changing of the seasons usually causes a great many deaths. On account of the scarcity of flowers the florist finds it expedient to raise the standard in funeral work; besides, the public has become educated to choicer arrangements and designs.

Orders for rose bushes and shrubs are being booked rapidly. Portland is known as the "Rose City" throughout the States and the people pride themselves on well kept yards and hedges. Oregon rose fame was heralded from Cuba a few days ago, accompanied with a large order for stock.

Various Notes.

Mr. Currie, of Currie Bros. Co., Milwaukee, Wis., called on the trade in the interest of the bulb trade with satisfactory results.

Mr. Lundy, representing W. A. Manda, was in town last week to discuss the orchid situation.

Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Murdoch, well known to the Pittsburg trade, are spending some time in this city. While not actively engaged in the business, they have not lost interest in it.

Robert Fulton, representing Henry & Lee, of New York, called on the trade in search of bulb orders. E. R. C.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The weather continues to be on the mend and it appears as though the cold nights and days are over for the season. Consequently we may expect, within the next few weeks, an avalanche of all kinds of stock. There has been quite a reduction in carnations during the last few days and roses will follow suit shortly. Violets are now at the height of their season and are in abundant supply. Fifty cents per dozen bunches is the rate charged to the stores and Princess of Wales is practically the only variety seen.

Roses, although not unusually plentiful, are in better form and color than they have been at any time this year. Daffodils are in their prime and are the most popular flower at present with the flower-buying public. They are both good and cheap and are being used in large quantities for window decorations. The best flowers cost the retailers from 75 cents to $1.50 per hundred, while Paper White and other varieties of narcissi sell at about half those prices. Wild flowers of all kinds are about two weeks later than usual, but the last few days have seen a full supply on exhibition. The advent of Lent has made quite a difference in the demand for stock. The brighter colored roses and carnations are not selling so well as are the lighter colored stock, which are being well cleaned up for funeral work.

Business on the whole is better than it

G.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

The weather continues bright and sunny, although it is much cooler. Rain is much needed and anxiously looked for, the rainfall being not nearly as much as at this time last year. February is a spring month here, and the sowing of all kinds of seeds is going on rapidly. All of the flower stores handle seeds, and have them plentifully displayed in their windows, many of the seeds being from eastern and middle-west firms. Apricot and prune trees are in bloom, and vases of the flowers are to be seen in the stores, looking decidedly spring-like. At one of the stores there was a beautiful display of freesias, the first, I believe, from outside. The flowers grow more upright and on stiffer stems than when forced.

All kinds of flowers are abundant, with prices within the reach of everybody. The greenhouse carnations are large and fine. All of the street stands are stocked again with field-grown carnations, which have recovered from the check given by the frosts and are blooming heavily. Sweet peas are greatly in evidence, some of the new ones being especially beautiful in coloring. Violets, sweet peas and spring flowers seem to have the preference.

The city is full of tourists, who are all wearing violets. To buy them at 5 cents for a good-sized bunch is a treat, after the eastern prices, and no one passes them by.

All of the flower stores report a big business, with an unusual amount of funeral work.

Various Notes.

Frank Lichtenberger had one of the largest decorations ever done in California. It was for the automobile show at Fiesta park, which was roofed and floored for the occasion. The effect was of a red-wood forest. Twenty tons of red-wood branches and bark were brought from the Santa Cruz mountains. All of the poles with which the 90,000 square feet of canvas were supported were transformed into huge red-wood trees, with spreading branches. Scenery, twelve feet high, on the four sides, represented typical California views, mountains, big trees, California gardens and deserts being portrayed. About 200 large bay trees, palms, etc., were used between the booths, while 2,000 yards of red-wood wreathing, brightened with many beautifully colored electric lights, were festooned among the trees. The whole effect was indescribable.

A. F. Borden, who has an attractive flower store on Third street, has his nursery in Hollywood. He has, besides, several lath houses and five glass houses. Four of the latter were built last summer over carnations growing in the field. They have done well, but he will put them in raised benches this summer. The lath houses contain smilax, asparagus and a general stock. Roses, sweet peas and other flowers are grown outside.

J. S. Glasscock has a pretty flower store in Pasadena, with mission finish and furnishings. A brick floor carries out the idea still further. He carries a good stock and has an excellent trade. Miss Clarke is the able manager, and she has two other young ladies as helpers.

The Park Hill Floral Co., of which Mr. Smith is proprietor, also has a retail place in Pasadena, with a nursery at Hemet, Cal.

The flower store which was started in Long Beach by two ladies a couple of years ago, under the name of The Fernery, and which was afterward taken by H. N. Gage, has been discontinued.

S. A. C.

BRIDGEPORT, CONN.—G. C. Bouton & Son, of 408 Warren street, who began business here on a small scale in 1901, have purchased an acre of ground in a first-class central location, and have begun operations there by erecting one house, 20x100 feet. Their business is increasing steadily, both in cut flowers and bedding plants. They also report that other florists in town seem to be having a prosperous season, with a good outlook for Easter.

FRANKLIN, PA.—The Bell Floral Co. recently had the decoration for the Shriners' banquet at the Park hotel. There were about 100 guests present, including some nobles high in the order. The decorations were in red and white carnations, with red carnation boutonnieres as placements. The tables were further decorated with cakes in the shape of a red fez with tassel. The Bell Floral Co. also reports an excellent Valentine's day trade, especially in violets and small corsage bouquets, and say that they sold more violets than were ever before seen in their town in one day. They also sold many violets at wholesale in the surrounding towns.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

Buffalo has experienced the heaviest fall of snow in twenty-six years and perhaps longer, as the records have been kept only since 1884. Whether this has affected business or not, nobody knows, but everybody has been pleased and, with the exception of the last few days, trade has been good. Bulbous stock and carnations have piled up considerably. Last week one store sold carnations at 50 cents for two dozen. It is early for sales of this kind, but they will come when the commission house is crowded.

Various Notes.

Last week Buffalo lost one of its oldest florists, James Buxton. Further particulars will be found in this week's obituary columns.

The Florists' Club will hold the annual banquet March 1, at the Iroquois hotel. Everything possible is being done by the committee to have this a grand success, and it rests with the members to be present and make it such.

Harry A. Bunyard, of New York, and Arnold Ringier, of Chicago, were visitors last week.

Mr. Edgar, formerly of Pittsburg, has taken a position with Miss Rebstock as manager. Mr. Gibson, whom Mr. Edgar succeeds, has left for the coast.

J. Benson Stafford has gone to New York for a few days.

It is reported that Arthur E. Beyer, now manager of Stroh's Flower Shop, will take up the same position with the Park Floral Co., of Denver.

A. J. Reichert has contracts for spring openings that will use 900 palms. Their orders include most of the large dry goods stores. R. A. S.

W. J. Smith has purchased the business and greenhouses of W. A. Neubigging at 233 Dearborn street and running through to 152 East street. Mr. Smith has added a forcing house for lilies, has installed a new boiler, and intends to erect a new house after the spring rush.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Business for the last two weeks has been only fair. The bulk of the business has been for funerals, which have been numerous. The opening of Lent and the extremely bad weather which we have had for the last two weeks has had a bad effect. We had the heaviest snowfall in years last week, sixteen inches falling in two days. This was followed by zero weather, and delivering was a hardship. Valentine's day probably saw an increase in sales over last year, but this day is by no means what it should be to the florist.

Various Notes.

The F. J. Benthey Co., of New Castle, suffered a severe loss on account of the heavy snow last week. A house 30x200 collapsed, causing a loss of about $4,000.

Baur & Smith report business heavy in carnation and geranium cuttings. They are also having heavy sales on their new carnation, Shasta.

A. Wiegand & Sons have a fine lot of lilies for Easter.

Walter Bertermann spent a few days in Chicago last week, attending the auto show.

Visitors last week included Mr. Mountz, with Reed & Keller, New York; Fred Heinl, of Terre Haute; Paul Berkowitz, of Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia; B. Eschner and W. J. Farney, of M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia.

The trustees of Woodruff place have decided to plant hardy shrubbery in the drives, instead of bedding plants. This job amounted to about $500 a year and they expect to spend about $1,500 for hardy stuff this year. H. L. W.

MARSHFIELD, WIS.—Arno Beer, aged 20 years, son of H. J. Beer, died February 11, 1910.

Easter Lilies

500 plants just right for Easter, buds starting to lay down, 3 to 6 buds to plant, 18 to 24 in. high from top of pots, will stretch 6 to 8 in. before Easter, 10c per bud straight.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

At the last meeting of the Rochester Commercial Florists' Association, held in its rooms in the Cutler building, proposals to alter the constitution of the organization were adopted and the name of the society was changed to the Rochester Florists' Association. The constitution, as changed, admits as members not only commercial florists but amateur florists, nurserymen, seedsmen, professional gardeners and others whose occupations are allied to the common pursuit of a florist.

Other minor changes in the laws of the society were adopted and three trustees, as follows, were elected: F. R. Schlegel, Charles Suhr and J. O. Pridman. In the absence of President F. W. Vick, Charles H. Vick presided.

It was announced that the annual dinner of the society will be held sometime in March, during the visit of the executive committee of the S. A. F. to this city. The committee will spend considerable time here, making the necessary arrangements for the annual convention of the national organization, which will meet in this city in August. Seven new members were elected to the association, making the membership almost 150. A bowling club was organized and other steps were taken to increase the social aspects of the association.

The following committees were appointed by President Vick: Entertainment and essays, H. B. Stringer, John Dunbar, C. H. Vick, R. G. Salter; exhibition, C. H. Vick, G. B. Hart, F. J. Keller, A. H. Salter, J. M. Keller, E. P. Wilson; membership, C. H. Ogsten, F. R. Schlegel, W. L. Keller, Charles Suhr; auditing, E. S. Osborne, W. H. Dildine, G. T. Boucher; bowling and sports, A. F. Vick, H. B. Weller, G. J. Keller, Walter Salmon; banquet committee, G. B. Hart, E. S. Osborne, E. P. Wilson.

ADMIRATION

This carnation we offer to the trade as being one of the finest Carnations of any color that we know of up to date. Being a beautiful shade of pink, somewhat lighter than Winona, having that beautiful satin finish, always showing up well either in natural or artificial light. Plants benched in August are now coming into full crop, carrying from 10 to 20 buds. We have been cutting since September 10th. As a money maker you will find no equal.

The size of the flower is 3 to 3½ inches, excellent form, well built up in the center, with the petals so arranged as to make it stand the general requirements of a good fancy commercial variety. A grand keeper and shipper.

The habit is ideal, upright with no surplus grass and every shoot going into flower. Its freedom and earliness make it nearly the ideal carnation. The calyx is very tough and seldom bursts. Can be handled with great success either from the field or grown inside all summer. No one has to be an expert to handle this variety. It scored 86 points at the American Carnation Society meeting at Indianapolis, January 27 to 28, 1909.

Price, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

FLORIST PETUNIAS

Every florist having a design trade has felt the difficulty of getting suitable flowers for the work during hot weather, when roses and carnations are barely presentable. After years of selection we have found three varieties of Double Petunias, No. 1, Pure White; No. 2, Clear Shining Pink; No. 3, Pure Lavender, which have made us more money for the labor expended than anything we have ever handled. The flowers are large, 4¼ to 6 inches in diameter, and as a keeper during hot weather beats anything we have ever tried, while the enormous quantity of blooms they produce makes the cost practically nothing. We find indoor culture suits them best. Price, 2-inch pot plants, $1.50 per doz.; one dozen of each of the three varieties for $4.00.

DAYTON, OHIO.

The Market.

There has been no decided change in the condition of business during the last two weeks, there being a brisk demand which has kept stock on the move. The supply of carnations has been sufficient to meet all requirements, likewise daffodils, Romans, narcissi, lilies and lily of the valley; but roses, though a little more abundant, as yet have not been able to compete with the demand. Dull weather has prevailed, and it has had a telling effect on stock, especially roses.

Various Notes.

Dayton was visited, February 16 and 17, by one of the heaviest snowstorms it has experienced in sixty years, the snowfall being about twenty inches on the level. Traffic of all kinds was blocked for many hours. Fortunately none of the florists suffered from the effects of the storm.

George Bartholomew went to Chicago last week on a two days' business trip. While there he was a visitor to Poehlmann Bros. Co., George M. Garland Co., John C. Moninger Co., and the Foley Mfg. Co.

The Miami Valley Nurserymen's Association held its annual banquet at the Phillips House February 16. Notwithstanding the disagreeable weather, there was a large attendance.

Mrs. E. Young has been on the sick list for the last week.

The Heiss Co. reports that business with them has been most satisfactory, considering weather conditions.

Word has been received from Mrs. Hendrichs that she is enjoying her visit in New Orleans, La., with Mr. and Mrs. Cook. She attended the Rex ball, with Herman Cook and Miss Carrie Cook.

Recent visitors have been I. Rosnosky, representing Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, and Ralph M. Ward, of New York city. R. A. B.

ADAMS, MASS.—A J. Boothman will this season put up three iron frame greenhouses, 33x58, King construction.

Headquarters for Easter Plants

Prepare for Easter!

From whom will we purchase our Easter supply?

THE BEST EVER.

Better than ever are the plants whose gleaming
Blossoms and leaves shine bright in Aschmann's store,
Flowers of the kind of which we are always dreaming,
More nearly perfect than all grown before;
Lilies with whiter sheen, azaleas richly tinted,
Ferns with their lacy fronds like bridal veils.
The araucarias' branches fruit with dollars minted
For florists' use after the Easter sales.

THIS IS OUR CATALOGUE.

This seems now to be the daily talk of every florist. "I know what I am going to do," a wise man remarked the other day. "I have been so often deceived I will be no more, but I shall send in my order direct to our friend Godfrey Aschmann. He shall be my man this Easter. He has everything full and plenty and what he advertises is no BLUFF. We can always depend on him to get what we need, and cheap too. As much as we know, he goes himself to Europe and selects in Belgium the cream of Azaleas, Palms and Araucarias. He does all that for the sake of his customers, to please them."

An immense stock of choice Easter plants, blooming Easter week, or earlier, if desired, are now ready for immediate shipment. Come yourself or mail your order direct to headquarters.

Our reputation in growing Easter plants for the wholesale market, to which we ship all over the entire country, Canada and Mexico, from the Atlantic to the Pacific Oceans, for many years past, is sufficient guarantee to prove our ability.

Go to Headquarters for Azaleas

Azalea Indica is a specialty with us, grown for us under contract by an Azalea specialist in Belgium for the last twenty years. Have three houses full of the choicest. Only best well known American varieties are imported, planted in the fall as soon as they arrive from Belgium into 6-in., 7 and 8-in. pots, placed in greenhouses and kept cool in the winter and are now in excellent condition, covered with buds, just right for Easter. Please bear in mind the fact (mostly unknown to some azalea consumers) that fully 30 per cent to 40 per cent of the newly imported azaleas in dormant state will lose their buds and leaves during sea voyage and during winter up to February 1, and have to be kept over for another year. We ship only good stock, full of buds and flowers, and, therefore, you can't expect an azalea at this time as big and as cheap as if you would buy them in dormant state in the fall.

What is the name of the best double pink azalea? Mme. Van der Cruyssen is the name, originated by the well-known azalea specialist Mr. Van der Cruyssen of Belgium. Millions are raised every year and shipped to every point of the globe from Belgium. We have a big stock on hand of this so well-known and favorite variety in tip-top condition. Every plant is as round as an apple, covered with buds, just right for Easter trade. All sizes in the following prices: 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each.

Azalea Indica

In large plants we have the following, full of buds: Bernard Andre Alba (pure white), Niobe (pure white), HeleneThelemann (rose, light pink), Memoire de L. Van Houtte, large flowers (double pink), Empress of India, large flowering (double variegated), Dr. Moore (double pink), Mme. Van der Cruyssen (best of all the pink), Apollo (red), De Schryveriana (double variegated), $1.50, $2.00, $2.50 and $3.00. In smaller sizes we have the following varieties, full of buds: Deutsche Perle (double white), Vervaeneana (double variegated), a well known standard variety, Apollo (red), Simon Mardner (double pink), De Schryveriana (double variegated), Empress of India (double variegated), all well budded, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1 25 and $1.50. Professeur Wolters $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. This is a well known, bright, variegated variety. Mme. Van der Cruyssen (pink), 60c, 75c, $1.00 and $1 25. In Niobe (double white), have only the $1.00 and $1.25 sizes to offer, the smaller plants having dropped their buds. When we are out of one color, we send the next similar color: also, if we are out of the size ordered, we send the next size either above or below the price mentioned.

Easter Lilies, Lilium Multiflorum, the genuine Japanese Easter Lily, directly imported by us. We have a friend in Japan who looks after our interests there. He picks out for us only the good, healthy ones, and marks them while they are growing, the 10-in. bulbs, and therefore he ships to us the cream of the plants of Japan. We have lilies this year to burn; can supply, if nothing happens, every customer and others who want lilies. If you see them growing in our greenhouses you must all admit they are "crackerjacks." We sell them cheap, too. Where other florists get 15c per bud, we only charge you 10c per bud, for plants in 6-in. pots, having 5, 8, 10 and more buds to the plant. Plants under 5 buds, 12c per bud, 6-in. pots.

The 9 to 10 Japanese lily bulbs were nearly a failure last fall, owing to the bad weather. While other florists and some dealers only received 20 to 30 per cent of their orders, we were one of the fortunate, receiving the full amount of our order (5000) from one grower in Japan. No joke when I tell you our lilies were never so nice and perfect as this year. Orders for lilies only positively will not be filled; if you want the lilies it will be necessary for your order to call for other stock also.

Tournesol Tulips, best double tulips, variegated, three bulbs in a pot, $1.80 per dozen pots; $14.00 per 100.

Begonia, new improved Erfordii, 5-in. pots, $2.50 per dozen. Flambeau, 5 in., $2.00 per dozen.

Primula Obconica, 5-in., $2 00 to $2.50 dozen.

Cineraria Hybrida, best plants, 5¼ to 6-in. pots, for Easter, at $2.00, $3.00, $4.00, $5.00 to $6 00 per dozen.

Spiraea Gladstone. We have a house full in very fine condition, in bud now, just right for Easter, large plants, full of buds. Remember Gladstone is scarce this year, owing to the dry weather in Holland last year, but we were fortunate to have received enough to supply all of our customers; price, 6 to 7-in. pots, 50c, 75c, $1.00.

Ipomoea Noctiflora, purest white moonflower, for which we have a world-wide reputation, now ready, 2½-in. pots, $5.00 per 100.

Hyacinths, four best colors, King of the Blues (dark blue), Grand Maitre (light blue), Gertrude (best pink), La Grandesse (best white), right for Easter, in cold frame, 4-in. pots, 10c to 12c.

Murillo Tulips, 3 bulbs in a 4-in. pot, $2.00 per dozen pots; all bulb stock is strictly our own importation, now in cold frame covered with litter and will bloom in three weeks after bringing them into the greenhouse.

Daffodil Von Sion, best double, three bulbs, $2.50 per dozen.

Areca Lutescens, 5-in. pots, 3 plants in a pot, 35c.

Ficus Elastica (rubbers), 5½ to 6-in. pots, 25c to 30c.

Amerpohlii, very fine, 6-in., 50c to 75c.

Asparagus Sprengeri, big stock, 3-in., 7c; 4-in., 10c.

All goods must travel at purchaser's risk. Cash with order, please. No references.

Please state if you want stock shipped in or out of pots.

The Market.

Business is good, even though the weather has been unfavorable for some time. Last week we not only had the coldest weather of the season, but we had about fourteen inches of snow at the same time; it was the most severe storm in years. Carnations are about equal to the demand and bring 2 to 3 cents. Sweet peas are quite plentiful, also Romans. Roses have been scarce and bring 4 to 5 cents for shorts, up to 10 cents for the better stock. The demand for roses is greater than the supply.

Various Notes.

Julius Niednagel & Sons have been kept busy right along. They look for a busy Easter. A small blaze at their residence a few days ago caused quite a little excitement for a time, but no serious damage resulted. Had the wind been in a different direction there would have been a serious fire.

Wm. Blackman Floral Co. has put in a new ice-box at the store. It is a beauty and is quite large.

Ben Kramer says business is fine. He has been using lots of sweet peas and makes some handsome designs. He has been a little under the weather, but stays at the store right along.

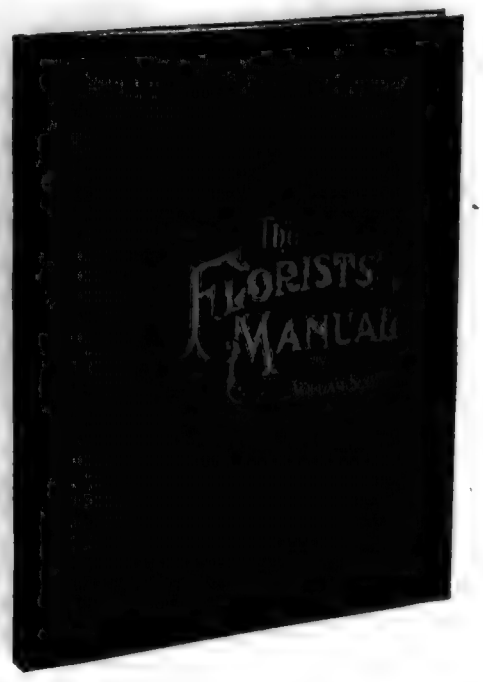
Austin Wallace has been cutting great quantities of good sweet peas and sells them all. His lettuce is fine, too.

J. C. Elsperman's health is not so good this winter. His business has been excellent.

Nellie Goodge is back at work again.

Carl Zeidler reports a good trade.

Henry Seymour always gets his share of the trade and has no kick coming.



Louis Fritsch says his carnations are doing fine. Business at his west side store has been variable, according to the weather.

Royston & Fenton are off crop with roses and do not have near enough for the demand. Mr. Royston had an attack of the grip, which kept him in for a week. His wife was down with it, also. E. L. F.

WEST CAMBRIDGE, MASS.—John R. McKenzie, who has been suffering all winter with a disabled foot, has now almost recovered and is attending to business as formerly.

LAFAYETTE, IND.—F. Dorner & Sons Co. says that the call for cuttings of Pink Delight is extremely heavy, but that there is one good feature of the variety that has not yet been commented on: the variety makes a quick, well-shaped growth and April cuttings of it will give as good results as one is accustomed to get from February or March cuttings of other sorts.

BISMARCK, N. D.—R. D. Hoskins, of the Hoskins Floral Co., who built a substantial and finely equipped greenhouse last summer at the corner of Third street and Avenue E, has been so encouraged by the increase in his business that he has decided to erect two more houses. The glass has already been ordered and the work of construction will begin as early as possible in the spring. The boiler has sufficient capacity for the heating of this additional space. Karl Melby is in charge of the present greenhouse. Carnations and a general stock are grown. The firm also has a store in the Tribune block.

Greenhouse Heating.

Be prepared for a coal shortage after April 1. There may be no closing of the mines because of labor troubles, but the coal operators predict a shut-down.

A STORE AND GREENHOUSE.

Will you please inform me how many 2-inch pipes, for water heating, will be needed in my store and greenhouse, of which I enclose a diagram? I should like to run the pipes on both sides. I am using one 3-inch pipe for a main. I wish to maintain a temperature of 60 degrees in zero weather. The buildings run east and west. I am located in eastern Missouri. M. H.

The sketch shows the store to be really a conservatory, with a vertical glass wall eight feet high on three sides, the other wall being the brick wall of the adjacent dwelling. This house is 20x25 feet. The other greenhouse joins this at one corner. It is 15x40 feet, with a glass wall three and one-half feet high all around. The boiler is located in the cellar of the dwelling, near the northeast corner of the conservatory, while the greenhouse joins the conservatory at the southeast corner. The conservatory has a door at the west end, and there is a door at the east end of the greenhouse, in addition to the one which leads into the conservatory.

A 3-inch main will answer for both rooms. From this two 2½-inch flows should be taken off in the conservatory and carried on the walls around to the front door, where each should be joined to a return coil of eight 2-inch pipes. Two 2½-inch flows should also be carried into the greenhouse and run on the walls around to the door, or they can be carried on the purlins. Each of these flows should be connected with a coil of six 2-inch returns. The returns from the greenhouse and from the coil on the south side of the conservatory should pass along the east wall of the conservatory, where they will supply the needed heat.

WARM AIR FOR VENTILATION.

We intend putting up another house, 20x75 feet, and should like to get your opinion regarding my idea of ventilating. Our boiler has 1,200 feet of radiating surface, the top being two feet six inches below the level of the floors. It has a 14-inch steel stack. Do you think we would save any fuel if we were to carry out the following plan? We would insert a 6-inch steel pipe in the center of the stack, close to the boiler, run it up about three feet and connect it with two elbows, one leading in at the bottom with a cold air shaft from outside the house, while the upper one would be connected with pipes such as are used for hot air furnaces and these would be run under the trays in addition to the hot water pipes. Then, instead of having ventilators such as are now used, we would have a perfectly tight roof, with about five 12-inch pipe ventilators on the ridge, each having a damper, with a swivel on top and a weather vane on each, so as to turn the mouth from the wind.

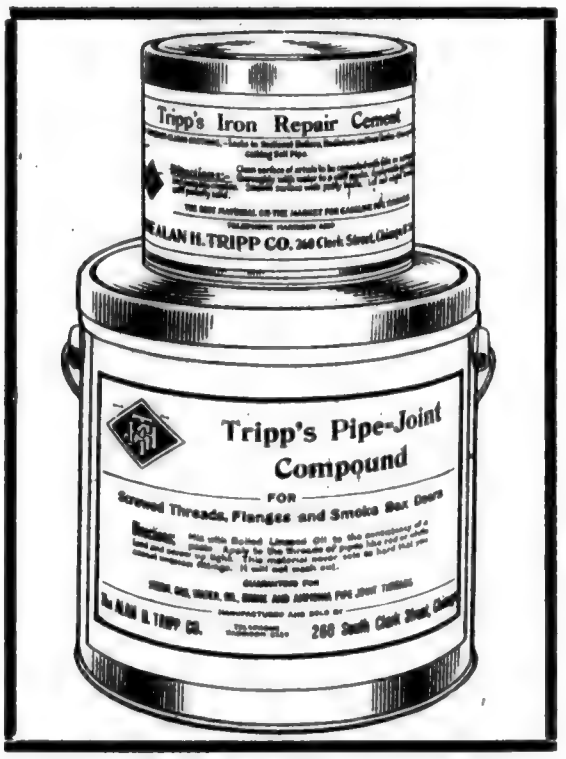
It appears to me that this would give a circulation of pure, warm air all the time, and would also use the waste heat, without chilling the water in the boiler.

A. W. F. & S.

If an attempt is made to carry out the plan proposed, it will most likely result in a far greater failure than with most hot-air heating, which is really what this amounts to, although of course it is also designed for ventilating purposes. It will be difficult to secure any circulation at all, especially against the wind, and taking it all in all it will be found a poor substitute for ventilating sash. If a good circulation could be secured, the ridge ventilators described might answer fairly well, but even then it would generally be better to take in a small amount of fresh air directly from outside, rather than attempt to pass it through the smoke flue.



VAPOR ON SHED WALLS.

Last summer I built a shed, 10x60 feet, at the end of my greenhouses. The shed is covered with tar paper or felt. There is a glass partition between the shed and the greenhouses. I am located in West Virginia, and use gas for fuel, heating with steam. The boiler is in a pit at the end of the shed. The pit is eight feet deep and has an asbestos board floor over it. No fumes escape. There is a 3-inch flow and a 2-inch return at the high side of the shed, which is a lean-to.

Now, my trouble is this: Starting about three feet from the flow pipe, and on down the roof and sides, the boards sweat to such an extent that they are all warped and bulged and out of place. This is worse in a time of severe cold than in moderate weather. I think it is caused by the gas. I thought of running a steam pipe on the lower side of the shed, where the wall is four feet high from the foundation. I have a neighbor, a florist, who uses gas for fuel and has a hot water heating system. Though he has a shed with a tin roof, he has none of the trouble which I have been describing. My shed is comfortably warm and there are no leaks in the heating pipes.

F. C. S.

From the statement made, there is no reason for looking for any other cause than because the air is heavily charged with moisture and, coming in contact with the cold boards, is condensed. The fact that gas is used for fuel has nothing to do with causing the condensation of watery vapor. The very fact that the air is quite warm in the room naturally increases its water-holding capacity and tends to increase the trouble from condensation. Merely providing for a change of air in the room, by means of a ventilator in the roof or by windows in opposite ends of the shed, will largely prevent the trouble.

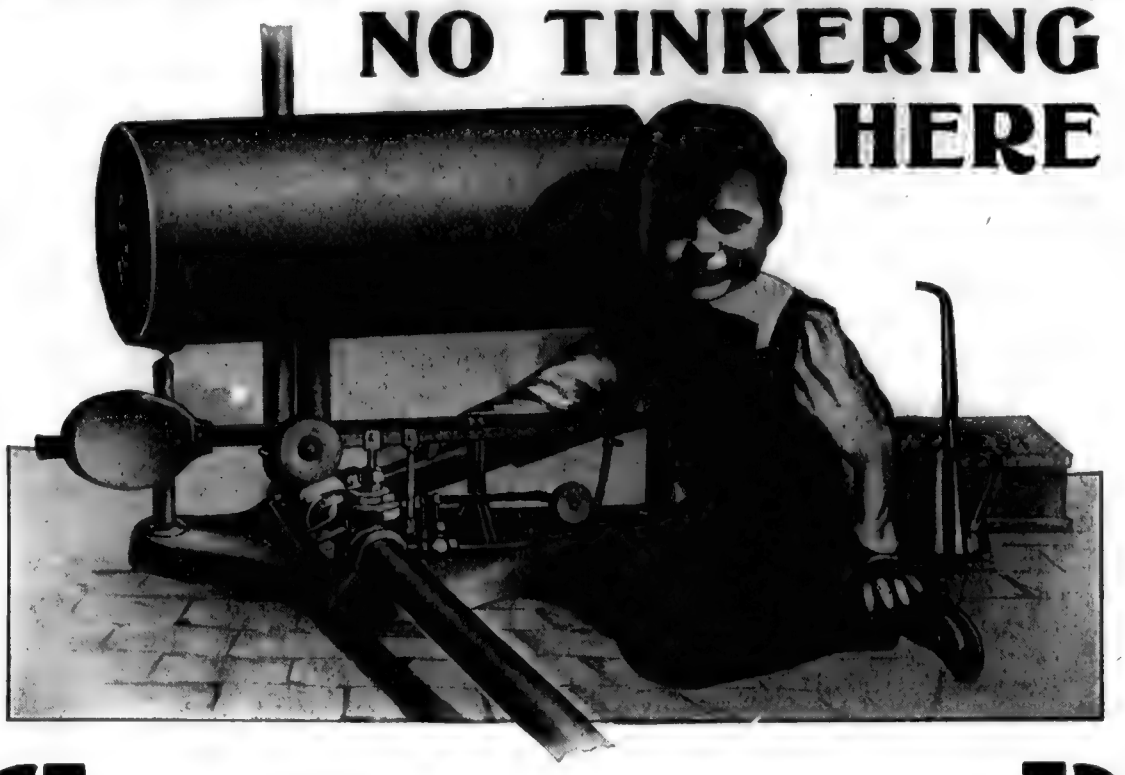
PROVIDENCE.

The Market.



Business, which showed the results of the commencement of Lent, picked up last week in an astonishing manner and everyone was busy. There were few public or social functions, yet the demand for cut flowers of all kinds was far in excess of the preceding week. Funeral work holds good. Bulb stock has shown a vast improvement during the week, and carnations, roses and violets are plentiful. The violets are becoming almost a glut on the market, so much so that the annual cutting by department stores and druggists has set in. Saturday the price with the cutters was 15 cents for bunches of twenty-five, both single and double. The florists maintain an even price of 25 to 35 cents for bunches of twenty-five.

Horticultural Society.

The annual banquet of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society was held on the evening of February 16, in the parlors of the Mathewson Street Auditorium, at which more than 150 were in attendance. In the gathering were guests from leading horticultural organizations in near-by cities, including a delegation of eight, headed by President James Robertson, from the Newport Horticultural Society. One of the pleasing events of the evening was the attendance of the secretary, Charles W. Smith, for the first time since about Thanksgiving.

At the business meeting that was held previous to the banquet, six members were elected. Joseph E. C. Farnham, one of the park commissioners of Providence, officiated as toastmaster, being introduced by the president, E. H. Burlingame. Mr. Farnham's ready wit and stream of humorous anecdotes kept the gathering in excellent humor. The

The committee in charge of the banquet, which was one of the most successful ever held by the society, was composed of Prof. A. E. Stene, Thomas Hope and J. Franklin Collins. On the tables were pyramids of Rhode Island greening apples, contributed by T. K. Windsor, and large bouquets of carnations. A jardiniere of cattleyas graced the speakers' table.

Robert Montgomery is still growing a house of Bride and Bridesmaid, but he finds they do not sell in competition with Killarney and they will be dropped another season. Killarney and White Killarney are grown in quantity and look first-class. The white seems even more vigorous than the pink. Richmond is grown and is well liked. My Maryland is not considered a desirable winter rose, producing little in midwinter unless grown very warm. All roses grown here are grafted. Those now in their third year, which were replanted, are doing extremely well. As a side feature, and a recreative one, Mr. Montgomery has an aviary containing a fine selection of gold, silver and English pheasants, as well as other feathered fowl. James Wheeler's new commercial establishment will almost adjoin Mr. Montgomery's.

servatories, under the master hand of Alexander Montgomery, is always in such excellent condition that a mere descriptive paragraph conveys but a faint idea of its general vigor. Suffice it to say that we have never seen the numerous rose houses here carrying plants in more perfect health. Killarney and White Killarney, Waban variety, are more largely grown than any other variety, there being 50,000 plants of the two combined. A block 40x650 in the largest house, which is 40x950, is a magnificent sight—a veritable sea of buds. From 3,000 plants in part of this particular house 65,000 flowers were cut up to December 1 last. American Beauties are not grown so largely as in years gone by. A space of 40x300 is, however, still devoted to them. At the time of our visit these were making tremendous growth, but flowers were rather scarce. Richmond is largely grown and, as a scarlet rose, is well liked. Some Bride and Bridesmaid are still grown, but this will be the last year for these good old standbys. Some My Maryland is grown. It carried some nicely colored flowers, but does not produce like Killarney in winter. As a summer rose, however, Mr. Montgomery thinks it will prove valuable. Of Killarney some strong plants, carrying shoots up to fifteen feet long of the climbing pink variety, were noted. A climbing white has also appeared. In each Killarney house the white variety seemed somewhat more vigorous than the pink one and the flowers were more full. Some of the original wooden houses, erected in 1870, are planted with Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri, others with roses.

John Barr is a well known grower of both plants and cut flowers, selling his produce at Park Street Market No. 2. Three large houses are devoted to carnations. These were all carrying tremendous crops of high grade flowers. The principal varieties grown are Queen, very fine here, almost equal to White Perfection; White Lawson, White Perfection, Winona, a great producer; Fenn, Lawson, hard to beat as grown here; Winsor, of which we noted a pure white sport, and Bay State. There are also considerable batches of some good seedlings of Mr. Barr's raising. One, a variegated, is extra good and in strong demand at the stores. There were also good crimson, light pink and cerise seedlings. A large block of Pink Delight was headed back for cuttings. It will be heavily grown next season, being highly thought of. Cyclamens are a special feature here. Several thousands were grown in 5-inch pots—splendid, sturdy plants, which there is no trouble in disposing of. A good batch of these are being grown cool for Easter trade. Hydrangeas are the only other plants grown. Some thousands of these will be bloomed for Memorial day, varying from plants in 4½-inch pots to plants in 8-inch pots; better stock it would be hard to find. Everything here is kept in immaculate condition and it is a delight to visit such a place. W. N. CRAIG.

YONKERS, N. Y.

An interesting meeting of the new organization, the Yonkers Horticultural Society, was held Wednesday evening, February 16. President Bennet was in the chair and all the other officers were present. Several new members were admitted.

As a prize had been offered at the last meeting by Peter Macdonald, for the best collection of one dozen carnations of any variety, a large number of fine carnations were shown. The judges appointed by the president were Mr. Nichol, A. Macdonald and W. Wright, who awarded the prizes as follows: First, W. H. Waite; second, J. Goff; honorable mention, R. Cummings and Mr. Cochrane. H. Scott also received honorable mention for a fine exhibit of calla blooms.

It was decided that the society would hold a dinner at Park Hill inn on the evening of March 10, for the members and their friends.

President Bennet read an able paper on "American Beauty Roses," after which he invited a general discussion by the members, several of whom took part, among them being Mr. Waite, Mr. Nichol, Mr. Mooney and Mr. Lahm.

The next meeting will be held on Wednesday evening, March 2, when it is expected there will be a fine exhibit of roses, as President Bennet has offered a prize for the best collection of one dozen of any variety.

Secretary Waite will read a paper on "Gardeners and the Gardening Profession" at the next meeting.

Campbell's Patent Sulphur Vaporizer

Extract from paper read by John H. Dunlop before a convention of the Canadian Horticultural Association: "Campbell's Sulphur Vaporizer is an English patent and a trifle expensive, but very effective, and eliminates almost all of the danger of ignition. We are using eight of them at present with excellent results."

WAYSIDE NOTES.

Paul M. Olm, of Bath, Me., is around after a severe attack of nephritis, which at one time threatened to end his successful career, but native grit and a good partner pulled him through, to the gratification of his many friends. He fortunately has good help, trained by himself, who did well during his long siege of illness. He has plans for an addition of 8,000 square feet of glass, the material to be supplied by the Lord & Burnham Co. in the spring.

Ernest Saunders, at Lewiston, Me., has a new greenhouse, 33x600 feet, adjoining the office and store, and it makes a big impression upon visitors, who take great pleasure in strolling through it at this season. Everything is kept clean and attractive.

Adam Sekenger, of Bangor, Me., has planted large numbers of May flowering tulips outdoors for Decoration day business. He reports a steadily increasing shipping trade to the most remote places in the lumber country. Lilies look fine all through this section and will be in good supply for Easter.

Portland, Me., can boast of six flower stores within two blocks, two adjoining each other. Competition brings out the best efforts to show off the stock to advantage. All appear to be doing well. Fine stock is grown by the Minott Co. and by Niles Nelson. At the Minott establishment Hiram Dyer is the capable grower.

Chatterton Warburton, of Fall River, Mass., sent his son to represent him at the meeting of the A. C. S. at Pittsburg. He believes in letting the young men share in the benefits derived at these conventions. M.

"A PERFECT GREENHOUSE HOSE

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

THE MASTIN AUTOMATIC WHITEWASH AND SPRAYING MACHINE IS RELIABLE, PRACTICAL AND DURABLE

The tank is made of galvanized sheet steel, and in brass.
The pump is of brass throughout, simple and powerful.
The mixing device keeps the contents of the tank well stirred up from start to finish.
When the machine is filled to within six inches of the top, a few strokes of the pump will compress enough air in the tank to produce a continuous mist-like spray for 15 minutes.
All parts are made to gauge and may be had for repairs.
Ask your dealer about our Extension Hose, Extension Rods, and the Mastin Whitewash Nozzle for Bordeaux mixture.

NEW ORLEANS.

The Market.

We are coming to the end of a winter which has been bad for the sale of plants. As early and steady cold weather has nipped the vegetation in our beautiful gardens, nobody wanted to buy fresh stock before the warm season would open again. This will soon come and business, no doubt, will be much better then. In cut flowers and decorations the season has been exceptionally good, Christmas, New Year's and the carnival season creating a big demand for cut flowers, better than for many years previous. Several of our local growers have been growing and disposing of their stock to the full capacity of their greenhouses. Also the importation of flowers from other localities has been more extensive than ever. At the markets nothing is being done so far, but it is a matter of only a short time before business will open.

Club Meeting.

Vice-President Herman Doescher was chairman of the last meeting of the New Orleans Horticultural Society. Nobody blamed A. Alost, the president, for not being present, as the wind was blowing at that time a regular blizzard, and the automobile bus, lately running from his place to town, would not have been safe enough to carry him back home. The mercury went down to 22 degrees above and the florists were wondering what it must be when it is that much below zero, as reported from other places. Still, some fine samples of cucumbers were brought for inspection by H. Doescher. The quality is right, but the prices are not quite satisfactory. As usual, the Metairie Ridge Nurseries and U. J. Virgin had on exhibition some good home-grown flowers. This cold spell will, no doubt, be the last of this winter, and now let us look for a lovely opening of the spring season. M. M. L.

Dover, N. H.—Charles L. Howe, proprietor of the Garrison Hill greenhouses, has been ill, but is now reported as convalescent.

Last Days of Our Special Sash Offer

If you do not take advantage of it now, you will have to wait 365 days for another chance to try one or five of our Sash That Last at a special tryout price. This is the offer, but it's no good after February 28th.

We will send you one unglazed sash for One Dollar, you pay freight; or five sash for Five Dollars, and we make an actual freight allowance not exceeding 40c per cwt. Why not take advantage of this offer for five sash for Five Dollars and order as many more as you require at the net trade price, which is $1.12½—a decidedly low price for so good a sash?

If you don't think they are worth the money, send them back and we will return your money.

Order today. "In a day or two" will be too late.
